

Reagan tries to unravel tax bill snarls

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Last year Gov. Reagan and Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti got together for a strange political marriage which skeptics said would never last.

Reagan a conservative Republican, and Moretti a liberal Democrat, worked together successfully to enact passage of SB90, a billion dollar property tax relief-school finance measure. The bill reflected a genuine compromise between widely differing approaches to solving two critical social problems.

But the skeptics appear to have been right, and there now are what may be irreconcilable differences between the one-time partners.

This week the administration will sponsor introduction of an omnibus bill designed to repair the considerable quantity of technical errors and imprecise language in SB90 which are making it a nightmare for already apprehensive officials of local government.

Moretti, in recent weeks, has declined to participate, or allow the First of two parts.

Assembly staff to participate, in the laborious effort to "clean up" the 1972 legislation. Instead, he plans to introduce a measure of his own addressed specifically to school finance problems.

Reagan and Moretti, like all politicians, had for years been promising relief to California's property taxpayers; both supported the concept of relieving local government's reliance on the property tax by shifting that reliance to broader-based state revenues.

But Reagan said the effort should be accompanied by some sort of restraint on the capacity of local government to develop new programs and services or expand existing ones, thereby replacing with new revenue the taxpayers' burden which had been assumed by the state.

The speaker yielded, last year, but he extracted in exchange Reagan's approval of a much larger school appropriation request than the governor felt the schools could justify.

Opposition by Senate Democrats forced Reagan to accept a still higher amount of state money for public schools.

It was acknowledged that SB90 was not perfect legislation, and that a clean-up bill or bills would be required this year. But the problems appear to have exceeded even the most pessimistic outlooks.

Kenneth F. Hall, chief deputy director of the state Department of Finance who is heading the SB90 patch job, said in an interview there are three main problem areas requiring repair.

One is in the area of school finance, another involves the tax rate limitation placed on local governments, and the third has to do with a provision in SB90 requiring the state to pay the cost of any new or expanded programs it imposes on local government.

All three problem areas involve enormous complexities and include hundreds of unintended hardships for individual counties, cities, school districts and special districts. The clean-up bill Hall has put together, as a consequence, is likely to be considerably longer than the $9-page statute which was signed by the governor last December 18.

Hall acknowledges there are political reasons for putting all the remedies in one bill.

"First of all," he says "SB90 was a single package so it seems logical that the clean-up bill also should be a single package. But also, to be candid, we feel that having all the areas covered in one bill will make it difficult for legislators who oppose one part of the measure to reject it all."

Moretti responds that he objects to the tax rate limitation in the first place, and he feels that if his staff succeeds in removing the technical bugs from SB90 the corrected language will be used by Reagan in his widely publicized effort to impose a similar revenue restriction on state government.

In addition, he says, the school finance problems appear generally to have been ironed out, and the governor's approach threatens to retard the correction of the school problems because there are likely to be disputes about the proposed corrections in other areas.

Hall acknowledges that Moretti may be correct about the school problems, and acknowledges there is an acute time problem.

Local officials are now at work preparing 1973-74 budgets. If they do not know how much state money

Thieu heads for talks in Southland

By WILLIAM BROOM
From Our National Bureau

SAN CLEMENTE — South Vietnam's President Thieu arrives in California today for a five-day state visit seeking additional life insurance for his country, which the United States fought the longest war in its history to keep alive.

Thieu's visit will dramatize the end of U.S. military presence in Indochina and marks the beginning of Phase 2 of the Nixon administration's efforts to assure peace and political stability in the troubled area.

For the next two days, Thieu and President Nixon will hold discussions behind the walls of the western White House on a serene bluff overlooking the Pacific. Presidential Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said they would cover "the postwar, economic, political and military relationship between the two countries."

Few surprises are expected in the communique which will be issued Tuesday at the conclusion. Its broad outline is settled.

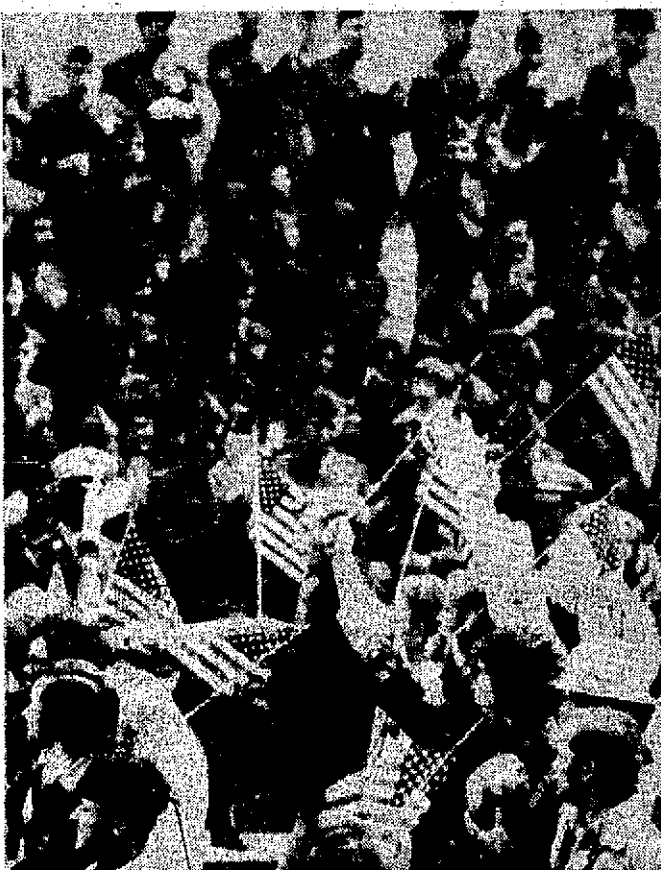

While the United States has withdrawn from the war, it has pledged to fulfill certain responsibilities that must be met if President Nixon's "peace with honor" is to retain any meaning. These come in two central areas: The reconstruction of the extensive destruction caused by nearly seven years of heavy fighting and American bombing, and the resuscitation of Vietnam's economy, grotesquely distorted by a 20-year war.

Thieu, Saigon sources said Friday, also will exert pressure for firmer definition of U.S. military support in preserving the shaky truce that followed the Paris accords signed in January. While these brought about withdrawal of all U.S. troops and the repatriation of American war prisoners, they have not ended the fighting.

President Nixon laid the groundwork for Thieu's visit during his Thursday night television report to the nation. In what was interpreted as an effort to rally support for continued U.S. support of South Vietnam, the President praised the American public for remaining steadfast throughout the unpopular war.

NIXON praised "the great majority of Americans...who despite an unprecedented barrage of criticism from a small but vocal minority, stood firm for peace with honor...stood firm against those who advocated peace at any price

A CIVILIAN CONTINGENT lifts American flags in salute as it passes a Marine unit on reviewing stand during New York City's "Home with Honor" parade Saturday.

Returned vets saluted in Broadway parade

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tens of thousands of soldiers and civilians paraded up Broadway Saturday to honor the return of U.S. servicemen from Vietnam. The tribute was twice as long as its planners predicted.

Billed as a "Home with Honor Day" for Vietnam veterans, the parade honored the millions of Americans who served in the Southeast Asia conflict and the almost 55,000 U.S. servicemen who died there. Booming greeted antiwar marches.

There were more than 50,000 marchers and 50 musical groups, including military bands and bagpipes. Some 100,000 persons lined the parade route. Four persons were arrested.

The parade began shortly before noon and ended four hours later, about two hours longer than scheduled.

Members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War marched in the parade carrying signs reading "Jobs for All Vets," "Unemployment is Nixon's Conspiracy," and "Honor My-Lai?"

As they approached the reviewing stands along Central Park, 1,000 Vietnam veterans in the stands turned their backs on the parade unit and the crowds around the stands booed and shouted insults at them.

The VVAW marchers responded by shouting back: "You can't turn your back on the truth."

Army and Navy units from New York, Virginia and Washington were followed by scores of groups representing veterans, patriotic, ethnic, fraternal and religious organizations in the march in bright, sunny spring weather.

Because it was Saturday and offices along the route were closed, there was no tickertape or confetti traditional for Broadway parades.

William Connell, deputy chief inspector of police, estimated spectators at about 60,000.

About 30 Vietnam veterans, members of the American Servicemen's Union, demonstrated a block from the reviewing stand. They carried signs reading "Vets Demand Compensation, Not Benefit Cuts" and listing such demands as $2,500 compensation for lost time in Vietnam and "Decent Jobs at Decent Wages." They chanted "you can't eat honor" and engaged in shouting matches with spectators. Leon Daniels, a spokesman for the group, said the parade "covers up the real issues of high unemployment for blacks and Puerto Ricans and poor housing and jobs for Vietnam era vets."

"It's a slap in the face and part of President Nixon's 'starve with honor' program," Daniels said.

Martha says Twisters kill 4, injure over 270

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Martha Mitchell, claiming it is "a damned lie" that her husband was involved in any way in the Watergate bugging affair, accused the administration late Saturday of trying to make him the scapegoat in desperation.

The wife of former Atty Gen. John N. Mitchell made the charges in a telephone conversation from her New York City apartment shortly after Senate sources said that convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. has testified under oath that he was in daily contact with Mitchell last spring.

"I think this administration has turned completely against my husband," she said. "In other words, they're desperate and I will not under any circumstances permit them to pin it on my husband."

Mrs. Mitchell was unable to identify those she accused of trying to make her husband "the whipping boy" for the June 17 break-in and bugging of Democratic National Headquarters in the Watergate Building where the Mitchells once lived.

"My husband laid eyes on McCord only once, and I only met him once," Mrs. Mitchell said, as her husband has maintained on numerous occasions before McCord's alleged testimony was reported earlier in the day.

McCord, who was chief of security for the Nixon re-election campaign organization at the time of the Watergate incident, was said to have told a special Senate investigating committee last Wednesday that he talked almost every day last spring with Mitchell about Republican security matters.

Mitchell resigned as attorney general in March 1972 to become manager of Nixon's campaign. He quit that post about two weeks after the Watergate break-in.

"It's a god damn lie that my husband knew him (McCord) well," Mrs. Mitchell said. "He didn't know him in the slightest. I think McCord is a double agent."

She declined to elaborate on the "double agent" charge.

"They are not going to take my husband and sacrifice him," Mrs.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Tornadoes danced across central Georgia and into South Carolina Saturday night, killing at least four persons, injuring more than 270 others in Georgia and dotting the countryside with patches of destruction.

Fatalities were reported in Athens, Monroe and Conyers, Ga., where twisters touched down, and at least one person was killed near Abbeville, S.C.

Heavy damage was sustained in Clayton County in south metropolitan Atlanta. Torn trees and snapped power lines caused road hazards and communications breakdowns.

Authorities reported a child was killed near Abbeville, S.C., and an unidentified woman died at a suburban Atlanta hospital.

Officials said 20 persons were admitted to DeKalb General Hospital in Atlanta's bedroom city of Decatur. Most of the injured were from Clayton County and nearby Rockdale County.

In Conyers, the county seat of Rockdale, at least 50 persons were treated for injuries.

A tornado touched down near Athens and destroyed the 50 homes in the Wonderland Trailer Park and damaged another trailer park on the outskirts of the college town. Authorities said one woman was killed. At least 88 persons were treated at Athens hospitals. Two were injured seriously.

Monroe, Ga., authorities said one man lost his life when his home was demolished by the twister. At least 100 persons were treated at Walton County Hospital in Monroe.

Mobile homes across the state in an area of north central Georgia were demolished or damaged. Monroe authorities reported seven homes demolished. The National Guard was called out in Monroe to help rescue workers in digging out operations.

Twisters touched down in at least six places along Interstate 20, a major east-west route through Conyers. They caused extensive damage to an industrial park, a housing project and numerous homes in cutting a swath a half mile wide through some sections of town.

Meanwhile, heavy rains across

While this afternoon is expected to be sunny, forecasters added, the clouds will prevent temperatures in the Long Beach area from rising above 67.

Skies will begin clearing tonight, said the weather service, bringing warmer weather Monday, when the high is expected to reach about 75. Gusty winds also will move into the Southland Monday, forecasters said.

much of the South Saturday sent new torrents of water streaming into the raging Mississippi River. More than 600 miles of the river were flooded, forcing hundreds of families to evacuate their homes and swamping nearly 6.3 million acres of farmland.

Families were evacuated from flood-threatened areas along the Mississippi in Illinois, Missouri and Louisiana and hundreds more kept watch on the rising waters. The Missouri River also was on the rampage as it swept east toward the swollen Mississippi.

The Army Corps of Engineers said the Mississippi was reported as much as 12 miles wide in areas north of Memphis, Tenn.

Report Gray out is denied

From Our National Bureau

SAN CLEMENTE — The western White House said Saturday that news stories speculating that President Nixon has abandoned hope the Senate will confirm L. Patrick Gray III as FBI director are "totally false."

The Independent, Press-Telegram and other Ridder newspapers reported in Saturday editions that an alternate to Gray already has been offered the job because the White House feels the nominee can't win the necessary Senate support.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen has been offered Gray's job, according to the Saturday report filed in this newspaper by Washington correspondent Albert Eisele.

"The President supports Mr. Gray," said assistant White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren. "The support remains unchanged."

WARREN'S statement came a few hours after the President met at his San Clemente residence with Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst, who oversees FBI operations as head of the Justice Department.

However, Justice Department sources in Washington said Saturday that Petersen still was the leading candidate to replace Gray, and that John E. Ingersoll, director of the department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, also has been approached about the job in case Petersen's name meets Senate opposition.

The sources added that Petersen was offered the job last weekend while playing golf with Kleindienst at a Washington golf course.

Batter up time again

Major league baseball opens this week with a new look in the American League rules but an old look about the pennant races. The Oakland A's are favored to repeat in the AL where the revolutionary new designated pinch hitter rule is expected to add some punch to the attacks and juice up interest among the fans. In the National League the defending champion Cincinnati Reds hold the favorite's role.

Your Independent, Press-Telegram sports section gets a jump on the season today with complete rundowns on both leagues, team by team, season schedules, a review of 1972 and much, much more.

Nixon honors moviemaker

Combined News Services

It was the first time a U.S. President had attended a movie-industry event, and President Nixon came to honor an old friend, film director John Ford.

When the American Film Institute announced that it would present Ford with its first Life Achievement award, the President said he would be pleased to attend the presentation.

"He's my favorite director," Nixon said of the maker of "The Informer," "Stagecoach," "Grapes of Wrath," "The Quiet Man" and scores of other films. The two men have been friends since Nixon's early years in politics.

The President brought another honor to present to Ford: the Medal of Freedom, the country's highest civilian award.

Danny Kaye was host, assisted by veteran Ford stars John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara and James Stewart. The program featured film clips depicting Ford's achievements and music by the Marine Corps Band.

Not enough

Mustachioed Joe Casserly rode his red, white and blue hot-air balloon, "American Spirit," to an altitude of 27,800 feet above Grand Rivers, Ky., Saturday, but failed in an attempt to get a world record.

The 33-year-old balloonist, who nonetheless celebrated his feat by downing a bottle of wine upon landing, said air temperatures weren't quite right for the attempt. He said he would try again later.

He had hoped to ascend to an altitude of 40,000 — topping by 4,000 feet the world mark set by balloonist Julian Nott of Hereford, England.

Casserly said he did set a record for balloons the size of "American spirit" — which is 50 feet in diameter and holds 55,000 cubic feet of hot air — but a malfunction in his barograph denied him official recognition.

Up and about

Retired columnist Walter Lippmann, 83, whose heart stopped briefly two weeks ago, was reported "up and about" and took a morning stroll Saturday in New York. The Pulitzer Prize-winning writer was discharged from the hospital Friday.

Snags

Soviet and American diplomats said Saturday in Washington trade and security problems could upset tentative plans for Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev to visit the United States in June.

The major problem, according to the diplomats, is whether Congress will grant the Russians preferential most-favored-nation trade treatment, as called for in the Soviet-American agreement last October.

They said the security question, which has received less public attention, is based on fears of possible unpleasant or insulting demonstrations by some Jewish groups.

Historic voice

Marie Campbell, who recited "May Had a Little Lamb" on the first talking record produced by Thomas Edison, died Saturday in Toms River, N.J. She was 103.

Reared in Menlo Park, where Edison did much of his work, Mrs. Campbell was chosen to make the record because her father, the late Theodore Carman, worked with the inventor. The original record and a recording of Mrs. Campbell's voice made on her 102nd birthday are in the National Archives.

Slippery

Television personality Ed McMahon was resting comfortably in Miami's Parkway Hospital Saturday after being treated for lacerations when he slipped and fell Friday night while boarding a yacht in choppy seas at Cat Cay Island in the Bahamas.

The 50-year-old announcer on the Johnny Carson Show suffered a cut above his right eye, a scraped nose and bruised arm. The Coast Guard flew him from the remote Bahamian island to Miami and he was taken by ambulance to the hospital.

Big Viet-American family doing just fine

FT. BARRY, Calif. (AP) — If any of the last American soldiers to return from Vietnam are worried about how their Vietnamese wives will adjust to American life, they should listen to Army Sgt. Robert Bolia.

Bolia says he has settled down to a relatively worry-free life at this Army post at the foot of Golden Gate Bridge with his Vietnamese wife, her mother and the couple's children — all 14 of them. "There's really been very few problems. The children were overwhelmed by it but enjoyed the move," Bolia said in an interview.

Bolia served in Vietnam from 1964-68, where he met and married a Vietnamese nurse, Nga Bui, taking as his own her four children from a previous marriage. Besides having two of their own children, the couple adopted eight children left fatherless when Mrs. Bolia's brother, a Vietnamese marine, was killed.

There are nine boys and five girls, ranging in age from 1 to 20.

"If nothing else, the climate is different and they've had to wear more clothes," the 38-year-old father said. "It's a little too cold here to wear Vietnamese clothes."

SGT. ROBERT BOLIA RELAXES WITH FAMILY IN MONTEREY

He said his wife and 56-year-old mother-in-law have adjusted well to life here, but neither speaks English very well and they tend to maintain more of their Vietnamese habits than the children. "My wife really hasn't converted that much. She may wear Western-style clothing, but erratic styles are not really her thing. My mother-in-law never really adapted. She continues to wear Vietnamese clothes and probably always will. She just makes them out of warmer material."

Bolia said his wife cooks American food for the children, but Mrs. Bolia and her mother eat Vietnamese food. He said the children's favorites include "steak and pork chops, anything expensive."

Surprisingly, providing for such a large family has not proved too difficult, Bolia said. "We've managed. I'm probably not going to become a millionaire out of this, but we're getting by," the Newark, N.J., native said. Their big white house on the military base is rent free. He said he supports his family on about $700 a month.

The eldest daughter attends college in Monterey. The other school-age children attend nearby public schools.

He said the children have made a lot of friends at school. Tuyet, a 15-year-old ninth grader, told a reporter: "I like living here. It is different than before. I have friends I miss in Vietnam, but over here I have friends, too."

"The people here are like my people," she said in hesitant English. "Some people are good and some bad."

Unified school board campaign low key

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Two board members will be elected Friday in the biennial election of the Long Beach Unified School District which includes Long Beach, Signal Hill, Avalon and about 60 per cent of Lakewood.

Incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James P. Zarifes are challenged by Norman Holley and Mary Louise Jackson in one of the quietest school board campaigns in recent history.

POLLS WILL be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and judging from history will be poorly attended. Highest turnout in the past 20 years was the 18 per cent who voted in 1967. Average turnout is about 15 per cent. It did hit 26 per cent in 1953, a year in which the board election was combined with a municipal election.

Ballots will be hand-stamped by voters and will be hand-counted Friday night in Boyd High School, 235 E. Eighth St. Each voter's polling place is indicated on a slip accompanying his sample ballot.

Elections for board members are held every two years and are for four year terms. Terms are staggered so that while two will be elected Friday, there will be three seats at stake in the 1975 election.

CHALLENGERS Holley and Mrs. Jackson are running as a slate and charge in general that they represent a needed change in a board that is not responsive or representative.

What slight public exchange there has been in the low-key campaigns, including material submitted by all contenders at week's end, consists mainly of a letter-tetter. "Yes, we are — no, you're not" argument.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Wallace (Mrs. Donald C. Wallace Jr.) is current president of the board which governs both the Long Beach Unified School District and the Long Beach Community College District. She also served as president for the 1968-69 term. She was appointed to the board in 1967 and was elected to a full term in 1969.

MRS. WALLACE says the school system's primary purpose, to provide quality education, is an accomplished fact in this system and can be documented by almost any comparison our local school systems are outstanding. On tests of the three Rs, local public pupils score higher than their counterparts in other California school systems of comparable size.

The system's special schools and programs for handicapped children are nationally recognized, she said, and have served as models for similar programs in other major cities.

TALENTS of gifted children also are recognized here, she said. "The LBUSD pioneered a program for the mentally gifted child more than 10 years before the State of California required the development of such an educational innovation."

Mrs. Wallace added these points:

- Local high school graduates have won scholarships valued at more than $10 million in the last six years, "a remarkable feat; we know of no school system with a better record."
- All of our senior high schools recently received the highest ratings and the maximum five-year accreditations from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges.
- Long Beach City College is recognized as one of the finest community colleges in the United States and it also has always received the highest ratings and maximum accreditations.

ELIZABETH WALLACE

— More than half of our high school graduates continue their education at City College. The excellent records of City College alumni who have entered vocational careers or who have transferred to four-year colleges and universities attest to the high standards of our community college.

"We do have good schools," Mrs. Wallace concluded. "They aren't perfect. They can be improved. Experience on the job is very important in maintaining good schools and educational opportunities for boys and girls. My only purpose in serving on the Board of Education is to help keep good schools in the communities we serve."

James P. Zarifes, 41, a Long Beach attorney, was appointed to the board in 1971.

HE SAYS, in a campaign statement, that superior education and a low school tax rate are realities here, not "idealistic dreams." The district's school tax rate, he said, is lower than all but one of the 15 largest unified districts in the state and the City College tax rate is lower than a majority of the state's community college districts.

"Although no Board of Education member can take credit for what thousands of citizens have helped to create," Zarifes said, "I take pride in being part of the team that has brought about this condition and want to continue to serve."

"It would be a serious mistake to gamble with inexperience when the future of a good school system is at stake."

Zarifes stressed that every classroom and school building in use in the district is earthquake-safe according to strict state standards.

HE NOTED also that the school dropout rate here is less than half the national average, important in terms of reducing the odds for delinquency and crime.

Recognizing the need for marketable schools, Zarifes said the district has materially strengthened vocational training and career education with more than 6,600 today enrolled in trade classes at local high schools.

Challengers Holley and Mrs. Jackson could take some heart Saturday from the "no endorsement" recommendation of the board of directors of the Teachers Association of Long Beach.

The teachers group gave these reasons:

1. Disappointment with the unwillingness of the Board of Education representatives to seriously consider recommendations by the teachers for the betterment of the education of the children of Long Beach.
2. Disappointment over the denial of normal democratic process through the appointments, rather than calling for elections, to fill vacancies on the Long Beach Board of Education.
3. Disappointment over the lack of a broad base of representation that would be more inclusive of all segments of the community.

Candidate Holley, 21, is a City College student planning continuation of his education at Long Beach State University this spring.

Mrs. Jackson, 45, describes herself as a wife, mother, civic leader, youth advisor and senior citizen liaison person.

JAMES ZARIFES
Low Tax Rate 'A Reality'

A statement submitted by the Committee to Elect Jackson and Holley said those candidates are tired of hearing about something "vaguely labeled as 'good schools' and want schools which can be meaningfully described as 'excellent.'"

The board, they say, should become truly representative of and responsive to all elements of all communities in the district. The committee for Holley and Jackson reported that their contacts at the grassroots level has found "not one citizen who agrees with the patronizing, Babbitt-like descriptions of the conditions in our schools" championed by the incumbents.

The challengers say they would open channels of communication with the voters by advocating evening or weekend board meetings rather than the 4 p.m., Monday time. They charge the board has conducted secret business meetings. They favor elections rather than appointments to fill board vacancies. They would work to abolish existing regulations which, they say, require that written requests be made for information which should be readily available to a taxpayer and that such requests must then be cleared by "higher channels."

Charging waste and duplication, Jackson and Holley advocate hiring a management and systems analysis consulting firm to study organization arrangements and assignments, staff output ratios, contradictory and duplicative systems and procedures and to "examine reasons for the slow progress being made in the introduction of modern management techniques such as the new Planning, Programming Budgeting System developed by leading public administrators during the 1960s."

Jackson and Holley assert that failure to implement recommendations of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges 1969 accreditation report for City College's Business and Technology Campus is trending towards jeopardy for that campus's qualification to award certifiable diplomas and degrees.

They call for separate superintendents for the community college and the preschool-through-high school systems, a position they contend is held by a majority of teachers, administrators and students.

They emphasize a need to examine capabilities for self support of programs such as child care centers and not depend exclusively on help from Washington and Sacramento. Such dependence, they say, "increases our dependency and vulnerability. Board members should have ordered a crash study with tight deadlines to review present district budget priorities and funding sources legally available for the desperate need."

The challenging candidates said they invite queries at their headquarters, 905 Nineteenth St., and will detail other charges that they make against the incumbent board including "clandestine corporal punishment in the schools, ridiculous student dress codes, the lack of collective bargaining available to teachers and staff and the lack of sufficient footballs and basketballs in elementary schools." Their headquarters phone number is 591-2080.

Apart from the campaign claims of the opponents, the Long Beach Unified School District is an imposing entity which they agree deserves better than the 15 per cent voter turnout it gets on election day.

The district has a 1972-73 budget of $98.8 million, of which $18.4 is for City College. The combined school-college district employs 3,528 certificated and 2,032 noncertificated personnel.

The replacement value of its buildings is $183,937,000 and its assessed value is $1.25 billion. Student enrollment is 90,208. It has 81 schools and 470 permanent buildings on 885 acres.

Population of the school district is 420,000 and its area is 128 square miles.

BROTHERS JAILED IN KNIFE KILLING

An argument in Maywood between three friends ended early Saturday when one was stabbed to death and the other two, both brothers, were charged with murder.

Police said Juan Metia,

32, and his brother, Felipe, 18, were walking toward their home when the victim, Raul Panagua, 32, drove up "yelling and screaming," and ran after them.

Witnesses told police a fight ensued in which all three were cut or stabbed. Panagua died from apparent blood loss from a severed leg artery. Juan was stabbed in the stomach and Felipe was cut on the thigh.

Politics

Demo club to hear area candidates

The 10 Democratic candidates for the May 1 special election in the Compton area's 38th Assembly District will be speaking guests of the Bellflower Democratic Club at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the activities room at Simms Park, 16614 Clark Ave., Bellflower.

President Bob York said all interested Democrats are invited.

Long Beach Councilwoman Renee Simon will discuss city government at the Wednesday noon luncheon meeting of the Democratic Women's Study Club in the Lafayette Hotel. At an 11 a.m. study hour, George Toll, chairman of the Long Beach Commission on Aging, and Lillian Anakin, of Senior Opportunities Service, will speak on problems of the aging.

Mayoral primary Tuesday

Yorty, Bradley favorites in poll

By BILL STALL
AP Political Writer

There's a sort of impish Irish smile on his ruddy face as Sam Yorty, the bouncy mayor of Los Angeles, greets supporters of his re-election effort in Tuesday's primary election campaign.

"We have a good city," says the 63-year-old Yorty who relishes the informality of being known as "Mayor Sam" and who boasts he's the only American mayor with a foreign policy.

Now tune in on one of the millions of TV sets in the sprawling Los Angeles Basin. In a slickly produced commercial, City Councilman Tom Bradley, a 6-foot-4 black man, strides across the turf of an empty, silent athletic stadium.

"I love this city," says Bradley 21 years on the police force, 10 as a councilman. "I never dreamed when I was running track here at UCLA that I would be running for mayor of Los Angeles."

Bradley and 12 other men are challenging Yorty in Tuesday's primary for mayor, winding up a campaign that centered largely on personalities and has generated only mild enthusiasm among Angelenos.

A candidate could win the $35,000-a-year post outright Tuesday by collecting more than 50 per cent of the votes.

But that is considered unlikely. Bradley, who is 55, and Yorty are favored in public opinion polls to run 1-2 and thus emerge as contestants in the May 29 runoff.

That would be a rerun of their bitter contest four years ago when Yorty trailed Bradley in the primary but bounced back to win in the general election, 53 per cent to 47 per cent out of nearly a million votes cast.

The others are given a chance of getting into the run-offs: former state Assembly Speaker Jess Unruh, 50, the man they once called "Big Daddy" for the way he ran the Assembly, and Tom Reddin, 56, who ran the Los Angeles Police Department under Yorty between 1967 and 1969.

Reddin resigned in favor of a short-lived career as a television news commentator.

All the candidates have campaigned on two major issues: for better police protection and a mass transit system for this amalgamation of communities.

Unruh has proposed financing a rail rapid transit system in part with a lottery.

Bradley is spending up to $600,000 in an effort to win the primary. His television budget is an estimated $200,000, largest of any candidate. It features commercials produced by David Garth, who became known for his television promotion of New York Mayor John Lindsay.

Yorty is shunning television so far, relying heavily - as has Unruh - on sophisticated, computer-operated direct mailings of campaign material to the voters.

Unruh sponsored a series of coffee hours last week, inviting voters by computerized telegrams to attend.

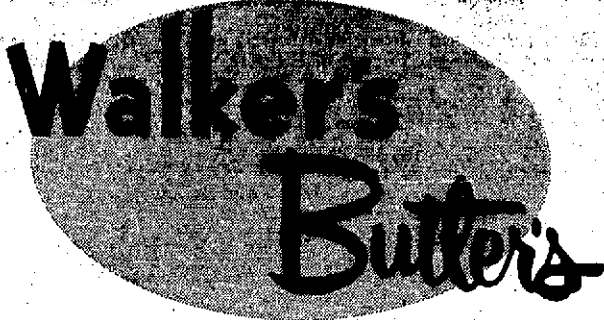

The most controversial issue to emerge so far was an allegation by Reddin and an also-run candidate that Bradley had received campaign loans and contributions from men with links to Nevada's legal gambling industry.

Yorty picked up on the issue by commenting, "forces from the outside are trying to take over the city."

The mayor made a similar allegation in his 1969 campaign against Bradley, alleging that a one-time Communist, Don Rothernberg, worked in Bradley's campaign.

Bradley replied this week that any effort to link him with gamblers or gangsters is "McCarthyism" and "guilt by association."

Problems mire tax-school bill

will be available — and SB90 changed the guidelines which permitted fairly accurate projections in past years — their budgeting task is virtually impossible.

"We think the clean-up bill has to be adopted by June 15," Hall says. "If it looks like we're not going to make that deadline, then I would hope we could at least get together on correcting those technical problems on which there is agreement. The Department of Education has the capacity to declare by administrative act what tax rates local districts can use for their 1973-74 budgets, and if we're not close to agreement by the middle of June then the department may have to go ahead and do that."

Edwin H. Harper, deputy superintendent of administration of the Department of Education, says that if the Legislature has not sent a bill to the governor by June 1, his office will send out guidelines to local districts.

WHILE THE clean-up legislation and the guidelines may solve problems for some local governments, others fear the cure may be worse than the disease. This is particularly true of the Long Beach Unified School District which has learned that it will have to make drastic cutbacks in its plans for the 1973-74 school year because of the proposed amendments to SB90.

Next: Illustrations of the problems caused by SB90, and the million dollar state aid cut facing Long Beach schools.

Magee jurors still at odds

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — For the sixth straight day, jurors were unable to reach a decision Saturday in the kidnap-murder trial of San Quentin convict Ruchell Magee.

Superior Court Judge Morton R. Colvin ordered the panel of six men and six women to resume deliberations this morning. The jury has considered the case for approximately 39 hours since Monday.

On Saturday, jurors asked the judge to define extortion and specific intent in the case, in which black militant Angela Davis was acquitted in a separate trial last June.

Colvin denied a request by the black defendant to read to the jury the 13th Amendment to the Constitution on abolition of slavery.

Teachers hear no-strike bill

State Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, told the annual conference of the California Federation of Teachers in Los Angeles Saturday that his collective bargaining bill, now before the Legislature, would eliminate teacher strikes in California.

The bill proposes the creation of a commission, selected by the governor, to help settle disputes between teacher groups and school administrators.

Under the legislation, one teacher's group, to be decided by secret election, would represent all the teachers within a given school district.

Man fatally injured in fist fight

A 32-year-old Long Beach man was fatally injured Saturday after being knocked down in a fist fight outside a Long Beach riding stable, police said.

Larrie Lynn McRae, of 3015 San Francisco Ave., was pronounced dead on arrival at Memorial Hospital at 1:15 a.m. after efforts by witnesses and fire department paramedics failed to revive him.

Booked on suspicion of murder was Vaughn Ray Smith, Jr., 18, of 10302 Mettler Ave., Gardena, who told police he had argued with the victim over an earlier dispute.

Witnesses told police the two men got into a fight about 12:45 a.m. in front of a bar and dance hall at the Long Beach Roping Arena, 3401 Golden Ave. Witnesses said the victim was knocked to the ground and kicked repeatedly by his assailant.

Blast kills 3 in Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — At least three persons were dead and four others trapped in rubble Saturday after an explosion in downtown Cincinnati leveled a 2½-story building, officials said.

Five persons were removed from the area by firemen. Two cars were destroyed, windows blown out and a dozen cars damaged.

A witness, Edward Cornett, said he heard an explosion that sounded like "one loud boom, a scream and the building fell to pieces." Cornett was at a gas station across the street.

Progress is reported in Wounded Knee talks

Combined News Services
WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. — The federal government Saturday refused militant Indians' requests to allow food into Wounded Knee and to loosen roadblocks around the village.

However, both sides said progress was made during talks aimed at a peaceful settlement of the 38-day armed confrontation.

The Saturday talks were the first in two weeks. Another session was scheduled for today.

"I was very impressed with this meeting," American Indian Movement attorney Ramon Roubideaux said after the two-hour session in a tepee situated between federal roadblocks and Indian blockades.

"It was the first good, in-depth meeting on the issues since the occupation began," Roubideaux added.

ASST. U.S. Atty. Gen. Kent Frizzell, the chief government negotiator, added, "I think good will was shown on both sides. Substantive issues were explored and discussed and I was very encouraged by the atmosphere."

Frizzell said the only concrete result of the meeting was an agreement to continue the cease-fire, in effect since Tuesday. Frizzell said one of the subjects discussed was allowing food into the village.

"I offered to set up a dining tent in the vicinity of the forward federal roadblock so that anyone in Wounded Knee could come to the tent to obtain food," he said.

Anyone, coming to the tent would have to submit to a search and would be arrested if there were a warrant for his arrest, Frizzell said. The proposal was rejected by AIM leaders.

"THE OFFER to set up a soup kitchen was rejected because the AIM leaders felt it was degrading and could be dangerous," Roubideaux said.

Frizzell said he could not allow any food except milk and baby food through federal roadblocks. "To my knowledge, the U.S. government has never given food to the enemy to sustain them," he said.

The AIM leaders asked the government to move back its roadblocks and armed personnel carriers. But, Frizzell said, "I could give no assurance that our positions would be moved back."

The Indians also asked for the dismantling of roadblocks outside the federal blockade by supporters of Oglala Sioux Tribal President Dick Wilson, an AIM opponent. The roadblocks were erected earlier this week.

Frizzell said he could not speak for the tribal government, which was not represented at the meeting.

HE ALSO said AIM leaders agreed to furnish the government with a specific list of complaints the Indians wish to discuss in future negotiations.

Roubideaux said the main issue would be an 1868 U.S.-Indian treaty that gave all Dakota Territory land west of the Missouri River to Indians. Meanwhile in Gallup, N.Mex. one thousand persons, most of them young and old Indians from the neighboring Navajo reservation, marched peacefully through the self-proclaimed Indian capital of the world Saturday to promote humanity and unity among Indians.

The marchers, including many Indians in their 80s and 90s, joined younger tribesmen chanting Indian songs and marching to the beat made by four drummers striking a four-foot wide Indian drum.

ALTHOUGH they said the purpose of their march was to promote humanity and unity among Indians and draw attention to the plight of the American Indian, organizers said they also had some other demands.

At a morning rally, Indians called for the resignation of Police Chief Manuel Gonzales and the removal of Mayor Emmett Garcia from the board of regents of the University of New Mexico.

"We also demand the city council call on the state of New Mexico to train and hire Indian liquor inspectors and health and sanitary inspectors to work in the area," said one of the march leaders, Jose Toledo.

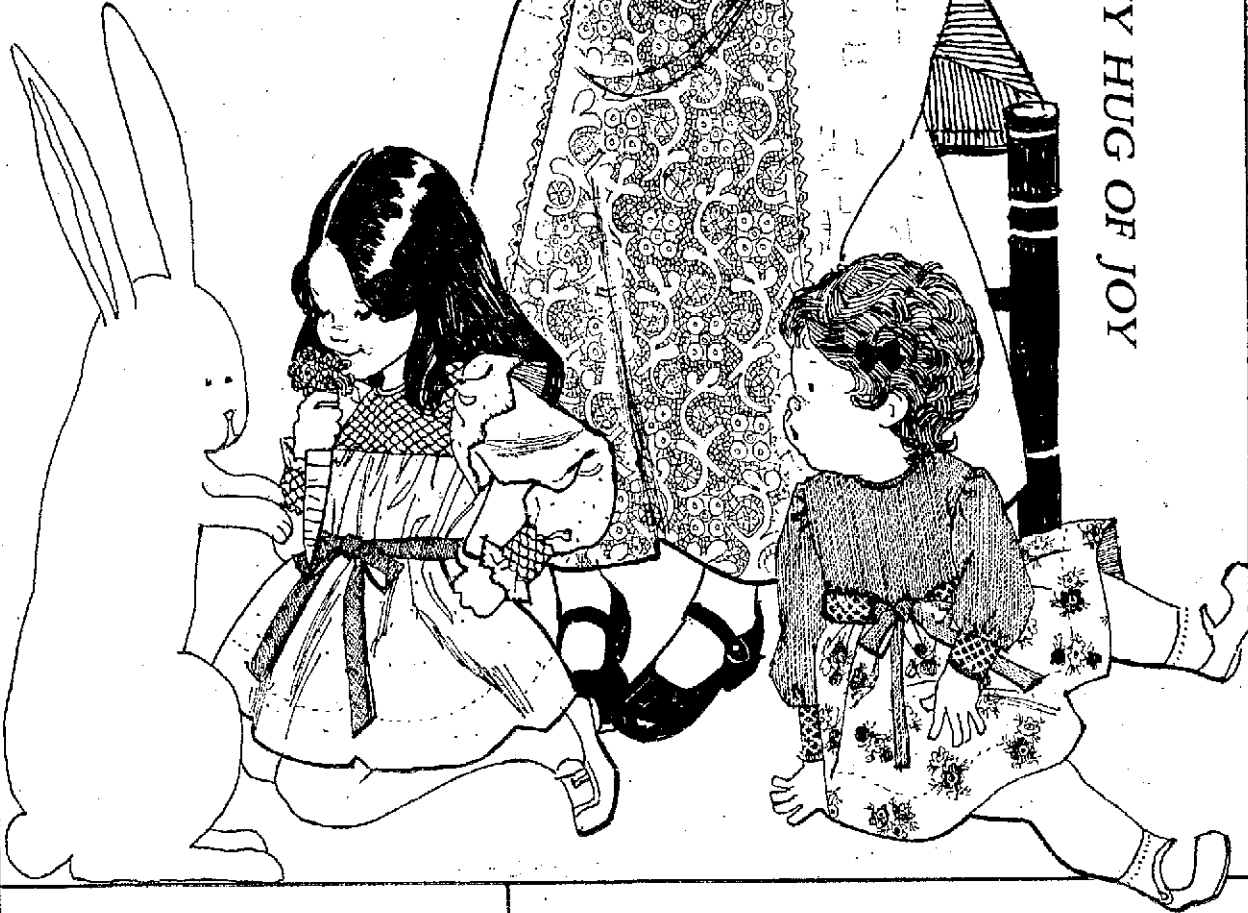

He said much of the city's economy depends on business generated by Indians living on the Navajo reservation.

Gas ration-price scheme charged

United Press International
Connecticut's attorney general charges that gasoline rationing imposed upon suppliers by several large oil companies may have been "deliberately created" to drive prices up.
Texaco Inc., the country's biggest gasoline marketer, has been rationing gasoline to distributors for months, service station operators said. Mobil Oil Corp. announced Friday it has adopted an allocation plan that will limit distributors to the amount of gasoline they purchased in 1972.
Connecticut Atty. Gen. Robert K. Killian called for an investigation of the quotas which he said were imposed in his state by Mobil, Cities Service Oil Co., Atlantic-Richfield, British Petroleum and Texaco.

The quotas "may have been deliberately created to drive independents out of business and drastically increase the wholesale and retail price of gasoline," he said.
In Texas, a federal judge ordered Shell Oil Co. to continue to supply gasoline to a trucking company which charged Shell with trying to "manufacture" a gasoline shortage in order to divert supplies from industrial users to the higher-priced retail market.

Hunsaker Truck Leasing Co. charged in a federal lawsuit in Dallas that Shell is involved in "a concerted plan, scheme and device to evade 1 per cent per year cost stabilization which may include illegal...exchange of markets" with certain other companies.
"We believe Shell has worked together with other oil companies to make capital of energy crisis publicity," said Robert B. Hunsaker, owner of the company.
"People think the gasoline supply is scarce but we suspect they are using that as an excuse to take supplies from industrial users (who get a discount) and transfer them to other retail markets where they can demand higher prices and bigger profits."

The Los Angeles Times said Texaco distributors will begin rationing gasoline to 200 service stations today for the first time since World War II.
Texaco has more than 1,000 outlets in the Los Angeles area, but only the 200 will be affected.

The Times said most motorists will still be able to get the gas they need at the 200 stations but the amount of gas they can get from distributors.
Both Texaco and Mobil told their distributors nationally they would be limited to last year's level of purchases.
Although the distributors will be able to buy as much gas as they did in 1972, customers will receive less fuel because distributors are consuming more than they did last year.

An independent gasoline company in Richmond, Va., said it is reducing its retail service station hours because of the shortage of gasoline.
Another company, Pointer's Oil Co., said its allotments, which normally run 600,000 to 700,000 gallons a month, have been cut in half.
Some Texaco distributors said rationing had been going on for months.

An operator for "Terrible Herbst," a small service station group with a station in Reno, Nev., said the price of regular gas will probably jump from 33 cents a gallon to about 45 cents within the next month.

Ski weekend tragedy
One person was killed and 25 injured Saturday when this Mid American Lines charter bus carrying members of a ski club at McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Corp. of St. Louis, Mo., collided with a truck on icy Interstate 70 at Hugo, Colo. The bus was enroute to Breckenridge, Colo.

Environmentalists losing fight for transit funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pro-highway forces appear near victory in their bid to stop Congress from prying open the Highway Trust Fund for mass transit development, breaking a 17-year tradition.
The outcome could hinge on a handful of votes in the House and, if the issue were decided today, the environmentalists and mass transit lobbyists who are pushing for a flexible trust fund concede they would lose.
The Senate already has voted 45 to 41 to allow states and cities to use up to $850 million of the $6-billion-a-year trust fund for new buses, subways and commuter rail lines. Since the vote was so narrow, there is almost no chance that a negative House vote could be overturned in a conference committee with the Senate.
The House will act when a new federal aid highway bill reaches the floor, possibly by mid-April.

An amendment will be offered to permit use of the trust fund, financed by gasoline taxes, for mass transit as well as highways.
Another amendment will be offered to allow states and cities to junk unwanted interstate highway segments and use the money for mass transit.
The resulting cash flow from the two amendments for mass transit would fall far short of the huge money needs of ailing transit systems and its greatest effect would be on urban expressway construction.
Environmental groups and mass transit lobbyists say cities would no longer feel compelled either to build highways or lose millions of dollars in federal highway funds.
In opposition, construction companies, highway associations and others in the so-called "highway lobby" argue that there is not enough money in the Highway Trust Fund now to satisfy the nation's highway needs, especially the need to upgrade older unsafe two-lane highways.

Both groups agree on one thing: a vote to crack the highway trust fund, no matter how small the amount, would be only the beginning of even bigger raids on the fund for mass transit.
The House Public Works Committee almost certainly will vote this week not to break the fund or to allow interstate fund transfers, meaning that the final battle will be fought on the house floor.
The environmental-mass transit group is pushing for House passage of the exact language in the Senate amendment so that the trust fund issue won't even be open to discussion in a conference committee.

County confirms cut in gas order

Los Angeles County will reduce its bulk gasoline purchases for 1973-74 from 33 million gallons to 10-12 million gallons because of an anticipated fuel shortage.
County Purchasing Agent H.E. Davis said the reduction was made by deciding not to include purchases for 52 smaller cities in the county's order.
"We really had no choice in dropping the cities from our purchasing program," he said.
"It was apparent to us a month ago that no company was willing to bid on a huge volume of gasoline because of the expected shortage."
The county has included the cities in its orders since 1955 — at the 1955 price of less than 20 cents per gallon.

Also included in the county purchases were 80 school districts and special districts which will not be affected by the county's new move.
Davis said the county figured it would have to buy 33 million gallons to supply itself, the special and school districts and the cities. He said the oil companies were opposed to such a large order since they would have to supply gasoline "at a fixed price for the entire year."
Davis said the school and special districts were kept on the list because the county felt a contract for 10-12 million gallons would produce the best price. The county's gasoline needs were only 8.7 million gallons.

Franco greets exile Peron 'officially'

MADRID (UPI) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Spanish chief of state, received former Argentine President Juan D. Peron officially Saturday for the first time since Peron established residence in exile here 12 years ago.

Peron and Argentina's Peronist President-elect Hector J. Campora conferred with Franco for one hour and 10 minutes at the Spanish leader's El Pardo residence. Campora said afterward they discussed future relations between the two countries, including possible immigration of Spanish workers to Argentina.

Poor get more care in Chile

New York Times Service

SANTIAGO, Chile — There has been a dramatic expansion of medical services for the poor under Chile's Marxist government.

At the same time, medicine has been plagued by shortages and black-market practices, and the tense atmosphere of political polarization has set Marxist and anti-Marxist members of the medical community against each other.

According to the National Health Service, there were three million more medical consultants in 1971 — the first year of the present government — than in 1970.

There were also significant drops in infant mortality (down 11 per cent), fatal diarrhea in children (down 20 per cent), deaths from bronchial pneumonia (down 15 per cent) and child malnutrition cases (down 7 per cent).

THE EXPANSION in medical services has come without a significant increase in doctors — there is an estimated shortage of 4,800. Rather it has been achieved through emphasis on small community clinics instead of large hospitals, the liberal use of medical students and paramedics, and preventive medicine campaigns among the poor.

Although hundreds of small clinics have been built or expanded during the last two years, the situation is considerably bleaker in large hospitals, where there are growing shortages of equipment, money and medicine.

CHILEAN medicine has also been hampered by the open dissensions between Marxist and anti-Marxist physicians.

The conservative Medical College of Chile, an organization roughly comparable to the American Medical Association, contends that the government has tried to politicize the poorer communities at the same time it has extended medical services to them — a charge that some officials openly acknowledge.

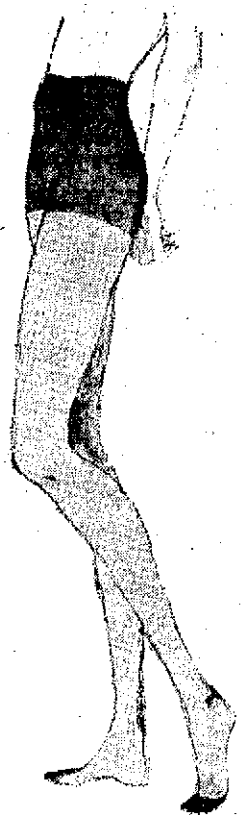

"We are political activists," conceded Miriam Cortez, who heads the social assistance program at the National Health Service. "It is our obligation to make people realize that all their problems, even health problems, are the result of the class structure."

'China team' on the way

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A five-member State Department advance team left Saturday en route to Peking to establish a "Liaison mission" for the first formal U.S. diplomatic dealings with mainland China in over two decades.

The group, headed by China expert Alfred L. Jenkins, flew commercially by way of Chicago to Hong Kong, where its members will confer with officials of the U.S. Consulate before entering China April 5.

LOCATION OF MANAGUA EARTHQUAKE

2nd earthquake rattles Managua

MANAGUA (UPI) — An earthquake shook Managua Saturday, sending residents fleeing into the streets from their homes 14 weeks to the day after the devastating quake which virtually destroyed the city Dec. 23.

There were no immediate reports of serious damage or casualties.

A large section of earth was shoved into Asososca Lagoon, about four miles south of the city, authorities said.

Tremors were felt in the city Saturday morning before the quake-force jolt hit in the afternoon at 2:40 p.m. and rattled through the city just before it hit.

A second strong tremor, but much weaker than the earlier one, struck at 5:57 p.m. It lasted about four seconds. There were neither victims nor serious damage to buildings in either quake, firemen said.

It was apparently centered in the southeastern section of Managua, the area to which many persons who survived the December earthquake had moved, seeking safer ground.

An exact measure of its force was not known in Managua because there is no seismographic equipment here.

Some of the rubble-shrouded structures remaining from the Dec. 23 quake were shaken into debris. Aside from the south outskirts of the city, the quake was also felt strongly at Las Mercedes Airport. The modern airport terminal there was badly damaged in the quake three months ago.

The Dec. 23 earthquake killed an estimated 2,000 to 5,000 persons. An exact count was not possible since many victims were buried in mass graves.

Saturday's tremor also occurred exactly 42 years after another devastating earthquake, on March 31, 1931, also destroyed the city, killed 1,000 persons and injured 5,000.

Libya snubs U.S. on why transport shot at BEIRUT (UPI) — Libya has rejected a U.S. demand for an explanation of why two Libyan Mirage jet fighter planes fired at an American military transport plane over the Mediterranean last week, the Middle East news agency said Saturday.

Quoting a Tripoli radio broadcast, the agency said: "Libya has sent back the American memorandum on the spying plane, as it is, to the United States."

The C130 plane was apparently on an electronic intelligence mission when it was attacked March 21, reports from Washington said. The plane was reported to have ducked into the clouds and returned undamaged to its base in Athens.

Last Wednesday, the Libyan charge d'affaires in Washington delivered a diplomatic note denying that Libyan jets attacked the American plane.

A State Department spokesman said the denial was rejected and sent back for a fuller explanation of the incident.

Belfast rebels steal confiscated arms

BELFAST (UPI) — Armed men burst into a Belfast forensic science laboratory Saturday and stole weapons seized by security forces in recent searches, police said.

The raid came as police and troops stepped up spot checks on cars and increased the number of road blocks in what a military spokesman said was an effort to cut down the latest series of terrorist bombings in Northern Ireland. There was no estimate of the haul.

Meantime, the army reported British troops making a routine arms search in Belfast's Roman Catholic Andersonstown area found 600 rounds of ammunition in a garage.

Only about 300 persons took part in a rally called by Roman Catholic leaders in the Ardoyne area to protest the presence of British paratroopers. The organizers had hoped for a turnout by at least 5,000.

There were no incidents and the army kept clear of the Ardoyne area.

A sniper fired two shots at an army foot patrol in West Belfast's Catholic Suffolk District Saturday, slightly wounding one soldier. Bombings also were reported.

Troops fired rubber bullets to disperse a crowd when a downtown Belfast dance hall brawl spread into the street.

Police said 10 policemen and 14 civilians were treated in hospital for injuries, and 25 persons were detained.

Russ high rise low key MOSCOW (AP) — When engineer Y. Kazakov moved his family into a new apartment in the Crimean city of Simferopol he was elated by the spacious three rooms, the central location and the view of the Crimean mountains.

But for the past 10 months the new flat has been nothing but trouble.

The Kazakovs live on the eighth floor, but the elevator works only one day a week.

On weekends the water to the upper floors is cut off at 7 p.m. Baths have to be put off and dirty dishes collect in the dry sink.

The yard surrounding the building looks like a war zone, still littered with rubble and steel reinforcing rods protruding dangerously from the ground.

The building's sewer stopped up and flooded the basement and ground-floor apartments. The building superintendent billed every flat in the nine-story building for the damage and told them if they didn't pay he would shut off the water.

Kazakov finally wrote an irate letter to Pravda. The Communist party daily published it Saturday along with a buck-passing letter from the chief of a building maintenance trust in the Chelyabinsk region of Siberia, talking about similar problems there.

It turns out the Kazakovs' problems are routine for families moving into the slab-like, prefabricated buildings growing like weeds around Russia's big cities.

Pravda's attention to the situation indicated the country's building and maintenance officials had better try to do something about it.

Kazakov criticized the shoddy construction work on his building, the state inspectors who accepted it from the building trusts in such a state, and those charged with day-to-day maintenance.

Y. Linder, who directs building maintenance in the town of Miass near Chelyabinsk, countered in his letter that his men can't do their jobs well because they are not given the necessary tools and materials.

Meat, vegetables scarce in Russia

MOSCOW (UPI) — Beef, butter and potatoes are in short supply in parts of Southern Russia, travelers said Saturday. One state-run meat shop in a city on the Volga River had only pigs heads for sale, they said. Butter, potatoes, cabbages and carrots were periodically unavailable and there was evidence of some rationing of bread, potatoes and butter, they said.

The Soviet Union suffered its worst crop disaster of the century last year. The outlook for 1973 remains uncertain. Official spokesmen have confirmed there has been some rationing of such staples as potatoes, butter and other milk products. The travelers said there was no evidence of hoarding and the supply situation was far from a crisis stage.

They said local authorities were aware of the problems and were trying to ease them by increasing supplies of more readily available foodstuffs such as fish, cucumbers and lemons.

Finns beat booze boost

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — Finns were boozing it up with gusto this weekend to beat a massive hike in the price of spirits which goes into effect today.

But the Finns, who like their liquor hard and straight, don't see much humor in the government's choice of April Fools Day for the hike. Friday was payday, resulting in jammed bars and full restaurants.

The price increase reflects the government's efforts to control alcoholism. In a population of 4.6 million, there are 40,000 registered alcoholics and the Institute of Alcohol Studies estimates that at least 200,000 people drink enough to create an absenteeism problem for the national economy.

Prices of spirits here are already among the highest in Europe, with a bottle of domestic vodka costing $4.65 now, and $5.40 after the price hikes take effect. Imported whisky costs over $10 a bottle. The prices apply to .75 liter bottles, or about a fifth.

Vodka is Finland's most popular alcoholic drink and is served either cold and straight or on the rocks mixed with fruit juice.

Bank of Japan hikes interest

TOKYO (AP) — The Bank of Japan, in a meeting with officials of the Finance Ministry, decided Saturday to raise interest charges on borrowed money in an effort to hold down inflation.

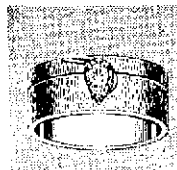

The bank announced the official discount rate will go up three-quarters of a percentage point to 5 per cent, effective Monday.

Ex-POWs 'liars', Jane Fonda claims

Associated Press

Academy Award winning actress Jane Fonda calls American returning prisoners of war who stated they were tortured in North Vietnamese prison camps "hypocrites and liars."

"History will judge them severely," the veteran antiwar demonstrator said in an interview.

"The condition of the returning prisoners should speak for itself to prove the men have not been tortured," she stated.

"I think that one of the only ways that we are going to redeem ourselves as a country for what we have done there is not to hail the pilots as heroes, because they are hypocrites and liars," she declared.

As to the charge that antiwar demonstrators such as herself who visited Hanoi created additional hardship for the prisoners, Miss Fonda said:

"They said ... the antiwar people who came to North Vietnam prolonged the war, and they also implied they were forced into seeing us. Well, that's laughable."

She said she had met eight pilots when she had visited Vietnam. She said one told her his arms had been paralyzed when he had been shot down, but after treatment at the prison camp he had regained the use of it.

"These were not men who had been tortured. These were not men who had been starved. These were not men who've been brainwashed," she said of the eight pilots she met.

POWs 'denied mental pursuits'

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former POWs Saturday continued to tell of rough treatment in North Vietnamese prisons and one man said he could forgive his captors for physical tortures he suffered but not for barring intellectual pursuits.

"There was a constant denial of any intellectual pursuit," Navy Lt. Charles P. Zuhoski said at a news conference in New York. "You had to do it in your head."

"The guards allowed 'not a pencil, not a piece of paper' to the prisoners," said Zuhoski, 31, of Jamesport, N.Y., a prisoner for six years. He smuggled in a pebble to make mathematical notations, he said, because he was fond of math and would like to teach some day.

A roommate who was caught smuggling in a pebble was shipped with an automobile fan belt, Zuhoski said.

Zuhoski appeared at a news conference in New York City with two other Navy fliers — Lt. Wayne K. Goodermote, 29, of Berlin, N.Y., and Lt. Charles D. Rice, 29, of Setauket, N.Y.

It was one of numerous conferences held since Thursday when the last American POWs were released and those already liberated decided to tell the full story of their imprisonment.

All three New York State men were shot down in 1967 while flying carrier-based planes over North Vietnam.

They told how they were tortured for military information by what they called the "rope method," which has been described by other POWs. They said the torture stopped in 1969.

Rice said the rope was a half-inch-wide nylon strap 15-20 feet long. It was used to tie the prisoners' wrists together, then pulled tight behind their backs and over their shoulders while their bodies were strained through painful contortions.

"The pain became very excruciating. I began to scream," said Rice. He said his legs were pulled over his head and it seemed that he was tortured for an hour — a treatment repeated three or four times in a 48-hour period.

It was even more painful, Rice said, when an iron bar and shackles were used.

Another returned POW said Saturday he believes his North Vietnam captors "learned in the opening years of our imprisonment that we were not going to be brainwashed, that we were not going to be changed."

Air Force Col. James Lindberg Hughes, a prisoner of war for six years, spoke at a news conference in Santa Fe, N.M. Hughes, who spent three years in solitary confinement, also spoke of torture with ropes, leg irons and handcuffs.

"They tried to make us obedient to their cause and I feel certain that we convinced them over the years that they had not, and would not ever achieve obedience with the free thinking and dedicated Americans."

SAIGON (UPI) — High-ranking Communist Vietnamese officials denied Saturday that former U.S. prisoners of war were cruelly treated by their captors. They said the prisoners' charges are part of a campaign to cover up the mistreatment of Communist prisoners by South Vietnam.

At the same time, the Communists repeated charges that thousands of American servicemen are remaining in South Vietnam "disguised as civilian personnel."

The denial and charges were made at a 90-minute news conference by Col. Vo Dong Giang on the basis of a prepared statement from Lt. Gen. Tran Van Tra, who left Friday for consultations in Hanoi. In his statement Tra said North Vietnam

"granted them (American POWs) humane and lenient treatment."

Asked how Tra could say the prisoners were humanely treated when they told of torture and starvation, Giang said:

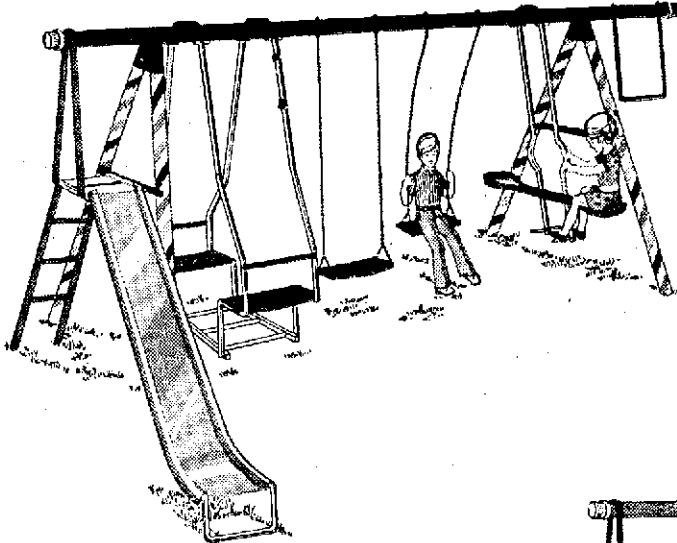

"All the (JMC) minutes of the return of U.S. military personnel say the same thing — their general health was good, their condition was fit..."

"When you see the return of our (Communist) personnel, you see that some of them are not healthy..."

"This is a campaign to cover up the South Vietnamese mistreatments and the condition of our personnel."

Activist denies PW mail charge

NEW YORK (AP) — Cora Weiss denied on Saturday a former POW's charge that a peace group she headed sent mail only to prisoners whose families cooperated with the antiwar organization.

Mrs. Weiss, who was co-chairman of the Committee of Liaison with Families of Servicemen Detained in North Vietnam, said the committee "scrupulously refrained at all times from accepting or declining mail on the basis of the political beliefs or activities of the families."

She said the families of all but 52 prisoners sent mail through the committee, and 35 of the 52 were captured in 1972. She noted that the committee guaranteed delivery only to North Vietnam, not the prisoners themselves.

Navy Capt. James A. Mulligan, a former prisoner, said in a television interview in Portsmouth, Va., that prisoners with relatives active in the committee's antiwar activities "got mail all the time," while others did not.

Mulligan urged the U.S. government to sue members of the committee "to end this thing, once and for all."

Mrs. Weiss said the committee closed its doors this week, since the return of the prisoners ended its reason for being.

Tortured civilian not bitter

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — The American imprisoned in Indochina longer than any other U.S. civilian said Saturday he feels "no bitterness" toward his Communist captors despite being tortured and buried up to his neck for 20 days.

Ernest C. Brace, 41, an ex-Marine from Atlanta, Ga. said being buried and beaten was punishment for escape attempts during almost seven years' imprisonment.

"Most of my severe torture was because of acts I took against the North Vietnamese as their prisoner. As far as my escape attempts, I knew what I was doing. I knew I'd get punished if I got caught," Brace, a native of Detroit, told a plane-side news conference shortly after arriving here.

DURING THE three weeks after his capture, he said, he was marched 200 miles into North Vietnam and put into a bamboo cage.

After his escape attempt, he was "tied to a post and beaten into unconsciousness. In that beating I lost my front teeth."

During April 1966, he said, he escaped for four days but was again recaptured. His captors "took me out, spread-eagled me on my cage and beat me into unconsciousness," he said.

But he added, "I have no bitterness toward these people."

Brace said he was captured May 21, 1965, on the ground in Laos while working as a pilot for a private airline company shipping U.S. supplies to Indochina.

THE NORTH Vietnamese troops who captured him "insisted I was CIA. I am not a member of the CIA. They tortured me at various times, not for information. They were satisfied that I could give them no further information. The first few months there were many beatings, many poundings around."

ACTION LINE is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Friday. Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you wish returned.

Lots of interest

A year ago a class action lawsuit was filed against the Bank of America, Wells Fargo Bank and a savings and loan association in connection with mortgage impound accounts. Has there been any decision or action on this suit? C.R., Long Beach.

The case still is pending in Superior Court of San Francisco, according to Michael Lewton, one of four attorneys who filed the class actions. He said it may be another two years before all legal maneuvers are exhausted and the case is heard. The suits totaling $300 million against the two banks and the San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan Association, stemmed from their requirements that borrowers pay enough money into impound accounts for insurance and property taxes. The suits allege the three financial institutions do not pay interest on these deposits although they have the use of this pool of money to lend to other customers.

Reciprocate

In November I ordered a special set of teflon impregnated motorcycle pistons from the Rand Co. in Inkster, Mich. By February I hadn't received them. So I bought some locally as I need the bike for transportation. I called the company to request a refund and they promised to return my $54.95, but as yet I haven't received it. Could you help? D.A., Westminster.

Your check has been mailed to you. A spokesman for the company said your request for a refund "apparently was misfiled."

Music

I received a post card saying I had won a prize and giving me a number to call. When I called, I found out the company was National Music, 1041 E. Seventh St. They said they had to have answers to all kinds of questions about me before they could tell me what the prize was, so I decided not to bother. It sounds like some kind of gimmick. Can ACTION LINE find out what it's all about? A.H., Long Beach.

National Music, also known as Pearl Music, sells stereo equipment and tape cassettes. Although they will allow you to come to their office and pick up your prize, they prefer to send a salesman to your home, "at which time, naturally, we like to give our sales pitch," said Mrs. Ron Thornton, whose husband is the company's Long Beach field representative. She said the prizes range from a record album to certificates for trips to Tahoe and Las Vegas. The company, whose president is Joseph J. Martin, is headquartered at 5362 Westminster Blvd., Westminster.

Transport

Can you find out how a devoted wife who doesn't drive and has no friends, family or money can go to the California Rehabilitation Center to visit her husband? The Greyhound only goes to Corona which is still a long way from the facility. Can you find some way for me to get there to visit my husband? C.A., Long Beach.

Family Transportation Club, operated by LaVerne Ross, whose husband is in prison, takes women to visit their husbands on weekends for a nominal fee to cover expenses. They use a camper called the Reunion Express. Mrs. Ross can be reached through an answering service at 846-4892. Help Public Service Foundation, 8510 S. Broadway, Suite 1, Los Angeles, Calif. 90003, provides free transportation to visit inmates if the inmate will write them and tell them whom he wishes to see.

Bike-car crash kills Pedro boy

An eight-year-old San Pedro boy was killed when the bicycle he was riding near his home suddenly veered into the street and into the path of a passing car, police reported Saturday.

Harbor Division traffic investigators said the young victim, Lawrence Thompson, of 1715 W. 240th St., was pronounced dead on arrival at Harbor General Hospital shortly after the 7:10 p.m. accident Friday.

The driver of the car which struck the bicycle near the intersection of 240th Street and Western Avenue was not cited or held, police added.

MEAT PROTESTS

Many shoppers stock up on boycott eve

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Protest and rallies by housewives and politicians blossomed Saturday in front of many supermarkets around the nation on the eve of what consumer groups hope will be a weeklong, nationwide boycott of meat.

Butchers in many areas said they were already feeling the effects of curtailed meat buying, and some said they were cutting orders for next week by as much as 50 per cent. Prices, however, have not gotten any lower.

In urging people to serve meatless meals for the week of April 1-7, the diverse groups supporting the boycott hope to drive down prices and also express opposition to President Nixon's freeze of meat prices at the present high levels.

In Saturday's rallies and demonstrations, almost all passersby except butchers expressed support of the movement and signed petitions to be sent to the White House. However, there were indications that some shoppers were simply stocking up on meat this weekend to serve during the boycott.

"All the people have been buying double this week, I heard," said Mrs. Helen Grogan of Brighton, Mass., shopping in the A&P. "It's just a lot of hypocrisy," put in Mrs. Rosemarie McMillan. "Women who have bought big meat orders this week are planning to march next week."

The boycott movement involves a wide variety of local groups, many of which began as morning discussions over coffee among friends. It has involved many women who had not participated in American protests in the past.

A number of stores indicated agreement with the movement's aims. At the Pantry Pride, the manager and employees signed petitions and took a sign from one of the pickets reading "Nuts to Butz — Nix-On Beef" to put in the store window.

In Scranton, Pa., the commissioners of Lackawanna County announced that no meat would be served during the boycott at the county prison, two homes for the elderly, and a tuberculosis hospital. Charles Luger, chairman of the board of commissioners, estimated that food prices had risen 25 per cent at the institutions this year.

San Francisco Consumer Action sent leaflets to markets with trilingual sheets in English, Spanish and Chinese urging support of the boycott and giving information on non-meat protein sources.

Several hundred housewives picketed near the White House. To dramatize their plan, an armored truck pulled up to the demonstration and an armed guard removed a cut of sirloin steak.

In some places, while shoppers said they had cut back on meat purchases, store owners said that business was booming, apparently because people were stocking up on meat to avoid embarrassment during the boycott.

"They don't want their neighbors to see them buying meat during next week's boycott," said Nicholas Didonato, a butcher on India Street in Portland, Maine. "It looks to me like they're buying and filling their freezers."

Thieu-Nixon meeting

— even if the price would have been defeat and humiliation for the United States.

With that sendoff, the Americans have made arrangements for Thieu's visit that will require the South Vietnamese president to shoulder part of the burden of insuring continued support of Nixon's "great majority." A somewhat curious format for the visit bears little resemblance to the conventional agenda for incoming heads of state.

Thieu's direct contact with the President will take place in the sheltered confines of Nixon's west coast residence. The American President will remain behind out of the limelight while the South Vietnamese leader makes his case in Washington at the usual round of state receptions, television appearances, and the traditional speech before the National Press Club.

IN EFFECT, Nixon seems to have extended the concept of Vietnamization from Saigon to Washington. As he did militarily on the battlefield, he is now doing in the public opinion field. Thieu is being given formal backing (direct Presidential talks) and material support (commitments to economic aid) but must fight his own battle for the mind of the American people.

Nixon will not be seen at Thieu's side, therefore, against the traditional backdrop of such diplomatic appearances. He is giving a small blacktie dinner for Thieu Monday night at San Clemente, and Thieu will be host Tuesday at lunch, but in President Nixon's house.

After that, Vice President Agnew takes over the duties of official host.

The price tag on American aid during reconstruction is yet to be determined. The makeup of the official Vietnamese party indicates money matters will occupy most of the time the two leaders spend together. Both Minister of Economy Pham Kim Ngoc and Finance Minister Ha Xuan Trung, will be along.

AFTER SIX years of heavy fighting and extensive destruction, refugees fill a series of urban ghettos in South Vietnam. They now contain more than half the population of 17 million, whereas in 1960 the country was still 85 per cent rural.

The population fed off the more than 500,000 American troops in the country during the late 1960s, but the sap has now run out of that tree, erasing a source of supplementary income to hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese from bar girls to Vietnamese businessmen.

Accusation in 'bug' case 'damned lie,' Martha says

Mitchell said. "I'm extremely upset. I'm not going to take it."

Mrs. Mitchell said repeatedly that "I have no idea" why anybody would want to make it look like her husband played a major role in the bugging affair.

But she suggested it might be because he was no longer in the government.

"I think my husband has become the whipping boy for whatever they have to hide," she said.

McCord was one of seven men indicted in the Watergate case. He and G. Gordon Liddy, a former Nixon campaign aide, were convicted at the trial last January and the other five defendants pleaded guilty.

Last week, McCord told the Watergate trail judge that he and his codefendants had been under "political pressure" to plead guilty and remain silent, that perjury had been committed during the trial and that unnamed others were involved in the political espionage against the Democrats.

Mrs. Mitchell said she knew that the Democrats "have done the same thing," alleging that the President's plane was bugged in 1968 and nobody ever dared to print it.

The Washington Post said March 24 that the Mitchells and the McCords had been good friends and that when Mrs. Mitchell heard last June that McCord had been arrested in the Watergate break-in, it triggered her statement that she was giving her husband an "ultimatum" to quit politics or she would leave him.

"I've never ever been close to McCord," she said Saturday.

ARMY SGT. Donald J. Rander of Baltimore pats his wife Andrea's hair for the first time in more than five years. The former POW returned to Valley Forge General Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa., to greet his wife and children. He was captured in February, 1968.

Final POW airlift bringing 69 to U.S.

Combined News Services

The final airlift of freed American prisoners of war began early this morning, ferrying 69 freed POWs aboard C141 hospital planes from Clark Air Base in the Philippines to the United States.

The flights today followed three Saturday, and brought to a close the airlift of nearly 600 Americans held prisoner in Communist camps.

Another plane flew to Saigon to pick up the last American POW acknowledged by the Communists — Army Capt. Robert Thomas White, held by the Viet Cong in southern South Vietnam.

THE FIRST C141 in today's airlift left Clark at 8:01 a.m. Philippine time, bound for Andrews AFB, Md., where it was scheduled to arrive at 5:15 p.m. EST today.

The second plane left at 10 a.m. bound for Sheppard AFB, Texas. Aboard it was Navy Lt. Cmdr. Alfred Agnew, 32, of Albany, Ga. Agnew was the last man shot down over North Vietnam — on Dec. 28, 1972 — and the last POW released in Hanoi.

A third plane with 20 POWs aboard left at noon Sunday. It was en route to March AFB, Calif., and Scott AFB, Ill. It was scheduled to arrive at March.

The fourth and final plane was scheduled to leave later.

When the freedom flights, which have operated with maximum efficiency, wind down they will have delivered 596 POWs to their families in the U.S. since the first groups of prisoners were released in North and South Vietnam on Feb. 12.

The first arrival Saturday was a group of 12 POWs at Scott. On hand to meet his father, Air Force Capt. William Byrns of Warrenton, Mo., was three-year-old Scott Byrns, who was clutching a flower and wearing a blue military-type suit.

"Thank you for your prayers," Byrns, who was captured last May 29, told a group of 700. "I want to thank America and thank God, for by His grace and by your prayers we are free again."

Officials said a helicopter from the Joint Military Commission picked up White, 32, this afternoon at the village of Xam Tieu 75 miles south of Saigon. He was then flown to the capital for transfer to the flying hospital and a medical checkup in the Philippines.

Coast Guard racing to sinking ship; 34 aboard

HONOLULU (UPI) — A ship with 34 persons aboard radioed Saturday it was sinking 930 miles southwest of Hawaii. Two lifeboats filled with survivors were spotted nearby by a Coast Guard plane.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the 482-foot motor vessel Silver Dove reported it was going down in an area approximately 220 miles southwest of Johnston Island.

All of the ship's crew were accounted for. Twenty-seven crew members were in lifeboats and seven were still aboard the Silver Dove Saturday night.

The Coast Guard said the "deck is awash when the ship rolls."

The spokesman said the refrigerated cargo vessel, whose destination was not known, sent an SOS early Saturday to the Coast Guard Cutter North Wind that "they were sinking and lowering the life boats."

The Coast Guard cutter was en route to Honolulu from icebreaking operations in the Antarctic but has been diverted to the area of the stricken ship.

"Since the North Wind cannot reach the area until Sunday morning, plans call for keeping a C130 on the scene circling the area throughout the night," the Coast Guard said.

The C130 spotted most of the crew in two lifeboats, although some were still aboard the vessel, which was listing 30 degrees to port.

The Silver Dove, owned by the Geneva Steamship Co. out of New York, was in the Philippines earlier this month.

Moderate conditions existed in the area, with the wind 12 to 22 knots and the seas five to eight feet.

Coast Guard and Air Force aircraft were scheduled to alternate on surveillance of the lifeboats and stricken vessel, the Coast Guard said.

The Coast Guard did not know what caused the incident.

Living standard declining

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—The famed American standard of living appears to be changing, and for the worse.

A lot of people aren't going to be able to afford that Sunday drive anymore, nor the summer air conditioner, nor full heat during the winter.

At the same time the same people, and probably that includes most of what is called "middle America", are going to be eating a lot more macaroni and cheese and a lot less steak.

The energy crisis is going to translate into higher prices for gasoline, when it is available, for gas to cook with and for electricity for air conditioners and heat.

FOOD prices aren't going to go down very soon and in fact will probably keep on going up.

So the latter part of the 1970s may be a lot more like the depression days of the 1930s than the 1950s and 1960s.

And it isn't the Democrats who are saying so, it is the Republicans.

President Nixon noted that we are now using more energy than we produce, and it is his administration which keeps warning that the days of cheap energy are over.

The President's secretary of agriculture, Earl Butz, was the man who said that the era of relatively cheap food on the American dinner table is probably over.

AND HE added that the rising world demands for high protein foods, particularly meat products and grains, eventually will boost U.S. food prices even higher than they are now.

One of the reasons for

Muskie takes on Detroit

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — It was a bad day for Detroit at the end of a bad month.

The auto manufacturers had been in Washington pleading for what they said were their lives. They just couldn't meet tough auto air pollution standards, they said.

In some respects those standards are the baby of Sen. Ed Muskie, D-Maine, and so Muskie got up one day last week to make his feelings known.

He all but called the American auto manufacturers "incompetent boobs."

Unfortunately for the same manufacturers the

SEN. EDMUND MUSKIE

Japanese and Germans had just testified they could meet the standards.

So Ed Muskie had quite a bit of ammunition.

"WE HAVE to conclude that the automobile is a danger to the nation's health," he started out. "This year, automobile exhaust will account for two-thirds of the carbon monoxide, half of the hydrocarbons and two-fifths of the nitrogen oxide that pollute our air. And that pollution will be concentrated in the great cities."

To add insult to injury, Muskie than said, "Apparently American auto companies have decided to substitute politics for engineering and public relations for technological progress."

Standard of living on way down the present high beef prices if the U.S.-Russian wheat deal and more such deals are in the making.

In some respects the energy crisis has affected the price of food. As we buy more oil overseas, we have to sell more of our food supply abroad to support the oil habit at home.

So the prospects are for more food sales abroad and more purchases of oil abroad and both are going to hurt the American standard of living.

The administration has not yet decided on its course of action in regard to the energy crisis. It has put price controls on meat but other food prices are still uncontrolled, and the long term expectation is for higher prices.

BUTZ in fact in an interview answered one question about whether the public has been paying too little for food by saying:

"I think they probably have."

Butz may be right but not many housewives would agree. And the politics of any slide downward of the American standard of living can be disastrous to the administration in power.

The American public is worried about prices and this administration is going to have to produce results or else face the coming election years with great fear.

In the long run, the present economic problems are not the responsibility of the party now in power, nor really of the party out of power. Instead the American public may have bankrupted itself, but the public isn't going to buy that view-point.

However, the public is probably going to have less and less money to buy anything. And that's going to hurt.

Muskie, Detroit clash

He supported that statement by quoting National Academy of Sciences and the Environmental Protection Agency reports.

THE ACADEMY said of Detroit's answer to smog control that it "is the most disadvantageous with respect to first cost, fuel economy, maintainability and durability. On the other the most promising system — the curburated, stratified-charge engine — is superior in all these categories.

Muskie said of one of the reports, "It indicates that the industry has attached more importance to preserving the internal combustion engine than to finding the best and most effective means of meeting the standards."

Detroit, of course, has sung a different tune.

Muskie sharply criticized that music. He pointed out that Chrysler has complained that nature produces up to 15 times more of the automotive type emissions than man.

"IT IS true that nature produces more carbon monoxide than man does, but not in the high concentrations that are found on city streets. Nature does produce more hydrocarbons than man, but not in high concentrations in the air," Muskie said, quoting a University of Wisconsin scientist.

He also pointed out that the auto industry was sued for an illegal conspiracy in 1969, alleging that it tried to block development of air pollution controls from 1953 through the middle 1960s. The auto manufacturers signed a consent decree in the case without admitting conspiracy but while promising not to do it again.

He also noted tha auto manufacturers "were installing emission control devices on 1973 cars which shut off automatically under many normal driving conditions."

Finally, Muskie pointed out that General Motors is producing a diesel car in Europe that meets the 1975 standards.

The Muskie case is hard to refute. Why can't American manufacturers do here in the United States what the Japanese and Germans, and even some American manufacturers, are doing overseas?

Until the auto industry comes up with some truthful answers to that question they are going to continue to be in trouble.

Nixon signs school lunch funding bill

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) —President Nixon Saturday signed Legislation requiring the government to give cash grants to school lunch programs if the supply of surplus food runs short.

Nixon also signed a bill nullifying controversial new rules of evidence and procedure for the federal courts. The rules were drafted by the Supreme Court and would have taken effect automatically if Congress had not overruled them.

Nixon signed both measures without comment.

The government for years has been donating to school lunch programs a portion of the food the Agriculture Department buys from farmers to keep prices from falling.

When food prices soared to record levels this year, the government suspended most price support purchases. The suspension resulted in shortages of food that would otherwise go to schools.

Under terms of the new law, if the value of donated food drops below $282.3 million, the difference will be paid in cash. The budget for the current fiscal year originally had called for donations of $307.6 million worth of food.

CONSUMER NOTES

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

Health insurance companies have a way of stressing the positive side of being sick: "Collect $100 a week tax free when you go to the hospital," the ad says. Another come-on the Federal Trade Commission says, is the claim: "Even if you have a sickness right now, there is no physical examination required to take advantage of this amazing offer and you will be covered after your policy has been in force for only two years."

The average stay in a hospital is eight days, the Pennsylvania Insurance Department says, and most of these mail-order policies aren't effective until you've been in the hospital eight days. In fact, the odds are one in 230 you won't be in the hospital long enough to collect. Scaled down even more, one in three persons will never collect any money from a mail-order insurance company. The reason for this often is in the fine print: "No benefits for hospitalization for preexisting ailments during the first two policy years."

The Pennsylvania department warns that these policies cover only a very small portion of actual expenses—an average of $100 for an appendectomy which might cost $650.

According to the Pennsylvania department, the average claim paid by these companies was $173—compared to an average hospital stay costing as much as $100 a day.

One final point: These are supplemental health coverage policies and not basic hospital insurance coverage. President Nixon's failure to activate the Consumer Product Safety Commission—called "weak, inadequate and in some cases nonexistent" is sparking a drive by three Senate Commerce Committee members.

Figuring in the attack on the White House's consumer handling, are Senate Commerce Committee Chairman Warren Magnuson, D-Wash.; Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, head of the committee's subcommittee on consumers, and Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., head of a House Interstate Commerce Committee handling consumer matters.

All three men, Women's Wear Daily reports, have "made it amply clear to the White House they think the time is long past for the Consumer Product Safety Commission to be started with five commissioners and given the $30 million Nixon has reportedly earmarked for its work."

Meanwhile, politicians are telling American shoppers to "eat cheese and soy beans—or not eat much food at all—while ignoring the prices of beef and other food stuffs. While politicians are talking down the price of beef, consumers across the country have geared up for the April Food Beef Boycott—a meatless first week in April.

The old upright toasters aren't what they used to be and a new booklet points out that many new models do more than just toast. They can bake pastry, waffles, muffins, potatoes, frozen dinners and even bake a meal.

To help consumers choose the features they want in a new toaster, the General Services Administration has published a booklet, "Automatic Toasters," available for 30 cents from Consumer Product Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Jail or work, student radical chooses latter

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (UPI) — A judge has ordered a 24-year-old radical activist to keep away from a state university or go to jail.

"I first met you when you were 19 years old. You had gotten in trouble at the university and I came to the sixth precinct from my home because I didn't want you to have to spend the night in jail," District Judge Morton Weissman told Mitchell Cohen Friday.

"Since then you have been convicted of two crimes. You are 24 years old now. You have the ability to lead, as demonstrated by the 18 other students having been arrested with you."

"Having read your probation report, the indication is you should go to jail."

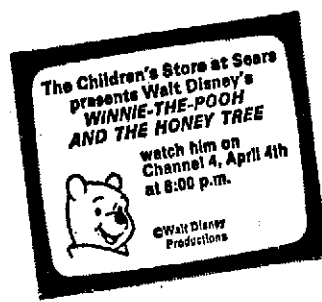

THE JUDGE then let Cohen choose between 99 days imprisonment or getting a steady job and keeping away from the State University at Stony Brook for one year. Cohen chose the second alternative.

Cohen was recently convicted of criminal trespass for occupying a campus office one year ago with 18 others when the university refused to permit a radical conference on campus.

The campus ban means Cohen won't be able to attend the June graduation ceremony, which he planned to do after finishing the last assigned term paper needed for a degree.

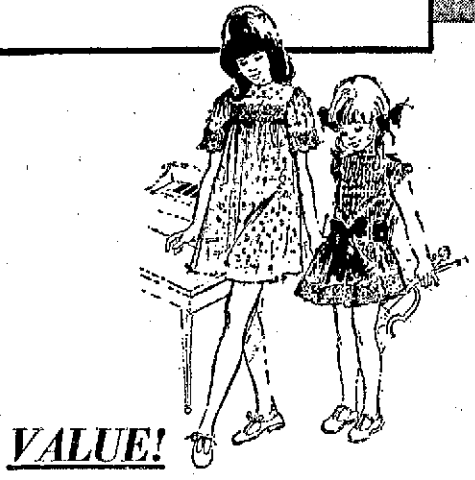

"I didn't get to attend my graduation either," the judge said.

Judge orders end to strike at hospitals

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A Maryland judge ordered more than 3,000 striking hospital workers to end their one-day walkout Saturday, and Gov. Marvin Mandel threatened to fire them all if the strike continued.

Ernest B. Crofoot, director of Union Council 87 of American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees said the members "will not be intimidated by the governor."

He had no immediate reaction to the injunction issued by Baltimore County Circuit Court Judge John Grayson Turnbull shortly before Mandel's mid-afternoon deadline for an end to the strike.

Three of the four hospitals struck by dietitians, nurse's aides and custodial workers treat the mentally and physically handicapped.

The union is demanding a 10 per cent wage increase, and Mandel said the state did not have the money for it.

They don't get the bends Dolphins help survival studies

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

Navy scientists have trained dolphins to dive 1,000 feet and discovered the animals undergo a chest collapse that helps them to operate at that depth. The studies are considered crucial in preparing men to live in space or on the ocean floor.

Dr. Sam Ridgway, research veterinarian at the Navy Undersea Center on San Diego's Point Loma, said his studies were revealing secrets of dolphins' physiology which are important to better understanding of human systems.

He said the dolphin shows a flexibility in the deep ocean that man lacks.

"When the dolphin dives, his whole chest collapses — all the air passages and cavities right down to the finest cells in the lung," he said.

Dr. Ridgway said the dolphins were trained to make deep dives in response to sounds beamed into the water. The animals also are trained to push down on a plunger on the ocean floor — turning on a light so a camera can take their picture.

"DOLPHINS have lung and bronchial tissues which are much stronger and more resilient than humans. But they are like human skin divers in holding their breath when they dive.

"As water pressure increases with depth, the air in their lungs is compressed and air chambers shrink, both in dolphins and man.

"The dolphin can continue down until air passages collapse and this does him no harm," Dr. Ridgway said.

He said, too, the average man experiences a "chest squeeze syndrome," causing hemorrhaging from lung tissues, starting around 100 feet down.

Dolphins absorb little gas in their blood during the deeper parts of a dive, Dr. Ridgway said.

"This is built-in protection against bends, or decompression sickness. We also have trained our animals to exhale into a funnel after coming up from a deep dive. They know how to push a button about 50 feet from the surface which in turn triggers an exhale response.

"THE FUNNEL is right under their nose which is located on the highest point of their forehead. The exhaled gases go into a container at the top of the funnel and are now available for analysis," he said.

Bends, probably divers' most vexing problem and often fatal, are caused by breathing gases under pressure with resultant absorption into the blood stream. When ascending too fast these gases are released abruptly.

"It is like a bottle of champagne," Dr. Ridgway said. "Dissolved gas builds up in the wine as it ages and this gas is held in by the cork. When the cork comes out gas comes out of solution in bubbles.

"THE SAME thing happens in a diver's blood. It gets charged with inspired gases, mostly nitrogen, during deep dives. If the diver surfaces too fast, bubbles form in the bloodstream to block circulation.

"This hazard normally is associated in diving with breathing apparatus but a breath-holding skin diver also can get the bends by making several deep dives in a short period," he said.

Dr. Ridgway added that the difference between a human diver and a dolphin is that the human's system keeps on absorbing inspired gas readily at depths while the dolphin does not.

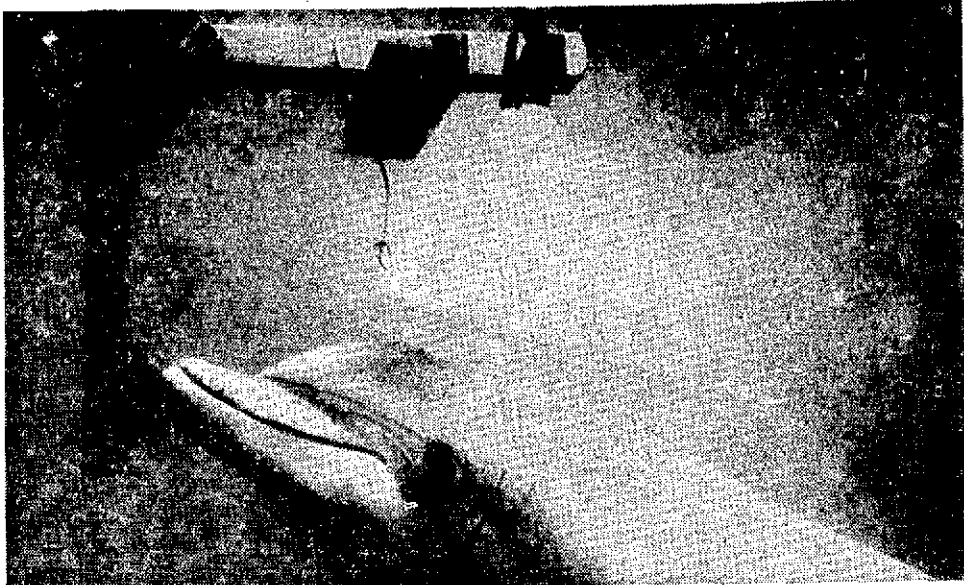

"We hope our studies will enable us to learn how this amazing animal does this. We may find out next week or next year," Dr. Ridgway said.

RIDGWAY recently returned from England where he received his doctorate at the Cambridge University. He has been active in the Navy's marine mammal research program since its inception in 1960.

"I started in the Air Force Veterinary Corps at Oxnard AFB and got interested in the dolphins then at the Naval Missile Center at nearby Point Mugu. I've been with the dolphins ever since," he said.

Ridgway trained "Tuffy," the now famous SEALAB II porpoise, in 1965-66.

Currently he has 10-12 porpoises cavorting in their pools at the undersea center.

NAVY SCIENTISTS have trained dolphins to perform many scientific experiments under water, and a few prosaic tricks, like turning on a light, so a camera can take their picture. In a similar feat, the dolphin touches a buzzer and exhales into a funnel after a deep dive. The exhaled gasses are analyzed for studies on how to deal with the bends which afflict human divers. Dolphins' chests 'collapse' during deep dive, apparently eliminating conditions which cause bends.

Diplomat to speak on Israel

Israel's consul general in the Southland, Yakov Aviad, will address the annual luncheon of the Combined Service Clubs of Greater Long Beach at the Lafayette Thursday.

The luncheon, devoted to the topic of Israel, is a highlight in a series of community events in tribute to Israel's 25th anniversary of statehood.

Aviad, whose topic will be "Israel Today," will be introduced by Temple Sinai's Rabbi Sidney S. Guthman, chaplain to the Optimist Club which is hosting this year's meeting.

Co-sponsor of the luncheon is the Long Beach Israel Silver Celebration Committee.

Aviad was born in Berlin in 1925 and his family settled in Jerusalem in 1933. He was with the Royal Air Force in Egypt during World War II, and later served with the Israel Defense Forces.

In 1948 he was private secretary to Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Israel's first president.

Aviad has served in press relations and information capacities at Israeli posts in Paris and New York, and before appointment to his current position last November was deputy consul general in charge of political affairs at the consulate in New York.

The consulate in Los Angeles is responsible for Southern California, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Hawaii.

The luncheon is open to all service club members and their guests. Further information may be obtained from the Optimist Club, at 140 Linden Ave.

Participating organizations include the Downtown Kiwanis Club, Rotary Club of Long Beach, Downtown Lions Club and the Exchange Club.

The Silver Celebration Committee, headed by Municipal Judge Charles Litwin, with Shelli Saferstein, co-ordinator, also announced the following community events:

April 12—Annual dinner of the National Conference of Christians and Jews aboard the Queen Mary. Martin Landau will speak on "Israel Today."

April 28—Israel fashion show and "gourmet dessert" at Belmont Plaza, 8 p.m. Guest fashion commentator will be Mike Roy.

Month of May—All Long Beach Public Library branches will focus on Israel with children's storytelling, films, displays of Israeli books and records. Special programs will be held Thursday nights at the El Dorado branch.

May 6—Noon Birthday Party at Recreation Park, Seventh Street and Park Avenue, with a picnic, children's sports events, the Long Beach Municipal Band playing Israeli music, and a tribute ceremony with Mayor Edwin Wade and Councilwomen Renee Simon and Sheila Pokras. The public is invited.

May 9, 16, 23 and 30—A lecture-forum series at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave., on Israel's 25 years.

May 12—"Voices of Israel," a dramatic presentation of readings and music at the Jewish Community Center, 8 p.m.

May 19—An Israeli coffee house, "Cafe Israel," at the Jewish Community Center, at 8 p.m., planned by students at Long Beach State University and teen-age groups.

Month of June—An Israel "Historical Photographic Exhibit" of the work of local amateur photographers who have visited Israel since 1948. The exhibit will be in the lobby of the Jewish Community Center.

July 15 to August 25—The first showing of a recent gift of 46 Chagall prints to the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2380 E. Ocean Blvd.

High note for Easter Seal sing-a-thon

By KRIS DULANEY
Staff Writer

Ed Downey may not have cut any records during his 49-hour, virtually nonstop, sing-a-thon, but when the music stopped at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, he had broken one.

Beads of sweat clinging to his moustache and the last twang still echoing from his guitar, the 21-year-old Huntington Beach vocalist stepped from the makeshift stage in the Huntington Center Shopping Plaza as the new owner of the world's nonstop singing record.

But that didn't matter much to Downey, whose on-the-mall performance was actually a unique campaign to raise money for the National Easter Seal Foundation.

"I feel tired, but I'm happy," said the singer, his voice unstrained, less than an hour before the final note.

"I'm gonna sing as long as I can," he added. "The world's record is incidental; what's important is that we're doing this for the crippled children. But unless we get a lot more donations, I'm gonna be kinda disappointed."

Sipping a soft drink in the midst of one of his rare breaks, the troubadour confessed that "my fingers feel like hamburger." He said that at one point he almost quit, in fact, "I wanted to cry. I really wanted to stop, but I had to go on."

Though plagued by some hoarseness, the desire to sleep and the creeping numbness in his guitar-strumming fingers, Downey said the presence of crowds and the continuance of donations kept him going.

He praised his manager, Mel Lindheim, who initiated and planned the event; his accompanist, 22-year-old Andre Martel, who often provided back-up guitar and "gave me moral support throughout this whole and Shirley Arconti, whose modeling school served as headquarters for the fund-raising activities.

Downey said he had no idea exactly how much money had been collected, but he added that he was sure the donations were "substantial. No matter how much we collect," he said hoarsely, "it's never enough."

But when Ed Downey quit Saturday, there was an entire trash can full of currency and coins, earmarked for the foundation's aid to crippled children.

And the young singer had, by one hour, topped the world's record in his chosen field. Lindheim said judges had camped at the center during the entire sing-a-thon, and their notarized statements will be mailed to the publishers of the Guinness Book of World Records as soon as possible.

Downey, nursing his raspy vocal cords and trying to shake loose his muscles, merely concluded:

"I don't think I'd go through it again to break a record; it's just too much trouble. But when you're doing something for a cause, there's a world of difference.

"For the crippled children, I think I'd do it all again."

Alcoholism school cuts recidivism

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Who says you can't teach an old drunk new ways?

Not the South Cities School for Prevention and Treatment of Alcoholism.

After a three-year experimental course in survival they've come up with some indications: Those who overindulge in the sauce and get caught are doing it less and less — after they've been to school.

This week, results of a sampling of some of the 4,000-plus students in the course (which is mandatory for offenders in three judicial districts) showed that the program is both effective and appreciated.

Recidivism rates are down dramatically, reports Mrs. Dorothy Costain, director of the city Health Department's Drug and Alcohol Abuse Center which operates the re-education project.

The school, which opened April 6, 1970, as an early warning system for detecting and educating potential alcoholics also has these kudos from attendants:

"Thanks for the awakening," an older man told Mrs. Costain.

"This is a new one — somebody wants to help me instead of put me down," a young student wrote her.

"I'm not perfect ... but thanks to a kind judge I can now face life with a better view ... Thank you for taking the time and hard work to care about me," a young housewife scribbled on lined notepaper.

The statistics were collected from random samplings provided by court clerks in Long Beach, Compton and Los Cerritos.

Through the 18 courtrooms in the three districts have passed the 4,155 men and women who have made up the student body at the Health Center auditorium.

The school, product of a year of planning by the center, civic leaders, and judges, was designed to combat what community spokesmen called one of the area's leading public health problems. A repeat rate of 36 per cent among drunk drivers and an even higher repeat rate for other drunk arrests in Long Beach and comparable rates in the other two districts pointed up the problem.

Those who benefit most from the classes, those whose repeat rate is low or non-existent, tend to be more inclined to follow rules, have fewer drinking violations, have higher incomes, get involved in less accidents and are older than those who didn't take the classes. Their major problem is alcohol and most of them didn't know it, she summarizes.

In addition to paying students ($10 for drunk drivers, $5 for drunks — but in hardship cases fees are sometimes waived) the classes also are attended by several dozen spectators. Some sit in with spouses, some are simply curious, others are "graduates" who return for another session or two.

The curriculum, available to students and visitors each Tuesday from 7-9 p.m., includes alcohol as anaesthetic, social vs compulsive drinking, potential alcoholism diseases, addiction, laws on drinking and driving and community resources for the inebriated problem drinker. Instructors are medical and legal professionals and advisers from Alcoholics Anonymous.

AUTOGYRO . . . Combining the Best Features of Airplane and Helicopter

Versatile craft

3 new autogyros unveiled

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

The autogyro idea never dies. It just keeps coming back under new management.

The latest revival is by Aero Resources, Inc., of Gardena, who last week unveiled three models, including a trainer and one so new it doesn't yet have an official name.

Aero Resources is a public stock company formed by aerospace manufacturer George J. Morton as the successor to McCulloch Aircraft Corp. of Lake Havasu City, Arizona.

When last heard of, McCulloch had just about cornered the autogyro market in 1970 with the development of the two-place J-2, an adaptation of a Spanish invention of the early 1920s. Engineer Juan de la Cierva flew his first successful model in 1923.

The original autogyro combined the best features of the airplane and helicopter, while avoiding some of the disadvantages of both. It flew like an airplane with a conventional propeller in the nose, but its free-wheeling rotary wing allowed a safe, parachute-like descent in case of engine failure.

After acquisition of the McCulloch rights, Morton moved the manufacturing and engineering facilities from Arizona to their present location at 14439 S. Avalon Blvd., to continue production of the J-2 trainer and commercial model. Since then, Aero Resources has developed a souped-up version under the engineering designation of J-200.

In demonstration flights at Compton Airport, company pilot Bill Evans put the new aircraft through its paces. Alone in the cockpit and ballasted to simulate a passenger, Evans revved up the rotor to 500 revolutions per minute and took off with a maximum ground roll of 90 feet time after time.

He also demonstrated near-vertical landings with the engine throttled back, touching down in virtually the same spot each time with a rollout of no more than 20 feet. On one takeoff, he cut the engine to simulate engine-out performance at the most critical point. The gyrocopter settled briefly and harmlessly to the ground, then leaped back in the air as Evans opened the throttle.

The climax of the demonstration was a spectacular dead-stick landing from an altitude of approximately 500 feet. With the pusher propeller standing still, the gyro silently auto-rotated to a landing on exactly the same marker point as the powered landings.

The McCulloch and Aero Resources gyros differ from the original de la Cierva design principally in that they incorporate a propeller in the rear of the passenger cabin instead of the nose. There is about a foot of clearance between the small pusher prop and the overhead rotor.

Engines also are upgraded from the 1923 model. The J-200 uses a four-cylinder fuel injection Lycoming power plant developing 200 horsepower. The other two models have 180-horsepower Lycomings with conventional carburetion.

In a brief news conference following the demonstrations, Chairman Morton pointed out that the company is working on a fourth design with a larger cockpit to accommodate the pilot and two passengers. This would be primarily useful in air taxi work and similar applications.

Other markets for the autogyro were a little harder to define, he admitted.

"We know the market is there because of prior sales," Morton said. "We're looking for people who need something in that wide area between the helicopter and fixed-wing aircraft."

"Safety is our best feature. In five years of flying the autogyro, no one has been injured, and the J-2 has not had one property damage claim. We have had a few accidents in testing, but the pilot walked away every time."

Company spokesmen said 92 J-2 aircraft are now flying throughout the world, and the firm has a backlog of 16 orders for the $22,000 craft. A staff of 20 is now working at the Gardena plant.

The J-200, which will have a price tag of $24,000 after certification by the Federal Aviation Administration, will be placed on display at the Paris Air Show in May.

Half of fighting is in the mind

She teaches women self defense, self love

By MARK CLUTTER
Staff Writer

Betty Brooks, who teaches sweet young ladies the vicious arts of street fighting, believes that women can sharply reduce the incidence of forcible rape by learning to love themselves better.

"I teach them variations of judo and karate and tricks like eye gouging," she said. "It is difficult to teach women to fight. Perhaps half my students do learn, but it is a rare woman who can truly come out of her passivity."

"What I'm really trying to teach them is that they have options in life. They don't have to submit. Half of fighting is in the mind."

Ms. Brooks — she prefers Ms. although she is a wife and a mother — teaches courses in self-defense for women at Cerritos College and Long Beach City College. She also teaches swimming at LBSU.

But she is also a crusader against injustices suffered by women. She is a key member of Women Against Sexual Abuse, a small, young organization which meets every Wednesday, 8 to 10 p.m., at the Downey Congregational Church at 9516 Downey Ave., Downey. Anyone is welcome to attend.

"So far our work has been mostly research," she said. "We are getting all the information we can find about gang rapes, attitudes of the police hospital practices, the psychological trauma to victims, ways of helping victims and ways of changing social attitudes. The women do research on specific subjects and report their findings at the meeting."

"I hope our movement will catch on and become a powerful force throughout the area. The problem is greater than most people realize."

"Rape increased 11 per cent last year throughout the nation. There is a forcible rape reported every 13 minutes. It can happen to any woman. Age, clothing and conduct are not important factors."

"In Los Angeles County there were 365 rape convictions in 1972. There were 22,000 rapes reported. Most rapes are not reported. Some estimates are as high as 90 per cent. They are not reported because of the attitudes of women."

"Victims should report rapes and go to the hospital. We strongly urge that a victim take a woman with her. The police are in a double bind. First of all, they have to determine whether a crime has been committed. This can lead to a long, disturbing interview for a woman who has already undergone a traumatic experience. If there is another woman present the interview is usually much shorter."

"The police are not trained to handle rape correctly. They don't understand. I used to think that policemen would be more understanding. I don't think so now."

The victim often finds her morals on trial, both in the police station and the courtroom. This, Ms. Brooks believes, is the wrong approach.

"The question is whether the woman was the victim of physical violence at the hands of the suspect," she said. "What she is doing with her life hasn't anything to do with it. I favor the move to have the law changed to make rape a form of assault."

The whole problem of rape is linked with folklore derived from religious and racial myths, she said.

But religion, rightly understood, should help women to prevent crimes against them and to respect themselves, she believes.

"I was taught that our duty is to love God, our neighbors and ourselves. This is impossible if one doesn't have self-love. That comes first. We must teach women to feel good about their bodies."

"Loving one's self means willingness to defend one's self. All violence is abhorrent, but it is even worse to accept evil without struggle. You have a religious right to live."

"Women who have been raped need help beyond medical care — which oddly enough is sometimes hard to get. Many suffer severe psychological trauma. They have deep feelings of shame and guilt. Sometimes just talking to an understanding person may help. Others have deep-seated problems which demand professional help," Ms. Brooks said.

Editorial

At the end of a long war

America's longest war is over, but its wounds remain.

There are wounds to the national spirit.

There are wounds to our economic well-being.

WORST OF ALL there is the permanent loss of many of our finest young men who died in battle and in the enemy's prison camps. Others will bear the physical and mental scars of battle and prison camps for the rest of their lives.

The nation owes these men, as it owes those who fought and emerged whole in body and mind, a debt it cannot repay.

The magnitude of that debt is emphasized now by the reports returning prisoners of war are at last free to give. They report beatings, torture and forced confession to "war crimes." And they report feelings of guilt and self-hatred that seem not to have lingered, and that we all pray will not return.

There were Americans safe at home, or on Communist-conducted tours of Hanoi, who felt those same feelings, not because they had surrendered to enemy demands but because their country had not.

FOR THESE Americans, there may be lessons in fortitude to be learned from the returned prisoners. There may be lessons, too, to be learned from the prisoners' report of their reaction to the escalated bombing of North Vietnam that so disturbed many Americans.

The prisoners found the bombing reassuring. "We snickered and hooted and hollered and laughed," one said, "because we knew that meant President Nixon was getting us out."

It did mean that, even if those of us in more fortunate circumstances could not snicker and hoot and holler and laugh.

It meant that, even if not all of us at home perceived it.

THIS LACK of belief does not discredit the good will of all of those Americans who wanted to believe that Hanoi was always gentle in spirit and America always sadistic.

Many will be quite willing to make the painful acknowledgment that their judgment was faulty. Some of the more outspoken public figures such as Ramsey Clark and Jane Fonda will have their chance now in light of the stories of torture to let the public know their reactions. It will be interesting to see whether by statement, action or even silence they continue to hold and support their strong pro-Hanoi views.

The inner struggles many individuals have faced and continue to face in sorting out their feelings about the Vietnam struggle could be one of the more lasting wounds of this war.

WHAT LINCOLN CALLED "this mighty scourge of war" is always ugly, and it flays the innocent and the guilty alike.

Not since the Civil War has a conflict so scarred this nation. But we can say now, as Lincoln said then, that our task is "to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan — to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

Driving meat prices down

President Nixon's order freezing wholesale and retail prices of beef, pork and lamb will not bring us sirloin at hamburger prices, but it will at least guarantee that we won't be buying hamburger at sirloin prices.

The guarantee is not a permanent one, however, because the price freeze — even though desirable on a short-term basis — will not by itself solve the problems of supply and demand that resulted in rising meat prices. Nor is the freeze likely to drive prices down.

THE PRESIDENT'S request for cooperation from farmers and housewives was thus as important a part of his move as was the freeze on meat prices.

If meat boycotts by housewives are met by counter-boycotts by ranchers, the effect on prices could be disastrous in the long run.

Even without boycotts and counter-boycotts, there is inherent danger in the meat price freeze. Even though it does not directly affect farm prices, its indirect effect is just as certain and just about as fast as if it did.

WHOLESALESAERS CANNOT afford to pay more for meat than the price at which they can sell it. So a restriction on wholesale prices is an indirect but real restriction on farm prices.

If that restriction forces farmers to cut meat production, they will not be able immediately to resume it at its former scale once the restriction is lifted. So the government will need to watch closely the effect the price freeze has on meat production. The same situation applies to all government prices and other economic controls. A free economic system is the best guarantee we have to remain a strong and prosperous nation.

The new freeze came at a time when wholesale meat prices were declining slightly. The freeze allows some flexibility in those prices, so some increases from current levels are possible. This flexibility should minimize the danger that the freeze will cut meat supplies now. But liberal Democrat William Proxmire and conservative Republican Barry Goldwater were both right in cautioning that the danger exists.

IMPOSITION OF the price ceiling will not eliminate the consumer resistance to high meat prices. The thrust of administration officials' advice in this regard remains sound, even if it has brought some derision on their heads for suggesting that cheese, fish, turkeys or calf brains would make good menu substitutes for steaks. There is no satisfactory substitute for a steak, of course, but there is no satisfactory substitute for abalone or kidneys, either.

If enough Americans turn to cheaper cuts of meat and to other foods, and turn to them with regularity, they will play a more significant role than the President and Congress can play in keeping meat prices in line.

Nutritionists insist that from a health standpoint many of our most expensive convenience foods and most elaborate desserts are bad for us.

THE AVERAGE American today eats about twice as much beef as the average American did 60 years ago. He eats a great deal more ice cream, too, and he uses considerably more sugar. But he eats less than a third as many apples.

Many of us are being forced by current food prices to re-evaluate our family diets. If we're smart about it, we can help bring down prices and bring up our health at the same time.

Roth in stretch for the bouquet

One could describe Bill Roth, metaphorically, as a big butter and egg man and thus dispose of the credentialing chore.

The alternative and usual practice is to pack the gentleman's effects of stature into a Britanic paragraph at tale's end. There it's easiest for the editor to lop off, for the reader to ignore. This account will use the sprinkle system, dropping the man's credits in between paragraphs, like this:

(Regent, University of California). William Matson Roth, 56, of San Francisco, complained by telegram and metaphor last week that he has "often catered the wedding but never been the groom," and so "I now seriously intend to canvass the state on the possibility of running for governor on the Democratic ticket."

(Director of Crocker-Citizens National Bank, Norton Simon, Inc. and Athenium Publishers).

Bob Houser

Political Editor

"It is true there are already five good candidates, any one of which I could support," wired Roth. "Nevertheless it is worth pursuing the question of whether or not a business executive with important governmental experience under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson could offer the electorate the strongest possible alternative to whatever Republican candidate may emerge."

(Ambassador rank, special representative for trade negotiations, executive office of the President, 1963-1969).

Roth's canvass, he said, would allow him to get from the people "a sense of the strengths and failures of our government and its leaders. I do not ask for your support at this time..."

As the telegram was read, Roth was sitting in Amsterdam on a business trip and unavailable for convenient comment. A friend, reached in Northern California, volunteered, "A lot of his acquaintances say Bill Roth could be the greatest California governor in history — if he were appointed to the job."

(General partner, Ghirardelli Square, San Francisco).

(Member, Yale University Council).

(Director, Rosenberg Foundation).

Appointed? There's the rub. The system allows of no appointive Gentleman Jims to head the state. The prize is to the competitive swift, the primary maulers, the general election executioners.

And so Bill Roth has launched his cram course in Queensbury "to find out what the people think of the other candidates and what they think of him." Come June, a polling outfit will take a reading to assay the glass content of Roth's jaw.

(Matson Navigation Co., treasurer, director, vice president, 1951-1959).

Roth has been on the angelic fringe (money heaven) of politics for 20 years, raising money for most of the big-name Democratic state and federal candidates, thus his reference to catering the weddings.

The goad now, beyond the infectious tangency of those electoral romances, is that Roth keeps being told by off-the-record Democrats that they are not particularly impressed with the current field of Democratic gubernatorial contenders: San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, State Senate Majority Leader George Mosecone and Congressman Jerome R. Waldie.

(Member, advisory council, School of Advanced International Studies, John Hopkins University).

(Trustee, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton; Carnegie Institution of Washington; The Conservation Foundation; San Francisco Maritime Museum).

Roth was northern finance chairman for Adlai Stevenson's presidential runs in 1952 and 1956, was a Democratic National Convention delegate in '56, '60 and '64, was northern finance chairman for all of Pat Brown's gubernatorial races and for John F. Kennedy's 1960 campaign.

President and trustee, San Francisco Museum of Art; trustee, San Francisco Planning and Urban Renewal Association).

In 1970, Roth was a member of the executive committee in John Tunney's successful campaign for the U.S. Senate. He was northern chairman for Sen. Edmund Muskie's campaign in the primary and for Sen. George McGovern in the 1972 general election. He is a member of Americans for Democratic Action.

There is an inconsistent axiom that the candidate with the shorter name usually wins big elections. For example, consider recent history of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors: Legg, Hahn, Ford, Chace, Debs, Dorn, Hayes and Ward. (Governor, The Atlantic Institute; governor, San Francisco Symphony Association).

Thus, Bill Roth shouldn't be defeated by anybody short of Tom Mix. But he must agonize over abandoning "William Matson Roth." In a short term recognition battle among the professional maulers at hand, the Matson line at least could conjure a nostalgic denominator, "Steamboat round the bend!"

(1974, moxie contender for the title from the northern sticks??).

DIOGENES IN WONDERLAND

Bond seeks redistricting solution

SACRAMENTO—Bill Bond's biggest liability as a legislator may turn out to be an asset for the citizens of California.

Bond is a freshman assemblyman from Long Beach, and while he has considerable experience in county government, he is the first to acknowledge that there are things about state government he still does not know after three months in the legislature.

Bob Schmidt

VIEW FROM OUR STATE BUREAU

SENIORITY IS a powerful factor in California's statehouse, as it is in most other seats of government. Freshmen legislators, particularly if they are of the minority party, get what office space is left over, what committee assignments are left over, and are pretty much expected to be seen but not heard as they sit patiently watching the cunning political use of political machinery by their experienced superiors (many of whom were themselves freshmen two year ago).

But while lack of experience in the political grist mill which is the legislature may mean ignorance of the amenities, protocols, traditions and accepted ways of doing things, given importance by custom, that same lack may also mean ignorance of the faults, barriers, and cobwebs which inhibit improvement of the system.

Take reapportionment for instance. (As a vaudeville comedian might have said, "Please, somebody take reapportionment.")

THE LEGISLATURE should have redrawn California's congressional, Senate, and Assembly districts in 1971, after the 1970 federal census was completed. At least, the constitution says it should have.

However, understandably but not excusably, party interests and self-interest combined to block reapportionment in 1971, in 1972, and, in all probability, will block it again in 1973.

The problem would be no problem if the governor and the legislative majority were of the same party. Plans would be enacted which protected the majority party and the individuals the leadership wished to protect, and the minority could do nothing but grumble and wait its inevitable turn to inflict reapportionment on the opposition and the people.

But, with Gov. Reagan a Republican and Democrats dominating the legislature, there was a problem. There is, still, a problem.

AS IS TRADITIONAL, with members of the minority party, Gov. Reagan has assumed a statesmanlike stance and declared that it is a clear conflict of interest for the legislature to attempt to perform a task in which the individual members have so high a personal stake.

Democratic leaders, predictably, are aghast at such a suggestion, and insist that reapportionment is, indeed, a legislative function.

The governor is right, of course, even if it is doubtful he would have made the assertion had Republicans controlled the two houses in 1971.

Bond came into the legislature in January and immediately got caught up in the crunch as Democrats in the Assembly tried, very nearly successfully, to appeal to each Republican's desire for personal political survival.

And, being of the minority party, he could afford to say, "The obvious solution to this problem is to take the authority for reapportionment out of the hands of the legislature."

But, in the past, statements like that inevitably drew the question "OK., where are you going to find a truly nonpartisan group of people to accomplish this highly political function?"

AND NO ONE, yet, has come up with an answer.

The supreme court does not want the job, because it is arduous and time-consuming and because it would subject it to extreme political pressures.

So the fact of the conflict is asserted by the "out" party at every reapportionment, and there it has lain.

Bond says that need not be so.

There must be a way, he said, to put together people whose sense of responsibility exceeds their partisan bias, with procedures which can insulate them from the political pressures.

He says he took out his register of the organizations which are enough involved in government to send lobbyists to the Capitol, and selected "statewide groups and organizations which have experience and knowledge of governmental operations."

HE IS ASKING these groups for advice.

Already, he has talked to representatives of Common Cause, the League of Women Voters, the League of California Cities, the County Supervisors, the California Broadcasters' Assn., the California Newspaper Publishers Assn., and the California Taxpayers Assn.

He intends also to talk to the NAACP, the Mexican-American Political Assn., the American Civil Liberties Union, the Western Center on Law and Poverty, the American Society for Public Administrators, and Democratic and Republican party leaders.

Friday he met with Orange County Superior Court Judge Bruce Summer, who is also chairman of the California Constitutional Revision Commission. He plans to ask help from universities, and from students. He also met Friday with Genero P. Castillo, co-director of the student lobby at Long Beach State.

He is convinced he says, that a solution is possible, and he admits that his ruminations have already helped him develop a plan around which future conversations can be centered.

MAYBE IF Bond were a more experienced legislator he would have been convinced of the futility of what he is now trying to do, and he wouldn't have tried it.

But he is trying it, and he seems to be the only legislator who is.

The court will probably wind up taking care of reapportionment in time for the 1974 election, but the problem might come up again in 1981 unless Bond's or a similar effort is successful.

And, considering the damage to California's dignity the present embarrassing legislative futility has inflicted, success is a necessity.

At last, Watergate bugs the GOP

The Wall Street Journal recently published a lengthy list of lamentations by Republican leaders on the Watergate mess, no longer lightly alluded to as "the Watergate caper," or a mere capricious escapade by some rollicking politicians.

Says the Journal: "Republicans fear the administration and the party could be harmed irreparably if the President doesn't swiftly clean up the Watergate mess. They are angered by what they consider arrogant and inept White House handling of the Watergate charges, and they want a housecleaning for no other reason than that."

Other quotes: "None of us were involved. If they go down, let them swim their way to shore." — Conservative GOP Sen. Peter Dominick of Colorado.

"These people around Nixon deserve whatever they get. They don't know their tail from their elbow about politics. They're the most inept and arrogant crew I've ever seen." — A senior House Republican.

"We're all deeply concerned as party people...the longer we go with unanswered questions, the worse off the party's going to be in 1974." — L. Keith Bolen, Indiana state GOP chairman.

And so it goes. The people who originally called the Watergate revelations "just politics," and averred that "both parties do it," are having some queasy afterthoughts on the subject of public morality.

WHILE I MAKE no claim to prescience, please forgive me if I offer a reminder of what I was saying on that subject in this column some five months ago prior to the presidential election.

Example: "I have been sorely troubled in recent months by the Watergate revelations, the ITT fiasco, the bungling and improper actions of the White House staff, alleged irregularities in campaign contributions, the tip-off to grain dealers on the sale of wheat to Russia, and the crude insensitivity of the Nixon administration to these and other infringements of our nation's laws."

Example: "I like Richard Nixon, and respect him for his achievements. But the time has come for a friend to cry out against the cynical disregard for truth and honesty by the Mitchells, Halde-mans and other members of the unscrupulous palace guard."

BEYOND THAT, I wrote the President on Oct. 30, 1972, and quote in part from that letter: "In the event of your re-election which appears to be assured at this time, I hope you will reflect upon some of what I have said, and act to re-

WEA CREEK TO ELDORADO: Oil in Kansas. By Francis W. Schruben. Univ. of Missouri Press, $8.

Oil in Kansas? All is not corn and wheat in that state from which many a Southern Californian has come. Oil has played a leading part in the state's economy, and historian Schruben, himself a Kansan, gives us an exciting account of the big bonanza, and Kansas oil's ups, downs, and ups again. Especially interesting is the battle between the small independents and Standard Oil. — H.

Firm admits greed led to price

Some years back, April Fool's Day became so popular in America that the one day was not enough to satisfy people.

"Gosh," people all over the country said when, at the stroke of the midnight dividing April 1 from April 2, they had to quit making fools of other people by sending them to the store for hen's teeth and to the zoo to see the two-legged snake.

"Gosh, why can't we have another day to make fools of each other? Or even a long holiday weekend?"

This being America, the dream began the reality. Soon we had not only April Fool's Day, but also May Fool's Day and March Fool's Day, too.

People loved it. It spread like professional football on television. We soon had September Fool's Day and October Fool's Day. And then Monday Night Fool's Day.

Eventually we reached the state in which we now abide. Nowadays, every day is a Fool's Day, and frankly — let's admit it, even though it sounds unpatriotic — it can be tiresome.

What we need is one day a year off from Fool's Days.

On this day everybody would be — what? Certainly not serious.

Generals, undertakers and presidents are serious. Being serious is the oldest con game. It was first worked by a cave man to get his brother's place by the fire.

"Seriously now," he told the poor fool brother, "sitting that close to the fire is what's causing your acne."

We do not want a serious day, but a passive kind of day. Its pleasures would flow from negatives — things that are not done, poses not struck, double-crosses postponed until tomorrow.

RUSSELL BAKER

It would be a day made sweet by our knowing that for 24 hours no one would try to gull us.

Imagine waking on such a morning! The mind flooding with thoughts of the pleasures ahead on this magic day.

Simply to live a whole day without having to keep your hand on your wallet! There might even be a pleasant outbreak of candor. Downstairs over coffee, newsmakers might level with you in magic one-day-a-year newspapers.

If you turned to television, the salesgirl demonstrating the new spray for suppressing navel odor would announce afterwards that people who worry about smelling like people may be unnatural and should consult a psychiatrist.

Important people may oppose this day of respite, since the more important a man gets, the bigger a stake he has in fool's days.

They may fear that giving us a day's taste of the alternative to foolhood would threaten the powerful Importance Structure and fear we would acquire a troublesome taste for this sort of thing.

Senator Soaper

IS FREE SPEECH an issue here? If the government can demand the truth on cereal boxes, couldn't it also rewrite book jacket blurbs?

NOTHING CAN STOP an idea whose time has come, unless its proponents bore everybody to death.

SOME PEOPLE are calling for one meatless day a week. Others would like to be able to cut it down to that few.

IN SOME PARTS of the country, they are called chuckholes, while others refer to them as pot-holes. Universally, however, they're called about the same by the motorist who hits one.

move the causes of embarrassment to your administration.

"It is a very great tragedy indeed that the high esteem in which you have been held should be tarnished by stupid blunderers who have caused many loyal members of your party to become disenchanted."

John S. Knight

Editorial Chairman, Knight Newspapers

No reply was received although I have heard from President Nixon in recent months on another subject. Either my communication was intercepted in the outer offices of the White House, or the President simply chose to ignore it.

In either case, the wonderment persists as to why an administration which had been eminently successful in foreign affairs permitted itself to become entrapped by the lowest forms of political skulduggery.

For it was all so stupid and unnecessary. Nixon had the election won. There was no need for the Committee to Re-elect the President to play slick tricks.

I am not charging that President Nixon knew about the reprehensible schemes that were invoked in his behalf. Yet it is passing strange that a man so deeply involved in partisan politics for most of his life could be completely unaware of the goings-on by his re-election committee.

IN ANY EVENT, the nation's confidence in the integrity of this administration has been sorely shaken. If President Nixon did learn of the Watergate scheme in time, he could have called in the perpetrators and said: "Boys, knock it off!"

If the President didn't know, and was thoroughly surprised by the Watergate revelations, he should have called for an independent investigation and spared the FBI the ignominy of being considered as merely a political adjunct to the White House.

President Harry Truman suffered his share of embarrassment caused by Gen. Harry Vaughan and other White House cronies. But when President Eisenhower learned that former Gov. Sherman Adams, his trusted White House chief of staff, had been accepting gifts and favors, Adams had to go.

The point is that no matter how large the electoral mandate, or how successfully a President performs in many areas, he cannot permit the highest office in the land to be touched with scandal.

Yet President Nixon has chosen to erect a protective shield around members of his executive staff by denying Congress the right to elicit testimony from them which might clarify and illuminate a sorry situation.

It all defies comprehension.

'MISS WELCOME TO LONG BEACH' CONTESTANTS
As They Awaited Judgment on Semi-Finalists

Semifinalists chosen in Miss L.B. contest

Ten semifinalists came a little closer to the title of "Miss Welcome to Long Beach" Saturday at a beauty pageant staged by the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce at the International City Club.

Judges had the difficult task of winnowing a field of 25 of the city's most beautiful young women to 10 semifinalists.

Master of ceremonies Ernie Wilbanks, articulating a consensus at the event, said: "I feel like a kid in a candy store with my hands tied behind my back."

Contestants were judged on beauty, poise and personality.

Winners included: Kathy Lynn Farina, 18; Kathy Lou Graham, 21; Linda Gutierrez, 19; Janet Hatchett, 18; Sharon Husband, 20; Diana Jurgen- sen, 22; Robin Kennedy, 18; Diane Markoff, 19; Sally Vaughn, 18; and Betsy Wheeler, 21.

The audience saw the girls appear in evening gowns while Wilbanks read their qualifications: "Brown hair, green eyes, 38-25-36, five feet five inches tall, 120 pounds, this young lady hopes to become a stewardess."

Then, with a final cur- sory smile to the judges and the audience, she glided down the runway and out of view.

Behind the scenes and out of the scrutiny of the judges, the girls chatted amiably with each other.

"I had this wonderful trip to Hawaii planned, but now I can't go," com- plained one.

"Why not," was a choral response. "Well, I have to have this surgery... I have to have my bunions re- moved," she confessed.

The semifinalists will have a full schedule dur- ing the next two weeks be- fore the final judging.

They will be treated to a trip to Sacramento to watch the state Assembly in action, then a tour of the harbor and the Coast Guard facility; a trip to television station KTTV for the filming of "Truth or Consequences," and finally a tour of the Queen Mary and the Jacques Costeau Museum.

Final judging will be held April 15 in the Grand Ball- room of the Queen Mary.

"Miss Welcome to Long Beach" for 1972 was Mary Ellen Johnston.

Vandalism, theft of truck linked to warehouse blaze

Fire and police investi- gators Saturday continued their search for a possible arsonist and burglar in connection with a $20,000 fire at a Long Beach warehouse and the appar- ently related vandalism of a nearby business office late Friday.

Police said a brown pick-up truck, possibly loaded with merchandise, was stolen from the Colonial Furniture ware- house, 1700 Daisy Ave., shortly before the blaze erupted at about 11:10 p.m. Firemen said they found a second delivery truck halfway outside the building when they ar- rived.

They added that they had to batter down the main warehouse door in order to reach the fire, which was sending curls of smoke 400 feet sky- ward. All of the 40-by-100-foot building's contents were destroyed or dam- aged as the fire swept through the front display room and into the rear storage area, investiga- tors said.

Police said the Colonial warehouse has recently been victimized by bur- glaries and window smashings. They said officers accompanied a ware- house employee to the Lancer Furniture Compa- ny, 1600 Daisy Ave., while the Colonial building was still burning and discover- ed that the Lancer facility had also been ransacked.

Police said office equip- ment had been overturned and business machines thrown to the floor. The two companies are relat- ed, an employee said.

SINGING CLASSES

"Singing is a marvelous outlet for tensions," says Adrian Rosati. "The Italians know how to let themselves go in song."

Rosati, who has been singing Italian operatic arias since he was two years old, is opening a new voice-training class, under sponsorship of the Long Beach Recreation Department, next Tues- day at 7 p.m. in El Dora- do Park, 2800 Studebaker Road.

The class will teach the bel canto method of voice projection, and Rosati said it is valuable for im- proving both the voice and diction. It is open to anyone over the age of nine years.

What's the siren?

The following emergency calls were answered by the Long Beach police and fire departments during the 24-hour period ending at 8 p.m. Satur- day:

FRIDAY
8:53 a.m., robbery, 912 Long Beach Blvd.; 10:18 a.m., man with gun, 2187 Myrtle Ave.; 11:11 p.m., building fire, 1700 Daisy Ave.

SATURDAY
12:45 a.m., murder, 3401 Golden Ave.; 1:01 a.m., person screaming, 6174 Myrtle Ave.; 2:08 a.m., injury traffic, Sev- enth Street and Pacific Coast Highway; 2:42 a.m., injury traffic, 5000 Gardena Ave.; 11:39 a.m., injury traffic, Atlan- tic Avenue and Arctesia Boul- evard; 12:04 p.m., stalled vehi- cle, Gerald Desmond Bridge; 2:07 p.m., injury traffic, 2200 E. South St.; 3:15 p.m., injury, 6650 Indiana Ave.; 3:25 p.m., injury traffic, Claymore Ave- nue and Wardlow Road; 6:21 p.m., in- car. shot, 2741 Webster Ave.

L.B. car salesman robbed and slugged

A robber held a .45-caliber automatic pistol to the head of Alcide Mar- cotto, 52, a used car sales- man at S and D Auto Sales, 912 Long Beach Blvd., and took cash and jewelry valued at $1,011, before slugging the sales- man from behind, Long Beach police said Satur- day.

Lt. Miller going to FBI school

Lt. James E. Miller, head of the Long Beach Police Department's nar- cotic detail, will attend the 93rd session of the Na- tional Academy which opens Monday in Wash- ington, D.C.

Since its inception in 1937, the academy has graduated over 6,000 offi- cers from departments in this country.

The men are given an intensive 12-week course in crime detection and criminal law adminis- tration.

Included are courses in police administration, criminal law, socio- psychological aspects of community behavior, forensic science, and the techniques of teaching and training law enforce- ment officers.

Lt. Miller joined the de- partment April 30, 1956 and during his time on the force has spent 11 years in the narcotic detail.

Ball appointed to bar group

A Long Beach attorney has been selected to serve on a nine-member State Bar committee to study California's system of se- lecting appellate court judges, bar officials an- nounced.

Joseph A. Ball, of the Long Beach firm of Ball, Hunt, Hart, Brown and Baerwitz, is one of four Southland members of the committee, to be headed by attorney John A. Suto of San Francisco, a bar spokesman said.

The committee was formed in response to the urgings of the bar's board of governors last month after it was asked to investigate the qualifi- cations of William P. Clark Jr. to serve on the State Supreme Court.

Bar President Leonard Joanofsky said the assign- ment of the statewide committee is to submit recommendations for im- provements in the state's process of choosing appel- late court judges.

Wheelchair track facility 'assured'

Construction of a wheelchair track and field facility has been assured at Long Beach Veterans Administration Hospital, thanks to a $38,000 donation from the Military Order of the Purple Heart's California Department.

The track project is being sponsored by the newly organized Purple Heart Veterans Rehabilitation Service, Inc., from profits generated by Purple Heart thrift stores in California.

The facility, one of the few of its kind in the nation, will be designed to permit wheelchair patients to participate in various outdoor track and field events. Some of the events are javelin, discus, shotput and races from 40 yards to 220 yards.

An outdoor basketball court also is included in the plans.

The new facility will enable local wheelchair athletes to host the regional wheelchair games. The regional events are held to determine participants in the Wheelchair Pan American Games and in the Paralympics.

Presentation of a check was made to E. J. Klag, hospital director, by William Miller, Byron Hoskins, Raymond Warren and Michael Petricko of the Purple Heart organization.

Roz 'trapped' for her opinions

NEW YORK — It's just a gimmick for a TV special, "Women of the Year 1973," but Roz Russell, the mistress of ceremonies, who isn't supposed to have any influence in the selections, was trapped by your cunning columnist into giving some valuable opinions the other day in her suite at the Waldorf Towers.

"Naturally YOU couldn't nominate anybody for 1973, but suppose it had been '72," the columnist said cleverly. "Wouldn't be any reason for talking about the greatest women of '72, would there?"

Roz fell right into his clever trap. (Yeah, very clever. He trapped her into her writing a column about her.)

"WELL, YOU can write in your nominations and they have to consider them," Roz said with a positive shake of her positive chin. "I would have thought of your possible mayor of New York, Bess Myerson."

"Miss America 1945," the columnist reminded her. "Bronx pianist and flutist."

Roz nodded again. "Beverly Sills, who I think is not only a great opera singer but full of humor, with a concern for humanity, would be another. The Congresswoman from here, Shirley Chisholm, has done a remarkable work trying to get clout for the blacks."

"She's the one." Roz waved that away as being uncalled for.

"But she's the 12th recipient of the Academy's Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award and the first woman!" Fred Brisson said with pride.

"ANY WOMEN in show business?"

was in Fred's Broadway show, 'Damn Yankees,' playing an autograph fan. I used to tell Fred, 'Anybody with that voice has got to do something big.'"

WHO WERE her favorite actors—men? She did five pictures with Robert Ryan; two pictures with Errol Flynn: "It's hard to believe." "Why?" "He was great to look at. He could wear a cape better than anybody. He had impeccable manners. He looked funny, out of place, in a dinner jacket, but in a cape, great, and when he'd slam on one of those hats and say, 'How's that, Roz?' he had a certain flair. Clark Gable ... Doing a love scene can be very awkward but it never was with him. He knew where to put his feet and everything else. He just knew, he never needed the slightest directorial instruction — least of all from the actresses.

ROSALIND RUSSELL
"She's the one"

"Wherever Errol Flynn is now, I'll bet he's still got his flair. He could be in charge."

It's a CBS special for next fall and Roz, having played everything from a doctor to a city editor, will be able to handle any and all problems.

"I can operate on you and take your spleen out right on that coffee table," she announced. Believing she could and well might, the columnist slunk out.

EARL'S PEARLS: Leonard L. Levinson has come up with the last word in women's clothes: "Charge it."

Bob Orben, just back from a stay at a Las Vegas hotel, says the house detective rapped at his door and asked suspiciously, "You got any money in there?" That's earl, brother.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Transition from theory to practice is this year's theme. Inspiration comes easily. Opportunities to convert property into cash must be carefully considered. Today's natives have an interest in speed and speculative hobbies.

Aries (March 21-April 19): See today as a turning point, resolve old issues in simplest compromises. Invite participation of only those who are ready.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Be bright and positive, even though you may carry a burden. Haste is not the same as consistent early diligence.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Correspondence from afar picks up. Your neighborhood bureau with news, family affairs become complex.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Explanations to family and close associates require great care and detail. Be outgoing and willing to share your feelings.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Today should go well. Be careful not to seem boastful. There are many things to do, you must set priorities.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Extra touches in your work will likely bring extra rewards. It is no time to get difficult about past events.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today, be a spectator rather than a participant. Your interests are better served by balancing conflicting claims on your time and money.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The events of the day run out swiftly. Make the best of a hectic situation. Lending and borrowing are neither wise nor profitable.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be thorough while pursuing business details or money problems. It should be a big day.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't make the mistake of mixing others' resources with yours. Joint ventures are to be left alone today. Settle up all open accounts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Detailed plans work well while spur of the moment action encounters disaster. Be cautious. Places (Feb. 19-March 20): Strict priorities on all demands for your time may be a key to success. Personal pressures must be resisted.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Detailed plans work well while spur of the moment action encounters disaster. Be cautious. Places (Feb. 19-March 20): Strict priorities on all demands for your time may be a key to success. Personal pressures must be resisted.

Vacation at last for Ann-Margret

BY VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ann-Margret has had it. She is taking her first vacation in 10 years.

After a decade of motion pictures, television specials and night clubs the actress-entertainer is thoroughly exhausted. She tried, without success, to relax at her home in Benedict Canyon.

"The fall and my father's death have been too much for me," the beautiful redhead said.

"I've done 25 movies in the past 10 years. In 1971 I was home only nine days the entire year. I kept going so fast I couldn't slow down. It was like a merry-go-round or a treadmill. Once the momentum built up it wouldn't stop."

ANN-MARGRET is suffering aftershock from her near fatal fall at the Sahara Tahoe Hotel in September when she tumbled from a platform just before opening curtain for her club act.

Six months after operations on her face she still has an indentation on her left cheek which may require further plastic surgery.

Ann-Margret's father

Gustav Olsson, died in February.

"Daddy and I were very close," she said. "He followed my career with tremendous interest. When I played Las Vegas last fall I flew him up to see my act. He particularly liked to hear me sing 'When You're Smiling'."

Emotionally I'm wrong out. I just finished taping my television special (for NBC) which was supposed to go on the air in November—but the accident forced us to delay it until now.

"We also changed the original concept of the show. Instead of doing 'Ann-Margret's Scandals and Follies,' I'm doing my club act."

"That's why I'm emotionally torn up. I kept thinking of my father while I worked. I'd been working so hard and so long I'd forget whether I was doing my motorcycle number—which is a sort of trademark—for a live Las Vegas audience or for the special."

"We did it all in Vegas where I was appearing in the club at night and working on the special during the day. Too much."

THE FAME and financial rewards are not enough, the actress said. After her show is aired Wednesday—if you look closely you can see the fatigue—Ann-Margret is walking away from it all for six months.

"I'm going to check out for awhile," she said. "I'm going to travel. Don't ask where because I don't know myself."

"Before I married Roger (Smith) I'd pick out a destination, make reservations and then just take off in a jet. I didn't know what I'd do or where I'd go once I arrived. But it was relaxing and fun."

"If Roger isn't too busy with business he will be going with me. 'If not, I'll go alone. There are a couple of islands I want to see. The fact that I can't remember their names shows you where I am at this point."

"I need time to regroup and think. Maybe I can come up with some new ideas and fresh enthusiasm for what I'm doing."

ENTHUSIASM has always been Ann-Margret's strong suit.

"I was born in Sweden," she continued, "and I have a lot of friends in Europe. I've never been to Athens. But I'm not going to plan ahead."

"It's possible I'll have another operation on my face during my six-month vacation. Even that isn't definite."

"I love my work, but there are other things in this world besides performing."

Black tympanist in S.F. is a different drummer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Elayne Jones is a different drummer — a black woman tympanist with a major orchestra.

It's been a long struggle against two prejudices and it isn't over yet, says the 44-year-old kettledrum player who joined Seiji Ozawa's San Francisco Symphony this season for her first year-round orchestral job.

"Being black is worse than being a woman in everything except baseball, football and basketball," she said.

"I had to prove that music could be played by anyone who loves it. And I never let anything stand in my way. It's been a terrible burden because I always felt I had to do better, that I wouldn't be allowed the lapses other musicians have. It's still true even now."

Elayne Jones is a short, lithe woman whose afro shows a few specks of gray now, more than two decades after she graduated from the Juilliard School as a classical percussionist and started her professional career in New York.

"Everybody wanted me to play in a jazz band," she recalled in an interview after a rehearsal at the San Francisco Opera House.

Instead, she became the first black and the first woman to play with the New York City Opera's orchestra, where she was tympanist for 22 years.

'S Wonderful'

Peter Gordon and Barbara Wilson perform two exciting numbers, "S Wonderful" and "Sentimental Journey" in this year's Ice Capades, coming to the Long Beach Arena, April 18 through 22.

3 incumbents, 3 challengers

School board candidates discuss views

By MIKE JELF Staff Writer

Candidates in the April 17 Paramount Unified School District Board election spoke at a "Meet the Candidates Night" recently, to tell why they're running and what they hope to do in office.

Six of the seven candidates appeared at the Parent-Teachers Association (PTA)-sponsored program at Alondra Junior High School. These included three incumbents and three challengers.

Each candidate was given 10 minutes to address the audience of about 100 persons, and candidates appeared in alphabetical order.

First to speak was challenger Gene French. He said he wants to sit on the board because he's "concerned with... unhappiness of children, certificated and classified employees" of the district.

District administrators, he said, "are only interested in the concern of the majority vote" of the present board, and slight the desires of children and parents.

IF ELECTED, French said, he would "talk with the parents and employees of the district, and these talks will help me make a decision... My door would be open for anyone to come in and talk with me."

French said he would like to see school bus service restored, and would act to bring district students "the three R's plus one," the "one" being vocational education.

Incumbent Ethely Hilliard cited her experience with education in Paramount. She has been in the district "through good times and bad," she said, and "we are on the way up now."

Mrs. Hilliard stressed the value of the "tools of learning" — the three R's, and cited programs the district has started to improve in this area.

THESE INCLUDE the Reading and Mathematics Progress program, the assignment of teachers to give more personal attention tion in reading to elementary students, and a planned program for bilingual (English and Spanish) education in reading and mathematics.

Mrs. Hilliard advocated restoration of bus service and "the return of the six-period day."

Akira Kitano, president of the board, said he has "no backing from any pressure group." When interviewed by leaders of the Teachers' Association of Paramount, he said, "I didn't sell the district out."

Kitano cited his 26 years of experience in business in the Paramount area, and his four years on the school board.

"It takes a good two or three years to really get to know what's going on," Kitano said. "It's very important that the board... isn't changing every three or four years."

WHEN SEEKING election four years ago, he said, "I didn't make any campaign promises. I stood here and said, 'I'll do my best.'"

"Many times we (the board majority) get accused of being a rubber stamp (for the district administration)," Kitano said. "Well, voting against items just to be voting against them is a waste of time."

Like French and Mrs. Hilliard, Kitano spoke in favor of restored school bus service and emphasis on reading skills.

Challenger Margaret Pacheco said she wants to "benefit the entire community," and won't represent one faction alone.

She said her experience with school and community affairs through groups like the League of Latin-American Citizens (LULAC) gives her unique qualification for election.

LULAC was "the first to sponsor a tutorial program in the summer months here in Paramount," and she was a co-founder of the program, Mrs. Pacheco said.

Also, she said, she helped develop the first adult education classes (in English and citizenship) in Paramount, and made the presentation to the board of education which led to their adoption of the program.

Mrs. Pacheco advocated a "good tutoring program for all our children," with tutors available at each school after school hours.

Using work-study and similar programs, she said this could be done "at no charge to the district."

Incumbent David Romberg recalled his first campaign for office four years ago, when he said the classroom teacher is the "most important person in the district."

"From some of the local garbage we read in our community, you might think I've changed my mind," he said, referring to statements from teachers' association leaders.

"I like teachers, but I'm not really hot dog about teachers' organizations," Romberg said.

THE PRESENT board's first priority "has always been what's best for the children," with teachers' interests coming second, he said. "Some of the propaganda that's going around" implies the order should be reversed, he said.

While he wants to communicate with teacher groups and get ideas from teachers, Romberg said, decisions must rest ultimately with the board of education.

The last candidate to speak was challenger Bob Smith. He called for a "return to the basic fundamentals of education."

He also advocated "sound business practices" and a "spirit of cooperation" between the board and community groups.

The present administrative cost of the district is too high, he said, and in the classrooms more discipline is needed to "restore some semblance of order."

He also said more attention should be paid basic reading skills, because "quite a few students... when they get to high school aren't going to make it."

SMITH said Paramount leads all districts in the county in teacher load in the elementary grades. This, he said, means "my child isn't going to get the attention" to prepare him "to go out in the world and make a living."

The seventh candidate, Bill Troute, didn't appear at the program. Mrs. Horace Gittermann of the PTA said he, like the other candidates, had been informed of the meeting by registered mail.

Sooner grads living in Southland to meet

There will be a gathering next Sunday at Long Beach State University of the University of Oklahoma Alumni Association, Southern California branch, at which time football, a favorite subject, will be cussed and discussed.

The meeting will be convened at 4 p.m. at the Student Union with a dinner, followed by talk, typical short grass music and the showing of a film depicting highlights of the Sooners' past season which led them to a unique, and probably never-to-be equalled record — the winning of two bowl games in one year. On Jan. 1, 1972, the Crimson and Cream beat Auburn in the Sugar Bowl. Then, in an unusual Dec. 31 encounter, beat Penn State in a return to the New Orleans classic.

Sunday's meeting, according to alum treasurer Charlie Forbes, 5145 Mezzanine Way, will be an advance pep rally along with the huddling of old grads.

Master of Ceremonies will be Ed Robison of San Gabriel, president of the group. Reservations are $4 and should be made through Charlie Forbes by mail.

Distinctive adult living at Bixby Hill Gardens

COMMUNITY RECREATION CENTER . . . at S & S beautiful Bixby Hill Gardens

A wide variety of standard amenities — ranging from wood parquet flooring to terrazzo tile entries — provides the luxurious accent of the new Bixby Hill Gardens townhomes in Long Beach, developed by S & S Construction, a subsidiary of Shapell Industries.

Bixby Hill Gardens offers distinctive townhome living for adults, with two and three-bedroom plans priced from $55,950.

Among standard features that distinguish the townhomes are genuine lath-and-plaster construction on all units, luxury wall-to-wall shag carpeting throughout, fireplaces of marble or travertine, a choice of entries encompassing marble, terrazzo tile, travertine or wood parquet, imported marble pullmans, all-electric kitchens and air conditioning.

"We developed Bixby Hill Gardens with the concept that it would truly represent a 'luxury' community, without any misleading gimmicks," stated Mark Bader. "We have found that our buyers appreciate the exclusivity of the features we include as standard items in the price of each townhome.

THE townhomes are featured in five spacious floor plans. Other standard amenities include self-cleaning ovens, dishwasher, ceramic tiling, cast iron tubs, hand-finished custom ash cabinetry, automatic garage door opener and wet bars in some plans.

"We're emphasizing both luxury and security, with a system offering a 24-hour guard service and private entry gates which can be opened only by the owner's key and tokens provided for guests," Bader added.

"These features, coupled with a vast array of recreational facilities within the complex, amount to what we feel is a superior living environment," he said.

The community has been designed around a recreation center with fireside lounges, wet bars, and exercise rooms. Outside facilities include tennis and handball courts, a swimming pool, jacuzzi whirlpool, putting green, and saunas.

BIXBY Hill Gardens offers a total of 120 units, a third of which have been sold since the grand opening earlier this year. A second unit of 46 townhomes recently opened at the community.

Located at 900 Palo Verde Avenue, Bixby Hill Gardens may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Palo Verde exit, proceeding south past Anaheim Road to the main entry gate.

S & S Construction and its parent firm, Shapell Industries, have been involved in community development in the Long Beach area for more than 15 years. The company has developed in excess of 17,000 homes throughout California and is listed on the New York and Pacific Stock Exchanges.

Casas del Patio in second week

Hundreds of people last weekend attended the grand opening of Casas del Patio Townhouses in Paramount.

Grand opening of the homes will be continued through this weekend, with landscaping and furnishing of the model homes completed.

A development of the M.B. Johnson Development Co. the 94 two-story, two and three-bedroom townhouses feature charming Spanish facades with liberal masses of wood shingles enhancing the cantilevered second floors of the homes.

Included is a full package of suburban-type features to match the convenience of city living.

The builder has included refrigerated air conditioning and forced air heating, quality carpeting and draperies throughout, kitchens with luminous ceilings and built-in range, oven, dishwasher, and disposal, private concrete patios, and individual enclosed garages, while individual plans feature such as a very large den or playroom on the second floor, and inside laundry area and cathedral ceilings.

WHILE extensive greenbelt areas are found throughout the project, the largest of them surrounds the recreation center with cabana and large swimming pool.

The condominium concept of easy-living applies at Casas del Patio, with maintenance of all of the exteriors of the homes and all "common" areas provided through professionals employed by the Homeowners Association of Casas del Patio.

No-down VA, low-cost FHA and 5 per cent down conventional terms are all available to finance the homes, priced from $28,200.

The four model homes, under the supervision of Walker & Lee, sales agent, are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk at 16710 Orange Ave., in Paramount, between Alondra and Artesia Boulevards, just north of the Artesia Freeway and east of the Long Beach Freeway.

WALL-TO-WALL CARPETING . . . at Westport Cerritos Villas

Fiber glass homes around corner

NEW YORK (UPI) — One thing leads to another!

For Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wesson of Southbury, Conn., first it was a fiber glass sailboat.

Now they own the only fiber glass house in their neighborhood.

In fact it's one of just 12 homes in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Georgia, New Hampshire and New York using fiber glass reinforced plastic (FRP) arched wall-ceiling sections in a new Polyarch building system developed by Rudkin-Wiley Corp., Stratford, Conn.

The Wessons say they wanted a house "that would be as comfortable to live in as it would be to look at. A house that would be personal and different yet fit in easily with its surroundings. A house that would be easy to care for."

They feel their two-level contemporary house, nestled in a heavily wooded area, does just this. It combines graceful curving wall-ceiling sections with ample expanse of glass, rich wood trim, and, as a dramatic focal point, a free-standing, stone fireplace and chimney rising from a conversation pit through the glassed ceiling of the living room.

SAYS Mrs. Wesson: "We're quite proud of the house. People like to see it because it's so different. If we had to do it over again, we'd definitely pick fiber glass since we've found the material to be as good as we expected from our experience with the boat."

Says Hal Mathews, Rudkin-Wiley marketing manager: "It takes a certain amount of courage for a young family like the Wessons to build a house like this. After all it's new and innovative."

But, he added, "fiber glass is a proven material, dating from its first use as an industrial building insulator 30 years ago. Its use in home building is only just beginning."

Mathews says this company expects to sell 125 Polyarch homes this year and is planning an adaptation of the system for town houses and garden apartments. He predicts within five years 5 per cent of the new home market will consist of fiber glass homes.

IN THE Wesson home, the FRP sections form the main structural element and are bolted to prefabricated mahogany window, door and solid panels to form the enclosed area.

The home is built over a full, finished concrete lower level, but Mathews says the system will work with any type of foundation including piers, crawl space, basement and slab. It can be built in any climate.

The Polyarch segments, L-shaped, can be turned in any direction so that home design and layout possibilities are virtually unlimited, Mathews said.

Color is impregnated into interior and exterior surfaces to eliminate painting. The panels have high impact and scratch resistance. Gutters and drains are not required because of the curved surfaces.

For the advanced do-it-yourselfer, the fiber glass segments and window, door and solid panels can be purchased and erected without special equipment. Each 400-pound section is 13 feet long and 6½ feet wide, predrilled at the factory for universal mating.

"Since the home is basically prefabricated," Mathews said, "it may take as little as 45 days from start of excavation to occupancy. The shell of the house itself — the arched sections — can go up in a single day."

HE SAID the standard packaged homes the firm has built range in price from $20,000 to $50,000 with custom designed homes reaching the $100,000 range.

"Builders costs for putting up one of our homes," he said, "range from $14 to $20 per square foot, compared with $12 for tract homes and as high as $30 for contemporary packaged homes."

Rudkin-Wiley, one of the innovators of fiber glass forms used in high-rise building construction, such as L'Enfant Plaza in Washington, the Christian Science Center in Boston, the F.D.R. Post Office Building in New York, is manufacturing the Polyarch System on the East Coast at present, with expansion planned to serve the rest of the country.

If things go the way the people at Rudkin-Wiley think they will, fiber glass homes might just become as commonplace as fiber glass boats. But then, it was not too long ago that owners of fiber glass boats were the first in their marinas.

Westport Cerritos units prove popular

Westport Home Builders, Inc., now offering Westport Cerritos Villas, find that buyers resist classification.

A broad mixture of ages and family sizes are represented in the recent buyer analysis conducted by the builders. The two and three-bedroom garden apartment homes are priced from $21,950 and nearly 300 families have already purchased homes. Buyers are moving in from all areas, and the close-in location of Cerritos Villas are a major factor in sales.

Available with no-down VA, low-cost FHA or through conventional financing, homes include wall-to-wall carpeting in primary living areas, custom-designed vinyl asbestos flooring in the secondary areas, kitchens with all built-in appliances including range, oven and disposer.

Take any convenient way to the Artesia (91) Freeway and exit at either Norwalk Boulevard or Bloomfield Avenue. Turn north to the site on 166th Street between the two major surface streets.

Moore Realty first RESCOA—Lakewood

L. Tennyson Moore, president of Moore Realty, Inc., is the first RESCOA Realtor in the Lakewood area.

Real Estate Sales Corporation of America (RES-COA) held its first seminar in Long Beach last month to introduce the new franchise program to the Southland.

Moore established his real estate firm in 1947 and has served the many professional associations of brokers in various capacities.

He is a past president of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, a director of the California Real Estate Association and past president of the Los Angeles Chapter of the Institute of Real Estate Managers.

Moore is a Certified Property Manager and is an associate member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers.

Marc Levant, executive vice president of RESCOA, announced the affiliation following the release of names of the new directors elected at the annual shareholders meeting in Oakland.

Members of the board include Joseph B. Carnahan, Dave Conger (chairman), Ira Gribin, Tom Kiernan, Art Leitch, Don C. Roberts and Richard Van Valer.

14 homes remaining at El Dorado Park

Only 14 homes remain for sale at S & S Construction's El Dorado Park Estates community in Long Beach, representing the last phase of the development.

More than 1,400 homes have been sold at the community, one of the most successful ever developed in Long Beach.

El Dorado Park Estates features quality designed homes of genuine-lath-and-plaster construction, priced from $49,950.

All homes include thick shag carpeting, all electric kitchens with dish-washers, parquet flooring in family rooms, imported tile entries, marble vanity units in bathrooms, ceramic tiling, and wet bars in some plans.

"We have designed the homes to emphasize luxury and styling not commonly found in homes today," said Gerry Dirksen, vice president and general manager of S & S Construction.

"Particular attention has been paid to the best quality construction of homes, as well as interior designs and amenities. Our key selling point has been the fact that nothing is average about these homes and considering our sales record, this concept has been well received by the homebuying public," Dirksen added.

FIVE decorator-furnished models are open at El Dorado Park Estates, in three and four-bedroom plans offering a choice of single, split-level and two-story designs.

The community is adjacent to El Dorado Park, providing a variety of recreational facilities, including a professional golf course as well as scenic lakes, nature trails, and lush greenery.

"Beyond the homes themselves, a major feature of the community's success has been the location," said Mark Bader, S & S Construction's general sales manager. "In addition to having one of the few remaining prime sites in the city of Long Beach, El Dorado Park Estates is ideally situated in a true family environment."

Educational facilities such as the Douglas Newcombe Elementary School and others are within walking distance. Also close by is a major shopping center and numerous recreation areas.

Located at 8025 Rosina Street, the community may be reached by taking the Cerritos Avenue exit off the 605 Freeway proceeding to Los Alamitos Boulevard and Wardlow Road. The model complex is one-half block south of Wardlow.

EXTERIOR MAINTENANCE . . . by Stanton Park Homeowners Association
GOLD NUGGET AWARD

New features at Stanton Park

A variety of home-owner-oriented, easy living features have been incorporated into the townhome community of Stanton Park.

The one-bedroom-and-den, two-and-three-bedroom townhouses are a project of the Armour Development Company and have been architecturally designed with every home situated on a corner lot.

The Anaheim-based building firm has been awarded the BIA's Gold Nugget award for the design which provides each residence with two private patios and an individual two-car, enclosed attached garage.

Privacy and safety are stressed in this arrangement.

Recreational facilities are family oriented with heated adult and children's pools, and a community clubhouse — the entire facility enclosed with a fence for added safety.

Interiors of the two-story residences have been designed with both family and living rooms, and separate dining rooms in some plans. Kitchens have luminous ceiling panels, all electric built-ins including dishwashers, built-in eating bars (some plans), and extra large walk-in pantry storage areas.

The forced air heating system has been prepared for air conditioning.

ALL EXTERIOR maintenance at the community, including landscaping (except in private patios), upkeep of the grounds, "miniparks" (small superlandscaped areas), and care of the recreational facility and structural exteriors is provided by professionals through the Stanton Park Homeowners Association.

The homes, priced from $24,500, are under the sales direction of Kurth & Associates, and may be purchased with VA or FHA financing.

The decorated models, open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., are between Beach Boulevard (Hwy 39) and Western Avenue in Stanton.

Most homes facing lake at The Shores

Co-owners of Marlborough Development Corporation Ronald and Jerry Lushing have reported $1 million in sales for The Shores, new development at Lake Forest which opened in January.

The partners said there has been an overwhelming response from Orange County residents for the three and four-bedroom houses priced from $38,980 to $58,950.

The Shores is located on the main lake just across from the Beach and Tennis Club, but it also has its own private seven-acre lake.

Designed to accommodate 200 families, most of the houses face the lake.

One of the outstanding landscape design features of The Shores is the use of "paseos" or greenbelt areas with easy access to the lake for all homes.

The prices include air conditioning, shake roofs, and wall-to-wall carpeting throughout; kitchens with luminous ceilings, built-in dishwashers, disposers and double ovens, one with a self-cleaning unit.

Walker and Lee are sales agents and the four models are open daily and may be reached by taking the El Toro exit off the San Diego Freeway; turn left on El Toro and drive one mile to Muirlands Road; left on Muirlands for another mile to model complex.

LBCC trade courses help in job development

Trade courses presented at Long Beach City College are geared to getting, keeping or becoming better at a construction job, according to Paul O. Neble, construction technologies department head.

The college's eight construction trade courses presented last semester improved construction worker knowledge and helped some 665 students achieve training in marketable job skills.

"The construction trade is constantly changing," Neble said, "and many workers in the field find the courses practical in keeping informed on the latest developments, techniques and methods."

He emphasized that persons seeking careers in construction trades usually enter an apprenticeship program for trade courses offered evenings at the college and get paid union rates as apprentices while learning.

"Students actually work during the day getting experience in their line of work," Neble said.

Architectural drafting, drawing and rendering courses prepare students for jobs as specifications writers, landscape designers, products representatives, supervisors and architectural technicians. Students may also continue professional training as architects at the university level.

Evening courses are presented at the campus for apprentices to learn theories supplementing on-the-job experience for carpentry, cement-finishing, pile-driving and painting.

Blueprint reading classes for the building and construction industry are offered also evenings.

All courses are tuition-free at City College.

Loans okayed by phone at Cal Fed

California Federal Savings has introduced a new policy and now gives immediate property improvement loan commitments by telephone, announced Norman D. Kull, senior vice president, loan division.

The loans are available for pools, home improvements and the purchase of mobile homes, and may now be arranged in one phone call, in which the applicant provides the background information necessary for the commitment.

Lindal's earnings increase

For the year ended Dec. 31, Lindal Cedar Homes Inc., manufacturer of pre-cut cedar homes, reported record earnings of $506,897, up 63 per cent from $311,175 for 1971.

Earnings per share increased 5 per cent to $0.84 in 1972 from $0.80 in 1971 on 55 per cent more shares outstanding. Lindal sales also set a new record of $15,205,653 in 1972, an increase of 59 per cent from $9,591,674 in the preceding year.

Sir Walter Lindal, president, reported the first fourth quarter profit in the company's history of $102,948, equal to $0.17 per share in the fourth quarter of 1972 as compared to a loss of $145,558 equal to $0.37 per share in 1971.

The fourth quarter profit came as a result of developing a southern sales strategy to sharply increase winter sales as well as concerted and continuing management attention to control and reduce costs in a rising raw material market, the president said.

Sir Walter said the company's sales continued to increase with new orders and backlog at all-time highs. He said the outlook for 1973 "is excellent."

Appraisers to hear talk

The Society of Governmental Appraisers will hold its monthly dinner meeting at 6:30 P.M., Wednesday at Taix Restaurant, 1911 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles.

Speaker will be Walter C. Hunter, assistant assessor for Ventura County. His topic: "Appraiser: His Quest and His Credentials."

Ground broken for Landmark park, S.H.

Ground was broken last week at Landmark Business Park, Signal Hill, for Signal Landmark Properties' new industrial office complex in Signal Hill.

The six-building park, which covers 4.6 acres at the corner of 28th Street and Junipero Avenue, will contain 70,300 square feet of industrial office space. The six buildings will have a completed value of $1 million.

Councilmen Tom Denham and Gertrude Beebe represented the city at the ceremony. Also present were Earle Beebe, president of the Signal Hill Chamber of Commerce.

Roland Wedemeyer and Michael O'Dell of the Signal Landmark Properties Industrial Division represented the building firm.

CAPTURES IMAGINATION

Resort living at Beachwalk

SECLUDED COURTYARD ENTRY . . . feature at Beachwalk Townhomes, Huntington Beach

Beachwalk, A. J. Hall Corporation's $20 million townhome community in Huntington Beach, has captured the imagination and identification of new residents and visitors alike, according to Cal Furman, sales manager for the complex.

"The biggest reason for Beachwalk's overwhelming success has been the builder's philosophy of leisure living, unique design and homeowner convenience," Furman said.

"With Beachwalk we are filling a need of middle-income families for maintenance-free resort-oriented living," he added.

"Our sales are now approaching $4 million and we have noted with pleasure that Beachwalk homebuyers seem to fit their community, lending their active lifestyles to the overall development concept."

PRICED from $38,950 to $52,000, Beachwalk townhomes feature from two to five bedrooms in both one and two-story plans.

Rich ceramic tile entries and hearths, wood shingle trim and an abundant use of expansive sliding glass are standard, with such luxury extras as wet bars and bonus rooms offered as options.

Located just six blocks from the ocean, Beachwalk offers residents the convenience of the Huntington Beach public marina, in addition to the community facilities which include a junior olympic-size swimming pool, therapy pool and saunas, plus other secondary pool areas.

Upkeep of the abundant recreation facilities and all exterior maintenance is provided by the homeowners association.

Beachwalk may be reached via the San Diego Freeway to Golden West Avenue then south to 19751 Deep Harbor Drive, Huntington Beach. The sales office and model homes may be seen daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Westbrook units set for preview

Westbrook Townhomes, Westbrook Development Company's community of 130 townhomes in Garden Grove, is now holding a special construction preview showing at the homesite.

Walker & Lee salesmen Ron Kotloff and Hal Haley will be on hand to aid visitors by showing floor-plans and explaining the advantages of the community.

Six floorplans are offered with prices beginning at $24,995. Conventional financing terms are available, including a 5 percent down plan and a home trade trade plan.

The homes are one and two-story with two or three bedrooms and two or 2½ baths. All have two-car garages, spacious living rooms and dining rooms. Some plans have convertible dens and family rooms.

Westbrook Townhomes cover 11 acres on the north side of Westminster Avenue just east of Brookhurst Street in Garden Grove. When completed, the community will be valued at more than $3.7 million.

Visitors may reach the site from the Garden Grove Freeway by taking Brookhurst south to Westminster. The sales office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

W & L to represent

An architectural and structural engineering firm in Orange said this week a major industry is soon to be added to the manufacturing community in Garden Grove.

R.E. Tebault, president of Tebault Engineering, 376 S. Tustin, Orange, predicts a June move-in date for American Metal Bearing Co. to its new 40,000-square-foot facility at 7191 Acacia Ave., Garden Grove.

Tebault's firm supplied architectural and structural design services in construction of the $360,000 building.

According to Tebault, the company is one of the largest line-contact bearing manufacturers in Southern California, supplies industry throughout the United States and is a prime source of repair services for merchant fleets.

Tebault Engineering has provided structural design services to many Orange County enterprises, including Knott's Berry Farm, National Cash Register, Montgomery Ward and Kerr Glass.

Tustin-based Kavanaugh Development Corp. has retained Walker & Lee, Inc. for exclusive sales at Corsican Villas, a 130-unit luxury condominium community in Palm Desert, it was announced this week by W. Scott Biddle, president of the development firm.

The 17-acre project, located at Silver Spur Trail and Portola Avenue, offers a wide array of recreational amenities, including four swimming pools, a therapeutic pool, spacious clubhouse and cabana, putting green and horseshoe pits.

A Special Place in the Hub Town

Here's Home Ownership that Broadwinners Appreciate! We built Cerritos Villas because we think it's absurd for people to work as hard at home as they do at their jobs. We think it's foolish to spend so much time fighting freeway traffic just to get home in time to begin fighting crabgrass. When you've earned the wherewithal to own property, you've earned the right to peace, privacy, relaxation and fun. That's what everybody wants. So we put it all together.

Cerritos Villas is in Cerritos, the Hub Town, so quick to reach from all over the Southland. We're right near the Artesia Freeway. Zip, you're at work. . . zip, you're home.

And what a home!

A big private clubhouse and swimming pool come with ownership here. Your villa home is loaded with price-included features, including a private patio. Also, no lawns to mow . . . no exterior maintenance chores at all for owners. And all this at low cost!

Your new villa home—easy to buy, easy to own!

Buying a villa home is no big complicated thing. You pay a few dollars down, you move in, and you start living. You make payments like rent, except that every payment builds equity (just like saving) for you. It works so well, we have all kinds of owners; single men and women as well as marrieds . . . mostly youngish. Come to Cerritos Villas today. It's a better kind of life.

Canyon Acres 3rd unit open

A third unit of 110 homes featuring pool-size lots has opened at the Canyon Acres community in Anaheim, developed by S & S Construction, a subsidiary of Shapell Industries.

Canyon Acres, with spacious homes priced from $33,950, will include a total of 400 units when completed.

The community has been designed to emphasize its country-like setting in the hills, with large view lots, cul-de-sac streets, and a totally master-planned land design.

"We have developed Canyon Acres to be a unique and distinctive community, based on its outstanding location and the generous lots," said Gerry Dirksen, vice president and general manager

Granada Park proves popular

A fourth unit totaling 112 homes has opened at S & S Construction's Granada Park community in Norwalk, offering immediate occupancy to homebuyers.

The new unit is the largest to be opened at the development, which features homes of genuine lath-and-plaster construction priced from $35,450.

Six decorator-furnished models are on display, ranging from single-story designs to stylish split-level plans with up to seven bedrooms. The community is located close to the site of S & S Construction's first development nearly 20 years ago.

"S & S Construction has been developing homes in the Norwalk area for many years, and buyers recognize our reputation for quality, in both construction and service," said Gerry Dirksen, vice president and general manager.

"Our Granada Park homes have been designed to offer more value, with extra features as standard items, than comparably priced homes in the area."

A WIDE choice of exterior elevations is available to homebuyers, including heavy wood beams and stone trim, as well as cedar shingle roofing. Each home includes block wall fencing, luxurious wall to wall carpeting, electric built-in kitchen, luminous ceilings, ceramic tiling in both kitchen and bath areas, cast iron sinks and tubs, and a variety of natural stone or brick fireplaces.

"We have specially designed floor plans that offer space and comfort for families of all sizes," said Mark Bader, general sales manager of S & S.

"These include many sunken family rooms, formal dining rooms, large recreation areas with up to 400 square feet, and two-story cathedral ceilings."

"In addition, we offer alternative floor plans, such as our Veracruz model, which features up to seven bedrooms and a 40-foot kitchen/family room that may allow for conversion to an extra bedroom. The master suite includes a parents' 'retreat' area which can also be adjusted for an additional bedroom."

Granada Park is centrally located close to major shopping areas, schools, and local parks. The model homes are at 15369 Lancelot Avenue, just off Bloomfield Avenue.

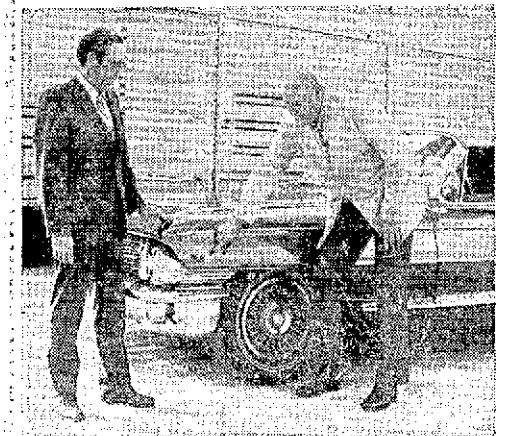

The community may be reached by taking the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway to the 635 Freeway, proceeding to the Artesia Freeway east. Take the Bloomfield Avenue exit and proceed north past Alondra Avenue and turn right.

Leisure dollars

NEW YORK (UPI) — Though already a billion dollar business, the market for leisure time products is still in its infancy in terms of growth potential for the 1970s and beyond, according to an industry source.

"The fast-growing demand for thousands of different hobby and home supplies, says David A. Cunningham Jr., president of Cunningham Art Products, Inc., "reflects several encouraging trends in American living; more free time, more disposable income, a return to simplicity, an emphasis on do-it-yourself activities,

RIDING (L), CREIDER . . . and Biarritz

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

Only 1450 of them rolled off the Cadillac assembly line back in 1960 but one of them is here in Long Beach, the joy and pride of its owner.

We're talking about the 1961 Cadillac Biarritz convertible owned by retired Bank of America executive Ed Creider who drives it proudly over the local streets. He had it in to show Bud Ridings, local Cadillac dealer, who thought he might have delivered the classic Biarritz originally, but it wasn't the case. Ridings felt the convertible was first sold in Redondo Beach.

With so few being built, Creider is wondering the whereabouts of the other 1449 Biarritz nameplates. While Ed admits his car is not in mint condition it attracts attention wherever he goes and he's had some interesting offers. The Biarritz features bucket seats which probably were a racy option in those days.

If there are any other 1961 Biarritz owners in this area and you want to compare car notes with Ed Creider, drop a note with a photo, if possible, to this writer at the IPT and we will forward it to the enthusiastic Cad owner.

FOUR-BEDROOM BYCAMORE HOME . . . one of six for S & S Construction.

"The community has proven its appeal primarily to young families with growing children. These are people who appreciate the country atmosphere that Canyon Acres offers."

SIX decorator furnished models are on display at the community, in distinctive single, split level, and two-story designs.

Each home features S & S quality construction, with standard items such as cedar shingle roofing, extensive use of interior and exterior stonework, wall-to-wall carpeting, ceramic tile countertops and complete rear yard fencing.

The homes also include all-electric kitchens with dishwashers, hand-finished natural wood cabinetry, concrete driveways and expansive master bedroom suites.

"In addition, we offer a wide variety of optional items so that homebuyers may customize their home," said Mark Bader, general sales manager. "This includes natural stone fireplaces, wet bars, bonus room adaptability, and side yard access in many homes for recreational vehicles and campers."

Located at 144 Leandro Street, the community may be reached by taking the Riverside Freeway east to the Imperial Highway exit, south to Santa Ana Canyon Road. Proceed east two blocks to Solomon Drive and turn right to the model complex.

With a central location close to major educational, employment, and shopping centers in the area, Canyon Acres is minutes away from a planned high school, shopping center and country club facilities.

Authors speak out

BUYING COUNTRY LAND, by Eugene Boudreau. Macmillan, $4.95.
Planning to build a home in the country? Or pick a site for a cabin or a camper?

Don't take the plunge until you consider the pitfalls. Your dream plot with a view may be perched on a fault, be in the path of frequent forest fires, or located several miles from the nearest water.

In this book, the author provides the prospective buyer of undeveloped land with a practical, down-to-earth guide. These topics are covered with charts and drawings:

Locating land for sale: in addition to the usual sources — ads and real estate agents — you can obtain topographical maps for every state, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the Canadian provinces for minimal cost.

Evaluating land: the essential steps to take and how to take them.

Wells: locating water; simple basic principles of geology and hydrology; percolation testing; charts on drilling and sealing; pumps and casings; evaluating an existing well or spring.

Septic tanks: how to do a test hole; proper and improper septic tank disposal trenches; what to watch for in country subdivisions serviced by septic tank systems.

Title searching: how to do your own search at the county courthouse and what to check for (liens, water, hunting, fishing, timber rights, etc.).

Real estate practices: contracts, financing, insurance, and various other legal matters — and how to decode the fine print. — RLB

LONG BEACH

Dr. Al Morey will speak to members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors at their 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting Tuesday at the Queen's Restaurant.

His topic: "Questioned Documents."

Program chairman Chuck Anderson and membership chairman Don Hazzard said three Realtors, one non-employing Realtor and 36 associates will be inducted to membership.

Realtors and executive officers of local real estate boards and state associations have been appointed to serve on the 35 standing committees of the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB) — the 108,000-member association representing the Realtors of America.

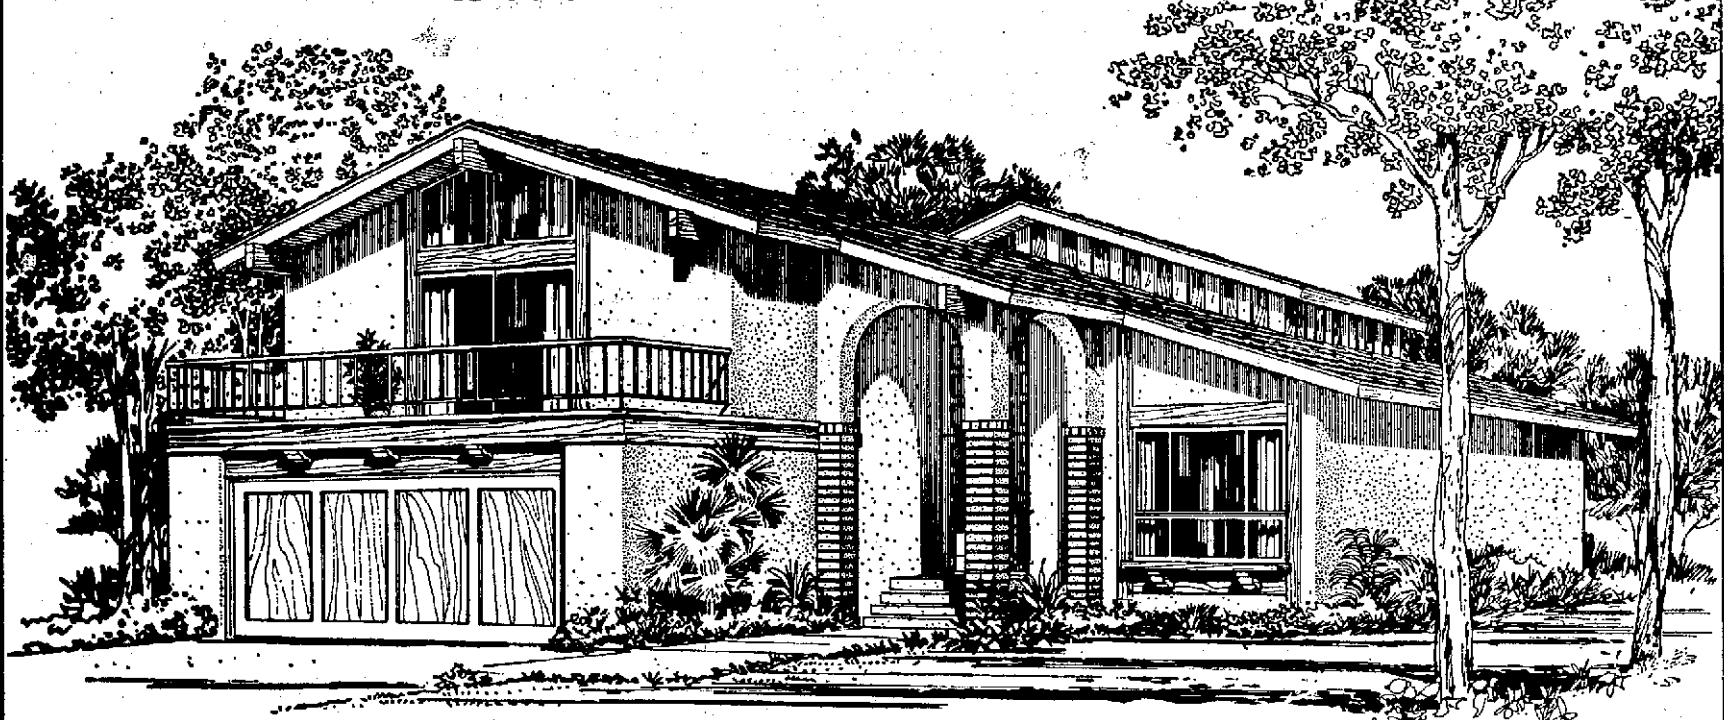

The 1973 committee members from the Long Beach area are Dorothy E. Annis, executive officers committee, political affairs committee and state and urban affairs-board forum; Clyde Brown, state and urban affairs committee and state and urban affairs-boards forum; Robert Emrich, multiple listing policy committee; Barbara Moss, multiple listing policy committee, and Melvin L. Mould, equal opportunity committee and chairman of state and urban affairs-boards forum.

Broad spectrum of leisure at Village San Juan

A broad spectrum of recreational facilities awaits homeowners at Village San Juan in San Juan Capistrano.

The builder, U.S. Development Corporation, planned the $20 million residential community with activities for all ages.

Designed around a 3-1/2-acre private, well-stocked lake, residents can fish at their leisure or even sail their small craft.

"Our community center is especially nice for families—featuring a walled-in heated swimming pool, wading pool and fun deck," noted Robert Partin, the company's southern California division president.

"For those interested in a secluded place to relax—the fenced courtyards and patios in our Country Court Homes and Village Townhomes are ideal. Low maintenance design makes the homes perfect for outdoor entertaining too!"

BOATING and beach enthusiasts get an extra bonus at Village San Juan. Just ten minutes away by car is the new Dana Point Marina and Doheney Recreation Park, famous for its miles of surfing beaches.

Complementing the active lifestyle of the community and the area are two dramatic new living styles, the Country Court Homes and Village Town Homes available at prices starting from $19,990.

"Both styles offer the convenience and low maintenance features of a luxury apartment, but with the square footage and prestigious exterior look of a conventional home," Partin said.

Planned especially for families with little time for upkeep, the Village Town Homes are completely maintenance free. Four town home plans are available with up to three bedrooms and two baths in one and two story designs. Four to six units are designed into each town home building.

Homes, which are designed in units of two single-family homes, are attached by a common double wall. The court homes offer up to 1,521 square feet and range in price from $22,990 to $28,990.

Available in six floor plans and 12 elevations, the homes offer up to four bedrooms and two baths in one and two story designs.

A number of custom features are offered in the basic purchase price of both home styles, including carpeting in the living room, dining room, master bedroom, hallway and stairs; interior laundry facilities; enclosed garages; deluxe range and ovens; vaulted ceilings; complete exterior insulation; master bedroom suites; fencing and underground utilities.

A TOTAL of eight decorated models with interiors by Saddleback Interiors are on display daily.

To reach Village San Juan, take the San Diego Freeway south to Juniper Serra Road exit, proceed left under the freeway, then turn left again to the Village San Juan entry.

U.S. Development Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of publicly-held First Builders Bancorp of Orinda, is one of the nation's largest residential developers. The company has in the planning or development stage, residential projects valued in excess of $100 million within its four regional divisions.

Market Basket in warehouse lease

Market Basket, operator of 72 retail grocery stores in the five-county Southern California area, has leased a 106,000-square-foot warehouse facility in the 86-acre Commerce Distribution Center, according to officials of Coldwell, Banker & Co. which represented both parties in lease negotiations.

The food chain will occupy space at 5809 Eastern Ave. in the $20 million business-industrial center developed by Trammell Crow Co., Dallas-based national developer of warehouse and distribution space.

Market Basket's new facility is a consolidation move, declared Richard M. Koster, president of the food firm.

Family expansion plans? We're part of your future.

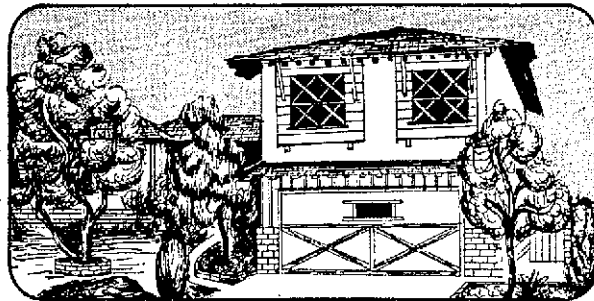

Nothing is less comfortable than a home that's one size too small. If your family is expanding — new children, a returning GI, in-laws sharing your home, increasing entertainment demands — Walker & Lee can help. We've selected a variety of big-family homes for you to choose from . . . and there are hundreds more in our exclusive inter-area listing book. If you have family expansion plans, call Walker & Lee. We're part of your future.

LONG BEACH AREA

Castle From Spain

This magnificent Mediterranean style home has 5 huge bedrooms, 3½ baths, a family room, a den, a big formal dining room, even a butler's pantry — plus 10x38 pool with dressing rooms. Here is 5,000 square feet of truly gracious living space. The price was just reduced, so you should see it now! #1694

Assume Low-Cost VA Loan

Huge 4-bedroom with 2 gleaming baths! Ankle-deep carpets and custom drapes! All redecorated! Great family kitchen completely built-in! #159

Seven (7) Bedrooms!

1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 of them plus a beautiful pool, in very desirable Rossmore location. If you really need space, this is it! Owner will finance. #145

Beautiful Executive Home

Nestled in Bixby Knolls near Virginia Country Club. Imagine the lovely 175x119 lot, professionally maintained, room for pool and cabana, 4 spacious bedrooms, 4 baths, large sun room, chauffeur's quarters, all air conditioned. Reduced to $85,000 for quick sale. #731

Income? In-Laws? Either

one or both are yours with this lovely corner in a choice area. Large 3-bedroom home with a formal dining room — plus a very delightful 2-bedroom apartment. Only $39,900. #1693

NORTH LONG BEACH, LAKEWOOD

Wide Open Space

Big 2-story with room to move! 4 large bedrooms, 2 king-size. Formal dining room, family room with fireplace, natural wood cabinets and built-ins in kitchen. Best buy at $39,900. Call today. #714

Lakewood Village

A short walk to City College, you'll love this huge 4-bedroom 2-bath model. Newly remodeled kitchen and dining area with sparkling built-ins. And look—2 fireplaces! Corner location with double garage. Lakewood High School District. #1827

Executive's Dream

In beautiful Lakewood Estates, single-level home with step-down den, formal dining room, family room, decorator carpets and drapes. Low-maintenance landscaping, enclosed patio with indirect lighting for the pool table. Wet bar in den. #1369

Four Plus Pool

Lovely corner with central air conditioning, 1-year-old pool with pool-sweep, lots of deck and covered patio. 4 bedrooms, 1½ baths, dining room, and carpets and drapes throughout. Double garage, too. Asking just $88,500. #165 your present home at appraised market value less normal costs. If we don't, we'll buy it. Ask any Walker & Lee office.

We'll Guarantee to Sell

BELLFLOWER, LYNNWOOD AREA

Take Your Pick!

Choose between these two huge 2-story homes on cul-de-sacs:
1. A 5-bedroom, 3-bath model with central air conditioning.
2. A 4-bedroom, 3-bath model with a nice separate den.
Both of them are roomy, 2400 square foot homes, with family rooms, dining rooms, fireplaces, patios, carpets and drapes all throughout—and each of them has an 18x36 pool! In one, the kitchen built-ins are gas. In the other, they're electric. See both. #594 and #595

Huge family room, 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, den and study — this 2-story home has a shake roof and is beautifully maintained. Huge lot at end of cul-de-sac has space left over for a boat, trailer, pool, or ??? Close to Plus X School. #963

Low-Down Single-Story

1-bedroom, 2-bath home in an excellent area. Big family room with fireplace, custom cabinets, carpets and drapes, patio—and it's air conditioned. You can own it for $1950 down. #131

Builder's Dream Home

Separate office facing Century Blvd., great for professional who works at home. 4 bedrooms, 1 bath, huge family room, den and study. Central air conditioning, tiled bath, cedar-lined closets, 2 fireplaces, shake roof, 3-car garage. #365

CERRITOS AREA

Room to Roam

5 bedrooms, 3 baths, a family room with stone fireplace, and a 15x32 secluded pool. Only 4 years old, and close to Cerritos shopping center. Owner has been transferred. #906

It's A Challenge for a decorator or speculator. Could be showplace, in beautiful neighborhood. Split-level with large family room, 2½ baths. You finish the swimming pool—owner must sell. #394

Rancho La Questa

Only 2 years young, but owner was transferred. 4 bedroom, 2 bath home with cathedral ceiling in family room. There's room for boat or trailer. You can own it for $86,700, all terms. #1789

Freeway-Near

Sharp, up-graded, near-new home in newest area. 4 spacious bedrooms, 2 baths, stone fireplace. Best VA or FHA terms on price of only $36,500. #131

Kingsize Bedrooms!

4 of them! Upgraded carpeting, drapes, and a tremendous queen's kitchen with all built-ins! Huge double garage! Close to major shopping! #1537

Reduced $4,000—Pool

Near-new 2-story with beautiful L-shaped, heated and filtered pool, 3 bedroom and den model, plus 9x11 dining room. Owner wants action now! #799

WHITTIER, NORWALK AREA

Basement Rumpus Room!

Built like the Rock of Gibraltar in an eastern style, this big 2-story boasts a rumpus room in a real basement. On top of that are hardwood floors, 3 bedrooms, and a huge 150' deep lot with many fruit trees. A rare find at $29,500. #1478

Grow Into This One

An elegant home with everything to offer! 4 spacious bedrooms, a 30-foot family room, 2 fireplaces, deluxe built-ins, covered patio, underground sprinklers, plus a heated and filtered pool! Full price only $36,500. #519

Mar Vista

One of Whittier's most sought-after areas, and a truly elegant home. This ideal combination offers everything for prestige living. 3 regal-size bedrooms, family room, hobby room, sun-deck and much, much more. Offered at $43,950. #384

4 Bedrooms—$21,750!

Lots of kids? Here's a pleasant atmosphere in an older home, with nice play-space, 2 baths, and a dining room for family meals. Yes 4 bedrooms, and 2 baths, for just $21,750. #1301

Big But Unfinished

Sharp but uncompleted new home with 5 big bedrooms. The price at this point is $33,000—and it will be worth a lot more when finishing touches are done. Here's a chance to buy big and pay small. #576

LA MIRADA-LA HABRA

Fix It Up and Save

Here's a big 4-bedroom for just $29,500—add some effort and you'll save a bundle. You get large bedrooms, central air conditioning, and a family kitchen complete with built-ins. FHA VA terms available. #1594

Super Sharp

4 spacious bedrooms, 2 baths, large living room with indirect lighting, huge brick fireplace. Queen's kitchen with gas built-ins. Lots of extras in this executive-type Parkwood Royal model. Available on FHA or VA terms, but hurry. #925

Aaron's HR assault, DPH rule stir fans' interest

NEW YORK (UPI) — Featuring something new and something old, baseball ushers in a bold era this week.

It's the year of specialization, the designated pinch-hitter, the most radical rules change the grand old game has seen in this century and the focus of a winter of speculation.

It will feature people like Tony Oliva and Rico Carty, former batting champions whose careers otherwise might have been cut short by disabling leg injuries.

But the DPH is strictly an American League innovation and before the season is half over, the National League, which consistently has outdrawn the A.L. in recent years, may have the spotlight again when attention switches to something more traditional, a record chase.

This will not be just any record chase. This is the record chase. Hank Aaron, the 39-year-old superstar of the Atlanta Braves, is approaching the pinnacle of all sports records, Babe Ruth's 714 career home runs.

Aaron who begins the season with 673, needs 42 homers to surpass Ruth's mark.

There also will be four teams with new managers and six others whose managers are starting their first full season, a new ballpark in Kansas City, more than two dozen "name" players in new cities and one, sadly, no longer in any city.

He, Roberto Clemente, newest member of the baseball Hall of Fame, will be honored Friday when the Pittsburgh Pirates retire his uniform in ceremonies before their opening game against St. Louis. Clemente's widow, Vera, and her three sons are expected to attend.

The season begins Thursday at Cincinnati when the Reds host the traditional early opener at Riverfront Stadium against San Francisco. Every other team in the majors begins Friday, except the Tigers and Indians who play Saturday at Cleveland. Kansas City will dedicate its new stadium in the Harry S. Truman Sports Complex with a game against Texas April 10.

Interest this season also will focus on: — FRITZ PETERSON AND MIKE KEKICH, The New York Yankees' lefthanders who swapped wives and children.

— LEO DUROCHER, AT AGE 67, trying to win one last pennant with the Houston Astros.

— WILLIE MAYS, AT AGE 41, getting $165,000 from the New York Mets who hope they are paying for more than an antique.

— VIDA BLUE, TRYING TO PROVE his brilliant 1971 season for Oakland was not a fluke.

— STEVE CARLTON, LAST SEASON'S super pitcher struggling with the Phillies, one of baseball's worst teams.

Three of last year's four division winners — Pittsburgh and Cincinnati in the National League and Oakland in the American — are favored to repeat. The Norton breaks Ali's jaw in upset

Painful, tearful upset

Dreams of title fight with champion George Foreman all but vanished Saturday afternoon when unheralded Ken Norton hammered Muhammad Ali with startling 12-round split-decision defeat. Norton reportedly broke Ali's jaw in first round, bringing Ali pained look and Buntini Brown many tears.

Split decision for underdog

Combined News Service

SAN DIEGO — Hometown hero Ken Norton broke Muhammad Ali's jaw in the first round, gave him a taste of his own brand of mocking medicine and vaulted from the league of what he calls "ham and eggs" fighters with a 12-round split decision Saturday over the former world heavyweight champion.

The loss all but slammed the door on Ali's plans to challenge George Foreman, the current heavyweight king, and left the division even further out of focus than it had been after Foreman knocked out Joe Frazier for the title earlier this year.

As Ali sat in his dressing room hitting his head and fists against the wall, declining to meet newsmen, his trainer, Angelo Dundee, said: "I wanted to stop it in the second round but Muhammad wouldn't let me."

At the end of the round, Ali returned to his corner "spitting blood." He told me "I broke it." He's a fantastically gutsy human being. When you have broken a jaw and you throw a punch, it hurts. When you get hit in the shoulder, it aches."

Dundee took Ali and his hysterical wife, Belinda, to Clarendon General Hospital where the fighter underwent 90 minutes of surgery to repair his broken jaw.

Dr. William Lundeen said Ali's jaw was broken on the lower left side. He called it "a clean break, all the way through."

Ali said little in the hospital, according to the doctor. "He was in considerable pain. If he broke it in the first round, as his manager says, I can't fathom how he could go the whole fight like that. That's real guts."

Dundee was asked if this was "the end of the line" for the 31-year-old Ali who had won 10 fights in a row since losing a 1971 title bout to Frazier.

"I think you're a jerk," answered Dundee, glaring at the reporter who asked the question.

"I told Muhammad to take it to him in the last two rounds," Dundee said. "I thought he came within an eyelash of getting him."

"We're not alibiing but every one in our corner including Ali thought we won the fight."

"I thought I had it all the way," said Norton. "I've decided Ali can't Downing perfect, but Angels aren't

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Al Downing of the Dodgers was near-perfect Saturday night.

In stark contrast, the Angels were models of imperfection — again.

Downing, throwing effortlessly and gracefully, romanced a perfect game for seven and one-third innings at Anaheim Stadium before settling for a combined two-hitter with George Culver that resulted in a 5-1 Dodger triumph — one that evened the Freeway Feud at one game apiece.

The rubber game is today at 2 p.m. at Dodger Stadium. While Downing was manipulating the baseball with the keen precision of a diamond-cutter, the Angels continued to kick it around like a live grenade.

They were found guilty of four more errors, making it nine in two games and 39 in 17 exhibition encounters. Two of the Dodger runs were unearned.

On a cool night before an audience of 19,157, Downing did not require much in the way of support. What he did need came from Willie Crawford who is behaving as if he is about to reward the Dodgers for that $100,000 bonus they dumped in his bank account nine years ago.

Crawford, who in the esteemed opinion of Walt Alston is "swinging the bat better than I have ever seen him," was at the forefront of an 11-hit Dodgers attack with a home run, double and single. He drove in a pair.

But it was Downing who enthralled the crowd. He dispatched the first 22 Angels he faced and was five outs away from an historic spring perfecto when Doug Howard drilled a double inside the bag at third.

For his efforts, Howard was roundly hissed by the spectators who were in an ugly mood anyway — put there by the Angels juggling act.

"I was aware of it all along," Downing said, "but I wasn't trying to build my pitching around that fact."

Was the veteran 31-year-old lefthander especially inspired Saturday night?

"I get up for every game, regardless of the situation," he answered. "That's the way I am. But I don't feel playing the Angels had any special significance."

After Howard ended Downing's dream, Leo Cardenas singled in the lone Angel run and Downing left to a loud ovation. George Culver, the newest Dodger, came in to serve up a double play ball and then retired the Angels in order in the ninth.

In the home clubhouse, Angel manager Bobby Winkles courageously refused to become alarmed over the abundance of errors.

"I'm not going to let physical errors concern me at this point," he said. "I've got too many other things to worry about. If the errors get out of hand during the season then I'll have to try and do something."

"But it wasn't errors that beat us tonight — it was a guy named Downing."

Crawford's 390-foot

Sham proves he's real thing in Derby

By Hank Hollingworth
Staff Writer

Laffit Pincay vindicated himself in sensational fashion. Saturday as Sham, the colt he selected over the odds-on favorite, Linda's Chief, romped to a two and one-half length victory over the Chief in the $124,400 Santa Anita Derby before 49,564 patrons.

Given his choice of both Kentucky Derby-bound colts, Santa Anita's leading rider opted for Sham, then wound up with egg on his face two weeks ago as Sham finished fourth in the San Felipe, seven staggering lengths behind Linda's Chief.

But Pincay justified his selection with a perfect ride Saturday even though his fellow Panamanian, Braulio Baeza, astride Linda's Chief, lodged a protest with the stewards.

Baeza claimed Sham's stablemate, Knightly Dawn, also owned by Sigmond Sommer, New York construction magnate, whacked Linda's Chief coming out of the gate, forcing the Chief to take up. If the foul claim had been allowed, Sham conceivably might have been disqualified from first place because of the actions of his stablemate.

Instant closed-circuit TV replay, however, proved this is what happened:

Ancient Title swerved into Linda's Chief, then when Milo Valenzuela, aboard Knightly Dawn, cracked his whip, the latter cut in front of the Chief, forcing the latter colt indeed to take up.

But the stewards ruled the initial trouble was caused by Ancient Title and let the actual result stand.

Out of the East took third money, two and one-quarter lengths behind Linda's Chief, with Ancient Title, Grashawk and Knightly Dawn finishing in that order in the slim, six-horse field.

Sham paid $5.80 to win as second choice. Because of the exorbitant money wagered on Linda's Chief to show—more than half the show money was on the favorite—there was a minus pool of $3,610.

Sham's time of 1:47 tied the 1965 race record of Lucky Debonair, who went on to win the Kentucky Derby.

The two colts who both ered Linda's Chief went out on the pace with Knightly Dawn holding a length lead over Ancient Title as the field passed the stands the first time of the mile and one-eighth race. Sham was third and Linda's Chief fourth.

Around the clubhouse turn the positions remained the same with the first pair running neck-and-neck.

At the half-mile pole, Ancient Title gained the lead, but on the stretch curve both Sham and Linda's Chief made their moves. Sham took the lead entering the stretch and moved in front by two lengths as Baeza attempted to get the Chief into high gear.

But the effort was in vain. It was Sham's day and the Pretense colt held his lead over Linda's Chief right down to the wire as Pincay applied the whip.

"When Sham got to the front," said Pincay, who was suspended for the final week of the Santa Anita meeting because of a careless ride Friday, "he started pricking his ears and pulling himself

Good grooming, hustle and discipline Winkles has some very quaint notions

Perhaps the first thing a Southern California sophisticate will notice about Bobby Brooks Winkles is that he has hardly any hair.

It's not that he can't grow it, but rather that he won't. His coiffure is cropped closely and parted neatly on one side, probably with Vaseline.

His sideburns, if they can be called that, trickle out barely halfway down his ears like a lawn that has been neglected lately.

Winkles is attempting to impart his philosophy of a conservative appearance — moderate sideburns, no mustaches — on the Angels, along with other quaint notions such as hustling and obeying the orders of the manager, which is himself.

Clearly, the latter two points, under proper direction, can help athletes perform better, but the value of the first regulation is in doubt.

Winkles agrees. "It does not make you play better whether you have long or short hair," he says. "There is no doubt about that."

IN THE SAME brain wave he anticipates the obvious followup observation: the Oakland Athletics last year won it all looking like two-and-a-quarter barber-shop quartets. Even manager Dick Williams sported hirsute adornment along his upper lip. Why upset temperamental professionals by applying silly rules?

"It's just the preference I have," Winkles explains. "I know Oakland's the world champions and that's Dick Williams' choice. My choice is not real long sideburns and no mustaches, and the hair so it doesn't hang over the collar."

I'm not really against mustaches. I know they're the style now. But I run the ball club and I think I ought to have a little something to say about the grooming."

Winkles adds that "so far, the players have said nothing about it." But he has received a sharper reaction at home, where he keeps three daughters of the with-it generation, ages 14, 12 and 9.

"They're against it," Bobby sighs. "They just said, 'Dad, that's a crock.'"

ANOTHER OF Winkles' interesting innovations is a 70-page playbook. He spent 280 hours working on it over the winter after the Angels promoted him from first base coach last October, succeeding Del Rice.

Right away he is on dangerous ground, assuming (a) that baseball players read and (b) that Karl Sweetan will not attempt to sell it to the New Orleans Saints.

But perhaps Bobby has made a liberal use of illustrations, including a centerfold of Mamie Van Doren, the ballplayer's friend.

"You're talking about me being one of 24 people in the world with a job that has one of the highest mortality rates of any profession. I could be fired the first year ... but I can't worry about that," Bobby Winkles.

"I'm not going to force them to study it," he says slyly, "but I'll know if they do from what they do on the field."

BOOK LEARNING comes naturally to Winkles, who drew a Masters in science, emphasis on physical education, from the University of Colorado and spent 13 years coaching several major leaguers and three NCAA championships at Arizona State.

Most of the kids from Tuckerman, Ark., just wanted to play baseball and Bobby did some of that, too, bouncing around the Chicago White Sox farm system as a shortstop-second baseman for five years in the '50s, waiting for Luis Aparicio and Nellie Fox to get old.

"Unfortunately, they were about the same age I was," Bobby laments. "It wasn't lack of hustle that kept me down. I thought I played pretty well without any ability."

"I would have made it under the expansion program, but in those days you had to spend seven years in the minor league program before anybody could get to you."

SO IF HE couldn't make it to the big one way, he finally made it another.

A year ago the Angels lured him away from Arizona State, but only as a coach.

"I'd say that was a pretty secure position," he says. "That would have had led to $50,000 a year within the next few years. I started from nothing — six thousand bucks a year — and, with the outside interests and things, I was close to $5 grand at the time."

Here I started for 20 or less. That's a pretty big cut. People laugh at me when I tell 'em, but it's the truth."

PEOPLE ALSO have been cynical about assurances given Winkles by the Angels, i.e., suspecting that he was told he would be Rice's successor from the start.

"I wanted to see if I could manage in the big leagues and I thought in three years I might get a chance," Winkles says. "It just happened it came quicker. I don't know why."

"The day before it happened, Harry Dalton, general manager, came to Arizona and said, 'What makes you think you could ever run a big league team?'"

"I tried to explain to him that I enjoyed people and that I had always been an honest and fair guy and a strict guy."

"He said, 'Well, I may make a change in managers. I'm considering five guys and I'll let you know in the morning at 9 o'clock.'"

"I didn't sleep real well, and the next morning he called and said, 'I want you over here in two hours.'"

"But my stupidity came out. Being a dumb Arky, I forgot to ask him what my salary was before I took the job. But I would have done it for nothing."

BOBBY SAYS he is one guy for whom managing is not solely an ego trip.

"For me," he says, "it was a matter of being at Arizona State and being 41 years old (43 now), having no more problems whatsoever in life, 'cause I was there as long as I wanted to be ... but with a chance of becoming stale."

He has not set lofty goals for himself or his team but, like all new managers, he enters with some revolutionary theories.

"It's up to me to make some sort of adjustment if I see it's screwing up the ball club. But, what the hell, all I'm asking is for the ballplayers to go out and give it a try the way I want it done."

"Baseball has fallen behind the rest of the sports in hustle and excitement for the fans. We want to make the people in Orange County and the nearby areas come to see an exciting ball club. Most certainly the Angels have never been in 11 years."

"I still don't know if I can manage. I have never managed a game in professional baseball. I would consider the season successful to finish third, above .500 and to have a club that hustled the entire year."

"There's one thing about this job I can tell you: I don't know how long I'm gonna last at it, but I'm not afraid."

'Designated hitter is a stupid rule'

Catfish says: 'I'd rather do it myself'

BUD TUCKER

Will DH spark beanball war?

One is half-crazed with curiosity if he has not seen the Abominable Snowman of the Himalayas or the Loch Ness monster, not to mention the designated hitter of Arizona.

Some of us will journey through life without laying eyes on the Snowman or the monster but I, for one, have viewed many designated hitters. The desert is awash with them and if you are alert, you will see several before you get to Phoenix.

The designated hitter is the person who bats in place of the pitcher in an American League baseball game. He will either rejuvenate or ruin the pastime, depending on one's point of view.

If nothing else, however, he served as a topic of conversation as the hours dragged through the monotonous ritual of spring training. When baseball people wearied of discussing sex and such related current events as wife swapping, they gratefully turned to the designated hitter.

The designated hitter, also known as the DH, is topical for a variety of reasons. Not the least of these is the possibility the DH rule will create within the American League a series of conflicts known as beanball wars.

THE FOREGOING refers to those occasions on which a pitcher throws at the head of an opposing batsman. When the sides change, the next pitcher to the mound retaliates and so on and so forth until the umpire in charge puts a stop to it or somebody is seriously hurt.

The point being made is that the pitcher will have nothing to fear after throwing a beanie inasmuch as he does not have to place his head in jeopardy as a batter. No eye for an eye or tooth for a tooth, so to speak. Ron Santo and the Chicago Cubs participated in a beanball skirmish with the New York Mets in 1966. Santo, who emerged with a smashed cheekbone, has his views on the DH rule which arrives seven years later.

"A bad rule," Santo says. "What does a pitcher care? He doesn't have to come to the plate and take his medicine. That league is going to wind up with a bunch of headhunters."

Clyde Wright of the other league, who has been accused of now and then going in search of heads, puts his opinion quite succinctly.

"I'm not going to change the way I pitch. The new rule doesn't have anything to do with anything."

MORE THAN an iota of dignity vanished from baseball during the 1972 playoffs when Bert Campaneris launched his bat at the skull of Detroit Tiger pitcher Lerin Lagrow. Campy, who will view the first seven games of the 1973 season from the bench of the Oakland Athletics following a rule by the outraged administrators of baseball, claims regrets.

"I was provoked," Campaneris says. "I was tired of being thrown at. I lost my temper and threw the bat at him like he was throwing the ball at me."

"Now I'm sorry. Now I want to forget the whole thing."

Happily, the office of the commissioner saw fit to dispatch a memo advising the umpires of the DH rule.

"We'll be on the lookout," says supervisor of umpires Dick Butler, reassuringly.

THE THING is, a baseball exploded from 60 feet at speeds approaching 100 m.p.h. is a somewhat dangerous missile. This is particularly true when the guy at whom it is thrown does not see it approaching.

Ray Chapman of Cleveland was killed thusly in 1920. Tony Conigliaro was forced into retirement after a beating destroyed his eyesight. Brooklyn's Don Zimmer was given last rites after being struck on the head twice during the 1954 season.

Popeye, who now manages the San Diego Padres, wears a steel plate in his head.

"Any pitch thrown at a batter's head must be suspect," Zimmer says. "If the new rule sets off a bunch of beanballs, somebody could get killed over there."

"The American League's designated hitter rule has been a major topic of conversation this past winter and spring—and with good reason. Not only is it a major change in the concept of the national pastime, it's as radical a change as the switch from the fire horse to the fire engine."

The statement was from Tom Monahan, the American League's director of publicity, who thought, quite naturally, it was a beautiful idea to have a slugger the likes of Harmon Killebrew or Bob Oliver emerge from the dugout to bat for the pitcher.

I do, too—at this moment. But I may change my mind after I've seen a few months of the new rule in action.

But there are two sides to every coin and on the other side of this coin is the world champion Oakland A's pitcher, James Augustus (Catfish) Hunter.

Catfish doesn't want anybody to bat for him. The man from North Carolina is a DH himself—dedicated hitter, NOT designated hitter.

When the word filtered here that Catfish was dead set against the designated hitter rule, a call was placed to him and other Oaklanders at the world champions' camp in Mesa, Arizona. The timing couldn't have been more brilliant.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

"ASK ME WHAT I THINK about that stupid rule today, and you've got one helluva fast answer," drawled the Carolinian. "Ask me about it any day and you'll get the same response. But today I showed the world what I can do with a bat and I don't need anybody coming off the bench to hit for me."

What did you do that was so great, Catfish? "In my first at-bat I caught a curveball in mid-dip and whacked it into the centerfield fence. I got a double, but I might have gone for three bases if it wasn't just a spring training game."

"A couple innings later, I lined a single over the shortstop's head. If I'd have pitched more than five innings, I might have gone 4-for-4."

"DESIGNATING SOMEBODY to hit for me is something I can do without," the Carolina Catfish continued.

"I'm a better hitter than most pinchhitters and so is Blue Moon Odom. Both of us like to feel we're in the game—the whole game."

"I've always been serious about my hitting. I like to think if I hadn't been a pitcher, I might have made good as a first baseman or an outfielder or something. But I don't want Sal Bando or Gonzalo Marques to come to the plate and swing for me."

This question to Hunter: Why are most pitchers, excluding yourself and Blue Moon, such terrible batters? After all, since pitchers generally are poor hitters, that's the reason for the designated hitter rule in the first place.

"Most pitchers think they're overworking their arm by swinging hard at a pitched ball," replied Catfish. "That's nonsense. They should realize that instead of being automatic outs all these years, they could help themselves win a few more games by going up to the plate like they mean it."

TWO OTHER CHARLES FINLEY EMPLOYEES also expressed displeasure with the new rule.

"I don't see where it has added a thing to the game," remarked Bando. "There is an established order to baseball and it upsets the balance to have something like a pinchhitter from the dugout batting for the pitcher."

"It's a spooky feeling to hit and run the bases, then not grab your glove and run onto the field."

"Lots of other players think the same way. The reflex action is part of the entire game. This new rule has left pitchers like Odom and Hunter very jittery, and I can understand why. They're both good enough hitters to want to get their cuts at the plate and help their own game."

"Coming off the bench, like I've done some times in Mesa, I don't feel like I'm a part of the game, but on the other hand, I know that Blue Moon and Catfish would have just as much maybe more, under the circumstances—as me and that's because they're part of the game."

"Sitting on the bench, I'm not part of the game."

ANOTHER OAKLANDER who subscribes to the jittery theory is pitcher Kenny Holtzman.

"It's possible that I may never have another official major league at-bat again," said the Missouri southpaw, "and that's a scary thought."

"I'm a good hitting pitcher, too, but not a great one like Catfish. You could use him as a designated hitter on days he wasn't pitching and he might be a .300 hitter."

"But I'm dead and I don't know what I'll do while the rest of the team is batting and I'm not involved. I don't like the rule because it takes me away from the game when I should be a very integral part of it. I may not be a Killebrew with the bat, but I'm no simple out, either. I want my bat and I'll miss having it taken away."

THERE YOU HAVE SOME OPINIONS, all on the negative side to an issue which was considered a beneficial gimmick to the American League because that circuit has been dying and needs dough.

The National League, which approved the designated hitter rule for the junior circuit, is going to let the Orioles, A's, Chisox and Angels toy with it through its embryonic stage.

The National League, slick and prosperous, needs

CATFISH HUNTER
I can do without it

SAL BANDO Hasn't added a thing

no such gimmicks. It will be content to sit back and watch the other league's experiment.

Some people suspect the rule will have a bad effect on young athletes just starting in Little League programs. That's possible. The kid with the strongest arm gets to pitch. Maybe he'll go through high school without ever getting a chance to bat. Think about it.

But, just remember that Babe Ruth and Stan Musial started out as pitchers. Can you imagine what a catastrophe it would have been if Ollie Gutz and Clyde Turnover were used as designated hitters for The Babe and The Man?

A shuddering thought, isn't it?

In the meantime, I haven't swerved. I like the rule because for too many years I've been sick and tired seeing pitchers taking three serves and retiring gracefully to the bench.

Anyway, baseball's switch from the fire horse to the fire engine is here. At the very least, the new rule will light a fire somewhere. It will be interesting to see if the blaze spreads or it is extinguished in fast time.

MOUSTACHES ARE BLOOMING

NEW YORK (AP) — The champion Oakland Athletics set the style, and now the trend is toward hair — and more hair — among major league baseball players.

When the players trot onto the field for the 1973 season, starting April 5, fans may have trouble recognizing their favorite heroes behind all that foliage.

Moustaches are blooming anew all around both leagues. Some are full. Some are pencil-thin. Some are handlebar. All are magnificent. More manes are falling below the collar line. The blacks are going heavier for the bushy Afro. In baseball, this is the age of the hirsute.

Many managers who formerly had reservations and even strict rules against unbridled hair growth and face adornments have relaxed their attitudes. If Manager Dick Williams can take all those long-hairs and moustachioed wonders at Oakland and turn them into world champions, the realists seem to reason, why not try and do the same? The A's again will be sporting their growths highlighted by Rollic Fingers' waxed English-style twister on his upper lip, but the most dramatic changes will be seen on some other clubs.

Jim Fregosi, the New York Mets' third baseman, showed up at camp about 20 pounds lighter but with a bushel more hair — a fancy moustache and a black, curly mane long enough to be tied in ribbons.

Houston's Larry Yount turned from a sallow youth to a mature TV deputy marshal type with his blond moustache and curly locks. A new handlebar moustache also will distinguish Danny Frisella of the Atlanta Braves.

It will be hard to recognize such players as Jerry Bell and Wilbur Howard of the Milwaukee Brewers and Tommy Harper of the Boston Red Sox underneath the heavy shrubbery cultivated during the off-season.

ROLIC FINGERS
The Handlebar King

Ray Busse's flowing beard is the envy of the St. Louis Cardinals. The Yankees' Mike Kekich and Bobby Murcer at last sport more natural hair than their mod boss, Mike Burke.

For quality and quantity, however, no team will be able to match the hirsute glory of Charles O.

Finley's A's. The picturesque moustache of relief pitcher Fingers is more striking than ever. Reggie Jackson has added a beard. Darold Knowles has grown a handlebar moustache. Sal Bando cut his moustache off in a moment of pique and hastily let it grow back. With the A's you don't identify the players by their numbers. You do it by the length and style of their moustaches and hair.

Some crewcut, die-hard conformists remain, however. One of these is Sparky Anderson, manager of the National League champion Cincinnati Reds, who keeps such stars as Johnny Bench and Pete Rose groomed to the Roaring Twenties specifications.

Another is Danny Ozark, rigid disciplinarian of the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I grew a moustache," said pitcher Steve Carlton, the team's 27-game and Cy Young Award winner. "Danny doesn't like it. I decided to cut it off."

Dodgers- Martin back, Tigers win opposite field homer off Angel starter Bill Singer accounted for the first Dodger run in the second. After the first of two errors by Angel second baseman Jerry DaVanon led to an unearned run in the fifth, Crawford doubled home Bill Buckner and chased Singer in the sixth.

Steve Yeager singled off Lloyd Allen to drive in Crawford and the Dodgers added their final run in the seventh when Buckner scored from third only because catcher Art Kusnyer dropped the ball at home plate.

Buckner was trying to score on a roller to DaVanon at second. DaVanon threw home and Buckner was called out. He became quite safe when Kusnyer couldn't maintain possession.

Singer went a creditable 5.1 innings. He gave up four runs (3 earned) and five hits but his fastball was responsible for 6 strikeouts. He was tiring in the fifth and sixth, serving up 3 walks.

The Dodgers added one final insult in the seventh inning. Steve Garvey stole second base while Angel pitcher Ron Perranoski held the ball and watched the theft.

Perhaps Perranoski was thinking if he threw it, someone would drop it.

Manager Billy Martin ended his one-day walkout Saturday and the Detroit Tigers celebrated his return with a 5-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Martin walked out Friday during a meeting with General Manager Jim Campbell and outfielder Willie Horton over a fine he assessed the player, saying he was through. But the fiery skipper was back on the job Saturday after an early morning meeting with Campbell.

Two old-timers, 38-year-old Al Kaline and 36-year-old Jim Perry, sparked the victory. Kaline hit a home run in the fourth inning and an two-run double in the fifth. Perry, making his first start since being acquired from Minnesota last Tuesday pitched six innings and allowed only one run, a homer by Darrell Evans.

Kansas City's Steve Busby, who combined with Doug Bird to pitch a no-bitter last week, almost did it again, but the St. Louis Cardinals turned their only hit—off relief pitcher Gene Garber—into a run to defeat the Royals 1-0. Busby worked seven hitless innings, retiring 17 men in a row. The Cardinals couldn't get anything going until the eighth, after Busby was replaced by Garber. Ted Simmons singled for the only St. Louis hit, stole second, went to third on an infield out and scored on another infield out by Luis Melendez.

Ironically, Bird was sent to the minors earlier in the day. Cleon Jones hit a bases-loaded triple in the first inning as the New York Mets rocked Mike Kekich for all their runs in the first two frames and defeated the New York Yankees 7-2.

Don Baylor walloped his fifth and sixth spring homers and then triggered a four-run eighth-inning rally with a double as the Baltimore Orioles outslug the Texas Rangers 10-7. Earl Williams also homered for the Orioles while Alex Johnson connected for the Rangers.

The Pittsburgh Pirates scored twice on two hit batsmen, a double steal, two errors and a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning and defeated the Boston Red Sox 4-2.

Baseball

New York Yankees, who haven't finished on top since 1964, are favored in the American League East. The designated pinch-hitter and Aaron's quest for Ruth's record should stir fan interest but are not necessarily expected to decide the pennants.

In the American League East, the Yankees are favored because of the addition of hitters like Matty Alou, a former National League batting champ with a .310 lifetime average, and Graig Nettles, a lefthander who is expected to take advantage of the short right-field fence at Yankee Stadium. Both are expected to play both offensively and defensively. The Yankees say the team has no after-effects of the Peterson-Kekick trade.

Oakland has most of the club that won last year's World Series, but has traded away Mike Epstein and Dave Duncan and a key question is whether Blue will pitch as well as he did in '71, when he was the Most Valuable Player, or in '72, when he won only six games.

If Oakland falters, the team most likely to replace it as the West champion is Chicago. Led by Dick Allen, the White Sox narrowly missed last season. They have strengthened themselves with the addition of center-fielder Ken Henderson and apparently have Bill Melton, the league's 1971 home run champ, healthy again.

The biggest question in the National League is how well the Pirates replace Clemente in rightfield, with catcher Manny Sanguillen being given the first shot. While most experts believe Pittsburgh has so much talent it should win again anyway, the psychological effect of Clemente's loss still is unknown.

Cincinnati, which won the N.L. playoff over the Pirates on a wild pitch in the last inning of the final game last season, looks even stronger with the acquisition of outfielder Richie Scheinblum and pitcher Roger Nelson from the American League. But Houston, whose pitching was a major disappointment last season, is expected to provide a stiff challenge. There's question whether Durocher, who has not managed a pennant-winner since 1954, can manage one again.

The teams with new managers are California, which hired Bobby Winkles, who won three NCAA championships as the coach at Arizona State; Kansas City, Jack McKeon; Texas, White Herzog; and Philadelphia, Danny Ozark.

Durocher, Frank Quilici (Minnesota), Del Crandall (Milwaukee), Eddie Mathews (Atlanta), Whitey Lockman (Chicago Cubs) and Don Zimmer (San Diego) are beginning their first full season with their new clubs. They replaced other managers during the 1972 campaign.

Besides the Yankees, White Sox and Reds, the teams with the most new "name" players are Atlanta and Texas. The Braves, trying to strengthen a woefully inadequate pitching staff, acquired Gary Gentry and Danny Frisella from the Mets, Pat Dobson from Baltimore and Carl Morton from Montreal. They also added second baseman Dave Johnson and catcher John Oates from the Orioles.

Texas got Carty from Atlanta, former A.L. batting champion Alex Johnson from Cleveland and Epstein from Oakland.

Frank Robinson is playing with his third team in three years, the Angels. Orlando Cepeda will take his swings at the short leftfield wall in Fenway Park for the Boston Red Sox. The New York Mets hope Felix Millan will help answer their infield problems.

PHILADELPHIA—Danny Lawson, of Philadelphia, became the WHA's all-time single-season goal scorer with his 50th, 51st and 52nd goals Saturday as the Blazers clinched a playoff berth, 5-1, over Chicago. Andre Lacroix assisted on Lawson's goals and also scored his 47th goal for 121 points. PHILADELPHIA—Quebec beat Houston, 5-1, but lost out in the playoff race when Philadelphia won. Larry Lund broke Sergei Zubov's shutout bid with the lone Houston goal 41 minutes from the final buzzer. CLEVELAND—Cleveland won 4-2, for the second time in four games for the National.

Corrigan provides spark

Kings close out with win

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Like the swallows returning to Capistrano every spring, the Kings are playoff-less for the fourth year in a row.

The Kings held their "Last Tango in Los Angeles" Saturday night and came away with a 6-3 victory over the Vancouver Canucks before 11,516 fans at the Forum.

Explosive is a word seldom associated with the Kings, but Saturday was one of those rare instances when they pumped in their most goals since Dec. 5 when they beat the N.Y. Islanders, 6-1.

Jack Kent Cooke's commandos finished fifth in the NHL West with a 31-36-11 record and totaled 73 points. A year ago the Kings managed 49 points while finishing last. The 73 points equalled a club record and surprisingly, it would have qualified the Kings for the Stanley Cup playoffs the last two seasons. This year it's worth a cup of coffee.

Like all the players, Cooke echoed his disappointment of missing the playoffs again. From his home, Cooke wired the team a short message:

"We must share together the bitter disappointment of the failure of the Kings to make the playoffs. A sad ending to an exciting season of peaks and valleys."

"I'm confident that the sum total of your fine ability and a renewed spirit to win next year will put the Kings near, or better still, at the top of the division."

"I am deeply sorry that I cannot be with you tonight to shake your hands and to wish each of you the best of good will throughout the summer. And, especially to remind you that your goal next year is first the divisional championship — and then you know what. Best wishes. Jack Kent Cooke."

Still unable to explain why his skaters lost twice to California earlier in the week which ruined their post-season hopes, Pulford said, "I thought we should have made the playoffs. I feel sorry for the fans who supported us all year. I think we have the nucleus for an excellent hockey club next year. I'm confident we'll definitely be a contender next year. Beginning Monday I'll sit down with Larry Regan (g.m.) and begin making plans for next year."

Saturday's crowd lifted the Kings' season attendance to a record 424,456 for 39 dates, an average of 10,896. Previous high during the club's six-year history was 379,521 in 1968-69. Best average was 9,222 in 1970-71.

Mike Corrigan's two goals Saturday raised his season total to a club record 37. By winning 31 games, the Kings matched their previous highest output in the victory column.

KING CUBES: Rogie Vachon was the major award winner in the King award presentations Saturday night between periods. The King goal was chosen Most Valuable Player by the So. Calif. Hockey Writers' Assn. He also was presented the trophy for being selected No. 1 Star most times this season and then was called his Most Inspirational Player. Larry Brown won the Unsung Hero Award. Vic Venenky was honored as Outstanding Rookie. Butch Goring was named Most Popular Player while the Leading Scorer award went to Willie Wilson for the third year in a row. Wilson scored a club record 79 points this season.

The Kings were without Dan Maloney who suffered a partially dislocated knee cap injury in Friday's loss to California. Goring picked up his first penalty of the year in the second period for tripping Vancouver goalie Dave McLellan and making only his second start. Although the rookie beat Toronto in his first NHL game while yielding 4 goals, The Kings beat him for five goals in the first two periods.

The Kings ran their penalty killing streak to 36 in succession while one man short.

Is one good half enough for Lakers? Boston, Hawks open playoffs

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Bulls are always tough ... but they always lose

Can the Lakers continue to play only one good half of basketball and keep winning in the playoffs? That question is on the minds of many of their followers, if not management, as the defending NBA champions get ready for game No. 2 of the Western Conference prelims tonight against the pesky Chicago Bulls at the Forum.

The Lakers survived the opener Friday in overtime, 107-104, after a terrible first half in which they shot 36 per cent and trailed by nine points.

Some say the Lakers have the ability to turn on the power when they choose. It may have been so last year, but refuting that statement this season is a poor 4-8 record against playoff-bound teams in the last six weeks.

No team can sustain an attack for 48 minutes. The better teams can limit their slumps to a few minutes or only one quarter. The Lakers rarely have played more than one half of quality basketball lately.

The in-and-out pattern may not be cause for alarm; but it is certainly difficult to explain. The Lakers often appear disinterested. They definitely lack the killer instinct. Mostly, everyone seems to be pacing himself, preserving his energy for when it really counts.

The playoffs really count, and the Lakers were able to switch on the "go" button Friday in the second half and overtime. But can they keep shoving victory so close and hope to beat the likes of Milwaukee, Boston or New York?

Chicago is a formidable threat, but the Bulls are psychologically dead against the Lakers. They have lost to them so many times, 13 of seconds remaining in a one-point game.

"I'm sick and tired of being rolled around this (bleep) league like a (bleep) bowling ball," fiery coach Dick Motta said after the game. It was his way of saying his starless team gets the short end of the stick from referees when they play teams with superstars.

Motta once used to lay it on the refs, but the fine is so heavy these days that no coach can afford to offend the whistle-toters.

largely in the won-lost records, and what else really matters?

The best-of-seven series shifts to Chicago Friday and Sunday, then if a fifth game is necessary, game No. 5 will be at the Forum next Sunday.

No one really expects the series to exceed five games unless the Lakers get careless and start playing more than one half of bad basketball.

SHORT SHOTS: Wilt Chamberlain's 13.2 scoring average was the low of his 14-year career and his 1,535 rebounds was his second worst season. But he won the rebound title for the 11th time with an 18.8 per-game average and his shooting percentage of .727 eclipsed his own NBA record of .681. Wilt's free throw percentage of .510 was well ahead of last year's .421, but he has exceeded that figure six times, including a .530 just two years ago. Wilt attempted only 588 field goals, 16 over the minimum to qualify for the title. The minimum was lowered this year because of the no-shoot rule on the first six common fouls. Unofficially, Wilt had 446 blocks, an average of 5 1/2 per game. He played all 82 games to run his consecutive streak to 255.

Jerry West's season average of 22.8 also was the lowest of his career, as was his average minutes played per game of 35.3. His 607 assists was the third best of his career and his .479 field goal percentage exceeded his lifetime norm of .473. By missing 13 games Jerry has now sat out 150 due to injuries over 13 seasons, plus another 15 in playoffs. Gail Goodrich's 23.9 average was two points under last year but the second best of his eight-year career. At .494, he was one point above his lifetime shooting percentage. His .480 mark at the free throw line, highlighted by a Laker record of 41 in succession, was a shade under last year's career best of .489.

Jim McMillan, with a late flurry, averaged 18.9, one-tenth better than his sophomore season. Also, by hitting 32 of his last 33 free throws, he beat out Goodrich for the club lead, .845 to .840. McMillan dropped off in field goal accuracy and rebounds, however.

Bill Bridges collected 904 rebounds, the first time in seven years he has been under 1,000. He played all 82 games (10 with Philadelphia) and has missed only 13 in 10 years since his rookie season.

As a team the Lakers finished fourth in the NBA in total offense with 111.7 points per game and fifth in defense with a yield of 103.2, the best since coming to the West Coast. The Lakers committed the fewest number of fouls, 1,636, and tied Kansas City for second in field goal accuracy at .478 behind Milwaukee's .481. In free throwing the Lakers finished 14th at .744.

Boston's Celtics, near-unbeatable in pro basketball playoffs during the Bill Russell era, attempt today to begin rebuilding that image of invincibility in the Dave Cowens era.

This winningest regular-season team in Celtic history meets the Atlanta Hawks in the opener of a best-of-seven National Basketball Assn. series in the Boston Garden.

Boston had a 68-14 regular season record as the 6-foot-9 Cowens, a sharpshooting giant who plays with the intensity of a little man, won the Most Valuable Player award in a vote of NBA peers.

The Celtics won 11 NBA championships in 13 seasons through 1968-69 with the 6-foot-10 Russell in the middle, but began suffering with the alphas when the big guy retired.

Then came Cowens from Florida State, combining with superstar forward John Havlicek, and the Celts began to blossom again. They were back to respectability last year and now sit among the playoff favorites.

New boating star roars to win

By DON CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

REDONDO BEACH.—A newcomer to hot boating has come to the front in the last two Pacific Offshore Power Boat Racing Assn. classics by placing fourth in the recent Mission Bay Offshore Classic and then roaring to first place in the second annual Bushmills-KBIG Grand Prix here Saturday.

He is Arthur W. Norris, who drove Slap Shot, a 36-foot Cigarette hull designed by the famous Don Aronow and powered with twin 496-cubic-inch Mercruiser stern-drive engines.

What is so unusual about Saturday's race is that Norris raced against some of the top drivers of the nation, including Dr. Robert Magoon, who came west from Miami to pilot Carl Kiekhaefer's Aeromarine III, which finished third just a minute behind the second-place winner, Sandy Sattolo, of Fairview, Ohio, who drove another Cigarette hull, equipped with the 408-cubic-inch engines that Kiekhaefer builds at his Fond du Lac, Wis., plant.

Nobody was bragging about their fast times Saturday night at the awards banquet because even the victor's time was slow due to unusual weather conditions.

What started out as a very tame day with an eight-knot westerly turned into a rip-roaring period of wind twice that fast and short swells near the mainland and 12-to-15-foot swells and rollers on the long haul to Anacapa Island.

The big 36-footers and the smaller boats were bouncing out of the water and showing their whirling props even in short runs around the starting and finishing boat, which was Merle Stromberg's Theresa of Long Beach.

Blonde IV, with Roger Hanks, Midland, Tex., at the wheel and an odds-on favorite, led the racers from Redondo's offshore staging area to the Pt. Dume checkpoint, back past the starting boat, to the Palos Verdes stake boat, then across the channel toward Avalon, but then Blonde lost an outdrive and almost sank. Hanks ran it as fast as possible back to Redondo with two escort craft and kept the boat from sinking. His boat was similar to that of the victor.

Tom Gentry and Fred Miller, Honolulu, driving a boat almost identical to Slap Shot and Blonde IV, took the lead and held it until he returned to the mainland, then started the long stretch around Anacapa island, where he ran into trouble. He was out of the race on the back side of Anacapa.

Norris' time for the 200 nautical miles was 61.9 miles per hour; Sattolo's was 60 mph.; Dr. Magoon's 59.7. Steve Tognoli in Dante's Inferno II was fourth at 55.8, and Popeye was fifth at 52.3, with Dominic Visconti driving.

Bob Nordskog, driving American Viking, a 27-foot magnum with twin Johnson outboards, ran into trouble while trying to make the Anacapa run and was reported "missing at sea" for more than an hour.

Later, Nordskog, president of POPBRA, was found and towed into the Channel Islands Marina at Ventura.

Barry McCown and Bob Bowles, Seal Beach, driving Banzai, a 24-foot Spectra, were first over the shorter 109-nautical-mile course at 46.5 mph. The father-and-son team, Bill and Bob Vogel, Arcadia, finished second at 45.7 mph.

Johncock gets pole by draw

HAMPTON, Ga. (UPI) — USAC driver Gordon Johncock of Phoenix, won the pole position Saturday in a special drawing for today's 14th Atlanta 500 stock car race.

NASCAR officials were forced to draw the starting positions after rain washed out qualifying sessions three days in a row. The first 17 spots were taken from a list of the top drivers entered in the $111,225 event, while 31 other minor entries battled for the remaining 23 positions in the 40-car starting lineup.

Ironically, Johncock had turned in the best qualifying time of the nine drivers who were able to get a clocking before the rains came Friday. He toured the 1.522 high-banked track at Atlanta International Raceway at a top speed of 156.365 miles an hour in his 1972 Chevrolet.

Bobby Isaac of Catawba, N.C., won the outside pole by the luck of the draw and will run the oval super speedway in a 1972 Ford.

The starting positions for the race:

'Wheels bid falls shy, 52-50

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (Special) — Gary Osburn followed up two missed free throws with a basket in the final two minutes to help Indianapolis edge the Long Beach Flying Wheels, 52-50, Saturday in the National Wheelchair Basketball Championships.

Osburn missed two free throw attempts but followed up the misses with a bucket to increase Indianapolis' advantage to 51-48. After Mel Lockett scored for the Flying Wheels, Curtis Bell sank one of two free throws for the winning margin.

Lockett, who finished with 25 points, was voted the tournament's most valuable player. Lockett hit 11-of-16 shots from the floor and sank 3-of-4 from the free throw line.

Long Beach had a chance to win the game. After Lockett scored his basket, he stole an inbounds pass. But in doing so, placed his hand on the floor, a violation of the rules and Indianapolis regained possession of the ball.

Detroit, two-time defending champions, routed Brooklyn 92-36 for third place. Gary Odorowski of Detroit scored 29, high in the tournament.

Bethke, Black blank Mt. SAC

Cerritos College struck for seven runs in the first two innings and went on to rout Mt. San Antonio College, 11-0, Saturday in South Coast Conference play.

Mike Pagnotta, George Horton and Rich Thompson each drove in two runs for conference-leading Cerritos. Rick Bethke struck out five, but walked five. Butch Black relieved Bethke in the eighth inning.

Cerritos, 10-2, holds a one-game lead over Fullerton but the Hornets have a makeup game Monday.

up. If he hadn't done that he would have run even faster.

"Last time I hustled him going to the first turn because I wanted to be close to Linda's Chief when we hit the stretch. But I think it confused him because he's a big, long-striding horse who doesn't want to be rushed. Today I didn't hustle him or take a hold of him. I just let him go on his own. When we went around the first turn and I saw I was laying third, I felt like laughing. I knew then he'd be tough."

"When Sham started pulling himself up, I heard the announcer say that Linda's Chief was moving up and I figured my horse would dig in again when he saw Linda's Chief. But I was getting into my horse and he started going again on his own before that other horse got to us."

Baeza thought the incident cost him the race.

"The boxing-in by those two speed horses cost me three or four lengths," said the 1972 Eclipse Award winner, "and made me ride differently. He ran a good race, but well, that's the way the ball bounces."

"Jerry Lambert (Out of the East): 'Groshack ducked over abruptly at the head of the stretch, but it didn't really bother my horse. The only real problem we had was my horse couldn't run as fast as those other two.'"

Sham will run in the Wood Memorial in New York—where he might face Secretariat (1973 horse-of-the-year), then in the Kentucky Derby in five weeks, trainer Frank Martin declared.

"We're not worried about meeting Secretariat before the Kentucky Derby," grinned the Cuban trainer. "And we'd let Linda's Chief try again anytime at a mile and one-eighth or more. Luke Pincay said before the race, this colt is a distance-loving horse and the big money is in the distance races."

After three defeats as a two-year-old in maiden races, lightly-raced Sham was sold to Sommer for $200,000 last November at a dispersal sale. Saturday Sommer gave all the credit for the purchase to his trainer.

"When I hired Martin in 1966, I had only three garage horses and I wanted Frank to build me a stable," laughed the magnate. "I always had complete trust in him and our seven-year relationship certainly paid off today."

It did, indeed, to the tune of $79,400 for Sommer. Sham now has earned $124,530 for Sommer. A victory in the Kentucky Derby will pay off Sham's mortgage, but with Sommer's bankroll, money is only secondary.

At this point, the vindicated Pincay feels the same way.

By Lee Trevino

AN INSIDE JOB

When you're snowbound in Keokuk, there isn't much you can do in a golfing way. Okay, you can putter around with your wife.

To retain your "feel," put your hands on a golf club a few minutes each day. I haul a roll of carpet around the country with me to practice my stroke. Or I chip from the rug into a chair. I bladed one once and almost ruined a hotel window.

TITANIC THOMPSON, the greatest hustler who ever lived, is such a deadly chipper he can get up and down in two from St. Paul to Minneapolis. He practices chipping into a shoe leaning against the back of a chair. If it's good enough for Ti, it's good enough for Lee.

So roll out the carpet when you're snowbound or just killing time. When I'm rug-putting, I don't think about anything but the stroke. I'm watching the putter, seeing how it goes back. I try to keep the blade just a shade inside the line.

Keep your stroke short, then accelerate as the putter comes into the ball. Then chip. Then put. Then ... get the idea?

Greensboro hit by heavy rains

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) Heavy rains forced postponement Saturday of the third round of the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament, setting up a 36-hole final today.

Showers doused the Sedgfield Country Club course all night, leaving half the greens unplayable, and rain was still falling when the round was wiped out about 11:30 a.m.

Bill Casper, a pudgy old pro, takes a one-shot lead into today's double round with the first tee-off times scheduled at 6:22 a.m.

Lou Graham is closest to Casper's 36-hole total of 131 and 60-year-old Sam Snead stands at 133 with colorful veteran Doug Sanders.

No golfers had teed off when PGA official Jack

Windy 7-stroke lead for Cullen

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Betsy Cullen, "playing the percentages" and combating winds that gusted to 35 mph, fired an even-par 73 Saturday that was good enough for a seven-stroke lead with one round to go in the $30,000 Alamo Ladies Open.

Miss Cullen, who has only one tour victory to her credit, needed only 28 putts for the second day in a row over the 6,221-yard, par-72 Woodlake CC course.

Her 36-hole total of 142 left her seven in front of Marlene Hagge, Joyce Kazmierski, Sandra Palmer and Betty Burfeindt. Miss Burfeindt has started the day in second place three strokes back of Miss Cullen, but faded to a 77.

Miss Palmer would have been two strokes closer to the leader had it not been for a penalty imposed upon her and her two playing partners for improving their lies in an area marked by tournament officials as rough.

"After walking this course I decided I wanted to play the percentages," said Miss Cullen. "I want to hit the fat part of each green, where it is balanced and the ball will hold well."

"You can't gamble much on this course. It has worked out well. I'm going to do the same thing tomorrow."

All the players complained about the high winds. Miss Burfeindt, who parred 16 holes and double bogeyed the other two, said one gust of wind almost knocked her over as she stood on the sixth tee.

"It was atrocious," she said. "There must have been a small tornado out there. The water was blowing out of the lake (into which she knocked her ball on that hole) and we all got wet."

Nine strokes behind the leader at 151 came Cathy Duggan, Gerda Boykin and Susie McCallister.

Czechs rout Poland in hockey, 14-1

MOSCOW (AP) — Czechoslovakia, led by Jaroslav Holik's three goals, routed Poland 14-1 in opening defense of its world hockey championship Saturday.

A crowd of 15,000 watched the powerful Czechs score three times in the first period, six times in the second and five times in the third.

'King Jack' man to beat It's Masters time in Georgia

AUGUSTA, GA. (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus has a date with golf immortality at this week's Masters tournament.

The "Golden Bear," who has never swerved from his avowed goal of winning more major championships than anyone else, not only can become the Masters' first five-time winner, but he can also pick up his 14th "major" title and break his present tie with the late Bobby Jones.

The 33-year-old Nicklaus is favored to accomplish these feats and what could be more fitting than to have him make that bid on the course that Jones built with the expressed purpose of testing golf greatness.

Nicklaus tied Jones' 42-year-old record of 13 major titles last year when he won his fourth Masters and his third U.S. Open. He also owns two PGA, two British Open and two U.S. Amateur championships.

The 37th renewal of the Masters, annually the first "major" golf tournament of the year, begins its four-day run over the azalea and dogwood-becked Augusta National Thursday.

Just about everyone, including exuberant Lee Trevino, who has title ambitions of his own, see Jack Nicklaus as the man to beat.

Nicklaus' record in the Masters over the past decade has been phenomenal. In that span, he has won four times, tied for second twice, finished no worse than eighth two other times, set an all-time scoring record of 17-under-par 271 (in 1965), and taken home an average of $12,556 per tournament.

Nicklaus, who became the Masters' youngest champion when he won in 1963 at 23 and its only back-to-back champion when he won in 1965 and 1966, matched Arnold Palmer's record of four Masters titles last year with a three-stroke victory.

When he also won the U.S. Open by three strokes two months later, Nicklaus was halfway en route to professional golf's first "Grand Slam."

The pro "Grand Slam" — Masters, U.S. and British Opens and PGA — has been another of Nicklaus' dreams. But Trevino beat him in last year's British Open and although he finished the year with seven victories and a record $320,000, he really wasn't satisfied.

It's ironic that the man rated most likely to thwart his bid for major title No. 14 is that same nemesis — Lee Trevino.

The "Merry Mex" doesn't like the Augusta National. He claims it requires higher drives than he learned to hit in the Texas wind. But Trevino believes anyone who can win two U.S. Opens and two British Opens the past five years as he has also can win the Masters.

Also keep an eye on Australian Bruce Crampton. Although South Africa's Gary Player (1961) is the only foreigner to win the Masters, the 37-year-old Crampton is playing the best golf of his career. He finished second to Nicklaus last year in both the Masters and the U.S. Open.

The Masters, founded in 1934 by Bobby Jones, four years after he retired from competitive golf (at the ripe old age of 28), is unique in that it is the only one of what is recognized as the top four golf tournaments in the world which returns each year to the same course.

Augusta National, an exclusive club with a membership composed mainly of the very wealthy, has acquired fame of its own. It is the course President Eisenhower visited during and after his terms in office.

The Masters also serves as a reunion site for many former golfing greats. Oldtimers delight in attending the Masters because they can turn back the clock for a few days and watch former idols like Gene Sarazen, Jimmy Demaret and Byron Nelson.

Sam Snead and Ben Hogan dominated Masters play in the early 50s, but have taken different paths in more recent years. Snead, who will be 61 years old in May, still plays as well as most touring pros less than half his age, but Hogan, also 61 in May, no longer competes because his legs have given out.

Although at 43 he is no longer the dominant figure he once was, Palmer is still the darling of Masters' galleries. Older and smaller than a decade ago, "Arnie's Army" still treads the Augusta National fairways.

But the day when Masters fans resented Nicklaus challenging Palmer's throne is past. Nicklaus is now acclaimed "King of Golf."

Dedication near — at Lake Perris

In Friday's column we discussed some of the new lakes being utilized for fish plants, so today we come to the terminal reservoir on the entire California Water plan in Southern California — Lake Perris, which will be on public view for the first time Friday, May 18. Dedication of the lake on that date will mark the completion of the state's great north-south water project, and Gov. Ronald Reagan will be there as the principal speaker.

Perris Lake at that time will have some water in it for the occasion, but it will be late fall before it is filled. When filled, Perris will have a storage capacity of 120,000 acre-feet of water (39 billion gallons), a surface area of 2,370 acres and a shoreline just short of 10 miles.

Ralph Young, who with Frank Hubbard, handles all public information for Region 5 and the Marine Resources Region, both with headquarters in Long Beach, recently made a trip to the Perris Lake site and compiled some rather valuable and interesting information for those who either fish or just camp because they love the outdoors.

We can't think of any better way to tell you about Perris Lake other than to print Ralph's analysis of it. So, the following sections are intended to tell you what to expect once Perris Lake is in operation.

FACILITIES AT LAKE PERRIS are planned for camping, picnicking, swimming, boating, fishing, riding and hiking. The lake is situated 15 miles south-east of the City of Riverside on the Romona Expressway between Perris and San Jacinto.

In early April enough water will be put into the lake so that the Department of Fish and Game can introduce adult channel catfish from the Imperial Warm-Water Hatchery and Florida largemouth bass from Upper Otay Lake in San Diego County. This initial stocking of warm-water fish is expected to provide the basis for the bass and catfish populations of the future.

Because of the lack of predators, the DFB biologists expect a 90 per cent survival of eggs from the brood stock. To give the catfish a chance to establish themselves the lake will be closed to fishing until July 1, 1974. Boating and picnicking facilities are expected to open before then, however.

The DFG also is asking the Fish and Game Commission for approval to stock some spotted bass fingerlings, which would have to be imported from Alabama.

Rainbow trout will be planted on a put-and-take basis in the fall of 1974 when the water cools. The first allotment of 100,000 catchable-size trout will be increased to a maximum of 550,000 a year.

TO ENHANCE THE FISHING at Lake Perris, the Wildlife Conservation Board, Riverside Fish and Game Commission, the DFG and the Perris Dam Constructors have cooperated in building a large artificial reef, made up of 350 giant tires weighing from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds each.

Perris Dam Constructors provided the tires and placed them in the center of the lake bed in a pyramidal pattern designed by the DFG. The Riverside County FGC advanced the money for moving the tires, and that money eventually will be replaced by the WCB.

Ken Assen, associate fisheries biologist employed by the DFG, says that fish show a positive attraction to submerged objects and that substantial populations of fish should orient themselves to the reef. Assen also noted that the reef will offer protection to small fish and give them a chance to grow to catchable size.

DONNELL

Lake Perris is not the only good news for fishermen who will be trying waters of Riverside County. Lake Skinner, a Metropolitan Water District Reservoir now being built in Riverside County, will be opened to the public in early 1975. The lake and the surrounding park will be operated by the Riverside County Parks Department on a 30-year lease from the MWD.

Skinner Lake is situated between Riverside and San Diego near the north perimeter of Rancho California. Highway 79 and Benton Road lead to the reservoir.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY HAS ANNOUNCED plans for picnicking, fishing, boating and overnight camping facilities, along with a wildlife reserve, historical and interpretive areas and a marina and coffee shop. Most facilities will be operated by concessionaires under the supervision of the county's Parks Department.

As with Perris, Castaic, Silverwood and other lakes of the California Water Plan, the water will come from the California Aqueduct that runs from north to south.

The DFG also plans to plant catfish and bass in Lake Skinner this fall, with the help of the Riverside County Parks Department. However, northern bass will be used instead of the Florida-type largemouths.

Trout planting will begin in late 1975, with the Riverside County Parks Department matching the DFG plants.

Boating in Lake Skinner will be limited to low speeds and because of brisk afternoon winds, it is expected to be a popular inland spot for sailing.

Lake Skinner is replacing Lake San Jacinto in the MWD system. San Jacinto is being phased out of the MWD system because of structural deficiencies.

That marks the end of Ralph Young's story of two lakes. I would like to suggest that you clip and save this column. You might want to attend the Perris dedication. Any angler should have his own filing system of how to get to certain lakes and parks. You won't find the smaller ones and the newer ones on any maps.

King and Court test Lakewood

Can a four-man softball team beat a nine-man team which won the Western Softball Congress last season?

It isn't likely, but "King" Eddie Feigner and his court have licked the odds before and he will attempt to do it tonight at 7 at Blair Field.

Feigner is the nation's most famous softball pitcher. He began touring in 1946 and has recorded more than 5,000 wins against 500 losses. Through it all he has continued to provide good entertainment with his trick pitches.

Ahead or behind tonight, Feigner can be counted on to pitch with both hands, from behind his back, from second base and even blindfolded.

The Jets will pitch Ed Klecker and Jim Knott. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children.

Youth football

The Long Beach Football for Youth program is looking for coaches to help teach the fundamentals of the game. Any adult male wanting to assist in the 5-team league for boys 9-13 can contact athletic director Jim Manley at 425-1159 or Jack Mather at 421-6488.

Siesta over, Chicanos state

(First of three articles)

By PATRICIA QUINN
Staff Writer

Weary of the anguish and discouragement of its youngsters and fortified by its unexpected strength in numbers, the Mexican-American population in Long Beach has determined it has special needs which the city must satisfy.

"The siesta is over," declared Raymond Rodriguez, Long Beach City College professor and one of the most active leaders of the local Chicano community.

"We are not a violent people," he said. "If anything we are too humble. We have been long suffering and therefore we have been ignored."

"Officials have tried putting a Band-Aid on the wound but it will not suffice. We will not be a party to talking the issues to death."

Mexican-Americans, strong on its emphasis of family, says the city must stop "pushing" its youngsters out of school at junior and senior high level, too discouraged with the thought of trying to make it in the Anglo world.

They want no more.

Instead they say the city must hire a more representative number of Spanish surname "ego models" for their children, both in public schools as teachers and counselors and in City Hall as certified employees rather than blue collar workers.

The city on the other hand counters that it is willing to hire minorities, but that it has had difficulty finding qualified personnel, especially for the higher positions.

Establishing these ego models, the Spanish community leaders contend, will enable their youngsters to relate to authority figures, particularly if the models are Chicanos from the barrios or have shared similar lifestyles, and hopefully inspire them to remain in school.

UNTIL 1970, when the last census was taken, Spanish surnamed residents, primarily those of Mexican extraction, were believed to number only about 10,000. The federal indicators however, revealed they number almost 30,000, a fact which surprised everyone, including the Chicanos. Part of this increase is due to a change in definition from the 1960 census.

The census did not specify to which nationality, whether South American, Mexican, Central American, Cuban, or Spaniard, each belonged but the combination of all the Spanish surnamed peoples and those with Spanish spoken at home makes them the largest minority in Long Beach.

This knowledge reinforced the Mexican-American people's desire for more representation, particularly in the education system since that is responsible for producing the necessary executives and leaders.

Rodriguez, raised as a farm laborer who picked beans when he wasn't in school and dropped out in junior high, knows firsthand the problems an unencouraged and uneducated Mexican-American faces: In all the years he was growing up, Rodriguez said he knew of only one Mexican-American with an advanced education. "Only one out of all these Mexicans I knew," he emphasized.

His climb would have been easier if he had had the impetus of knowing others had "made it," he said. In substitution, he found great value in knowing "my eighth grade teacher, an Anglo, thought I could do it. That was important," and in his own dogged determination.

This drive for representation is solidly based in the Mexican-American community's concept of the extended family, a feeling of carnalismo or brotherhood where each is responsible for the others. This concept not only links the people with a grapevine so thick that Rodriguez says, "what happened in Texas yesterday will be common knowledge in San Francisco today," but also spills over into that community's attitudes toward education, employment and illegal aliens.

"We are la familia," explained Rodriguez. In this culture everyone is considered family and youngsters look up to their elders as aunts and uncles. The people are more emotionally expressive and physically demonstrative.

SOME DIFFERENCES between this culture and traditional American conditioning can be subtle or slight on the surface, but far reaching in their effects. For instance, in the Mexican-American culture if a child is scolded, he is expected to cast his eyes downward, but if he does that in school, Anglo teachers usually suspect the child is recalcitrant.

Community leaders emphasize therefore, that to understand the child you must first understand his culture.

Rod Martin, executive director of East Long Beach Neighborhood Center, focal point for a large portion of Spanish surname and Chicano residents here, pointed out that the school age child soon sees that one thing happens at home and another thing happens at school.

"There is no tie-in. All the models he sees are Anglo; they even look different than he does and he has difficulty relating."

Moreover, he pointed out, the Chicanos believe strongly in the philosophy of self-determination. "They feel they should have something to say about their own lifestyle. This self-determination also figures into their desire to have a say in what their children are taught and how they are taught."

Where is this Spanish surname Community and what is its appearance?

According to the latest data, namely the 1970 census, a composite picture shows it to be young, middle wife hopes luck holds

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

Dorothy Sharman is not a superstitious person.

However, there's some superstition involved in the success of her husband's coaching since they married.

Bill Sharman, head coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, has a two-year winning streak in championship playoffs, with a third try coming up. The Lakers continue their bid for a second consecutive National Basketball Association title tonight against the Chicago Bulls in the first round of the Western Division playoffs.

The Sharmans, who met in Southern California, were married just three years ago and moved immediately to Utah, where he had accepted the head coaching job with the Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association. That year, the Stars won the ABA championship.

Last year, he took over coaching duties with the Lakers and they won the NBA championship. "That's a pretty good success record in three years," smiled Mrs. Sharman, an attractive blonde who could pass for a college cheerleader.

SHE CHATTED over coffee about her role as a coach's wife during an early morning interview in the Sharmans' Rolling Hills Estates home overlooking the golf course.

Admitting she's not a vocal fan, she said she does get excited during games but limits her cheering to clapping.

She hasn't missed a Laker home game in the Forum, but doesn't travel with the team to away games. She watches the proceedings on television, however, if the game is telecast.

Game days follow the same routine. Her husband goes to the office in the morning, watches a team workout, then comes home mid-afternoon for an early steak dinner, which she prepares, and naps. "We go to the game together, arriving about an hour ahead of time. I go to the press room to meet with other wives and have something to eat."

Her knowledge of the game is sparse and she never attended a pro basketball game until marrying her husband. "I'm learning more about the game each season. My husband doesn't talk basketball at home except in generalities."

THIS IS the second marriage for each of them. Her 13-year-old daughter, Jennifer, resides with them. He has four children by his previous marriage and two grandchildren.

During the season, which begins in September and with playoffs can extend into May, Mrs. Sharman has a lot of time on her hands. She fills it by playing tennis, dabbling at gardening or doing some sewing, "but only to supplement our wardrobes."

Her husband shares her interest in tennis and is also a golf buff. "He takes good care of himself and jogs every day. Some days I accompany him, but not often. He's very self-disciplined and has learned to meet the pressures of coaching." Sharman has been a coach for 12 years, both college and professional. Before that he played college ball at USC and pro ball for the Boston Celtics.

Prior to her recent marriage, Mrs. Sharman was an elementary school teacher for six years, having gone back to get her degree from California State University, Los Angeles. "I wanted to go to UCLA, but it was too far to commute from Covina where I lived."

HER HUSBAND has experienced one hazard in his job—loss of his voice last year from over-yelling. "Nobody ever told him this would put a strain on his voice. He's trying not to yell as much and to talk lower, but it's hard after all these years. His voice is still strained, but is getting better. He's learning to control it. It probably wouldn't have bothered him if he had chosen some other occupation."

Their family life is more relaxed during the off-season and they always try to get away right after the season ends. "Last year it was Hawaii and this year we're contemplating Mazatlan. But, first come the playoffs—that's what the season's all for."

DOROTHY SHARMAN isn't superstitious, but she's brought good luck to her husband's basketball teams since they married three years ago. During the game, her smile indicates Lakers are doing well, but she occasionally hopes for better score and yells encouragement.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Project keeps 'em in stitches

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

DR. WILSON RILES, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, figures prominently in the social news this week.

He was inadvertently even involved in a needlepoint party.

Lee Stanley planned a coffee hour, not knowing Dr. Riles was speaking to Junior League that morning, so some of her guests were marked absent and some came late after hearing the speech.

Some time ago, a group headed by Jane Began, persuaded Lee, who is quite a whiz with needlepoint, to teach some classes for her friends and share her knowledge of the art.

She not only teaches them, she creates an original design for each class of 12 gals.

Coffee hour was billed as a class reunion for the summer of '73.

The idea was for the girls to bring their finished projects and compare them. Interestingly, although the designs were identical, choice of colors and individual style, made them all seem to be different.

Among those munching strawberries in powdered sugar and other assorted delicacies were Frances Aydeotte, Barbara Eckert, Jim Bronn, Mary Jensen, Milber Segerblom and Ruthie Pearce and Shiley Still who were the latecomers from Rile's speech.

AS YOU may know from reading the news pages, Dr. Riles spoke to Junior League in the morning, Lions Club at noon and the Bar Association that same evening.

Reed and Harriet Williams and Bar Association President Ed and Marion Wilson squeezed in a cocktail party honoring him at the Williams Belmont Heights home.

Thoughtful Harriet invited him to come early for a rest and provided him with a quiet place to work on his evening speech.

She ensconced him in her son's room because it has an extra long bed to fit the 6-foot 5-inch frame of the Superintendent.

When it came time for party guests to arrive, Dr. Rile's assistant, Win Griffith, went to awaken him.

The sleeping giant was draped in a bean bag chair.

He said it was the best sleep he had had in days.

Gals assisting the hostesses included Nancy Frank, with Ron, Ruth Grisham with Jack and Pam Tuck with Ed.

Among those renewing old acquaintances were Win Griffiths, with Dr. Stephen Horn and Nini—they were together in Washington, D.C., days.

Doug and Helen Newcomb caught up on news with Josephine Burgess and Vera Johnston. They were all in the school sytem when Doug was superintendent of Long Beach schools.

Other guests included Louis and Susan Posner, Bill and Theresa Dunn, Bill and Pat Thompson, Bill and Dorothy Price, Lee and Dottie Apel, Jean Burdge, Bill and Helen Price, Beryl Brooks, Bill and Vergie Barnes, Richard and Mary Butler, Joe and Nancy Byrne, Don and Liz Wallace, Jim Gray, Odie and Lois Wright, Vern and Marian Hinz and Marvin and Veronica Tinch-er.

LAWYERS' WIVES had an extra busy week with a bus trip and a brunch—on two separate days.

They bussed to the Pasadena Showcase of Interior Design house, toured that and adjourned for lunch at El Poches.

President Joan Lucas conducted a three minute business meeting on the return trip. Certainly the first business meeting on a freeway and probably the shortest on record for a women's organization.

Next, the LW's honored new members at a brunch at the home of Eline Fudge.

In addition to the welcome, new members got a thorough briefing of what the membership is all about from such old hands as Flo Brooks, Grace Carroll, Jerry Phelan, Norma Wisot, Dottie Murray and Barbara Gebb.

New members are Becky Gigliotti, Lena Salcido, Sandy Babic, Joan Jorgensen, Linda Bennett, Nancy Stenger, Jayne Lane, Hazel Francis, Ann Caf-ray, Virginia Wilky and Ingrid Herz-stein.

Andersons to Hawaii

A ceremony Saturday afternoon at Lakewood First Presbyterian Church united in marriage Gwynne Allyn Jenkins and Jeffrey Paul Anderson.

Mrs. Marc Sutherland was matron of honor for the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Oscar Jenkins of Long Beach. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lewis Anderson, also of Long Beach, asked Jerald David Anderson to be best man.

The newlyweds were graduated from Millikan High School and Long Beach City College, where the bride affiliated with Car Amies sorority. She also was graduated from USC where she was a Panhellenic delegate and affiliated with Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. Her husband is an alumnus of USC where he served on the Educational Placement Board.

Honeymooning in San Francisco are newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Dean Grigsby (Deborah Rene Meester) after a wedding Saturday evening at College Park Church of God.

Mrs. Pat Penny was matron of honor for the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Meester of Long Beach. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grigsby, also of Long Beach, asked Gary Cox to be best man.

The new Mrs. Grigsby was graduated from Millikan High School. Her husband, an alumnus of Dominguez High, attends Long Beach City College.

They will live in Long Beach.

Holguin-Whalen

Pius X High School graduates Marsha Renee Whalen and Ruben Reyes Holguin were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at St. Pancratius Catholic Church.

Janet Elaine Whalen was maid of honor for her sister. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel F. Whalen of Lakewood. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Holguin of South Gate, asked his brother, Jose Reyes Holguin, to be best man.

The bride was graduated from Long Beach City College and attended Long Beach State University. Her husband served two years with the Marines.

They will live in Long Beach after a honeymoon trip to Santa Barbara and Solvang.

Murray-Tucker

Honeymooning in Hawaii are newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Michael John Murray after a wedding Saturday noon at St. Barbara's Catholic Church.

The bride, the former Mary Margaret Tucker, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Tucker of Long Beach. She asked Debi Shuts to be maid of honor. Jerome Patrick Tucker was best man for the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Murray of Long Beach.

The new Mrs. Murray attended St. Anthony and Polytechnic High Schools. Her husband is an alumnus of Jordan High.

Couples to live in East

MRS. LOUIS V. KIRCHHOFF

Kirchhoff-McClelland

A first home in New Haven, Conn., awaits newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vaughn Kirchhoff (Karen Elizabeth McClelland) after a wedding Saturday afternoon at Los Altos United Methodist Church.

Martha McClelland was maid of honor for her sister. They are the daughters of Dr. and Mrs. James N. McClelland of Long Beach. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirchhoff of Mount Prospect, Ill., asked the bride's brother, Douglas J. McClelland, to be best man.

The new Mrs. Kirchhoff is an alumna of Palos Verdes High School and UC Berkeley. Her husband earned his B.A. degree at Harvard University and his B.S. at UC San Diego. He is doing graduate work at the UCLA School of Public Health and will enter the Yale School of Medicine in the fall.

They are honeymooning in San Diego.

Applegate-Evashwick

A first home in Boston, Mass., awaits newly wed Dr. and Mrs. William Brown Applegate (Connie Joann Evashwick) after a wedding Saturday afternoon at Belmont Heights Methodist Church.

Linda Evashwick was maid of honor for her sister, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Evashwick of Long Beach. Henry Applegate of Bardonia, Ky., was his son's best man. The bridegroom is also the son of the late Mrs. Applegate.

The new Mrs. Applegate was graduated from Wilson High School and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa while at Stanford University, where she earned her bachelor's and master's degrees. She received her Master of Science degree at Harvard, where she is completing her Doctorate of Science.

Her husband received his B.A. and M.D. degrees from the University of Louisville, Ky. He earned his master's degree in public health at Harvard and will continue training in internal medicine.

income, large families, highly mobile and comprising seven per cent of the city's overall population. Although there are no real barrios in Long Beach, the highest concentration of Spanish surname residents is in the West side, which Richard Outwater, Urban Studies director at Long Beach State University, attributes as a probable carryover from the heavy 60 per cent Spanish population in the Harbor area. But even in its highest concentration here, Outwater pointed out, it never reaches more than 20 per cent in any census tract. This is in sharp contrast to the black population which is concentrated 50 to 90 per cent in certain tracts.

A strong grouping can also be found in the Eastside, in fact, according to census tract information breakdown, a ten block area between Seventh Street and Anaheim and Alamitos and Cherry streets shows the highest density at 1,156 Spanish surnamed of 7,455 residents there.

The city's central area, well-known for its high proportion of retirement age residents, also shows an overall density of 10 to 15 per cent Spanish surname population.

These three areas have a combined Spanish herit-age population, according to the census tract break-down, of about 8,200 people. The remaining 20,000 Spanish language or surname residents are spread at about five per cent levels throughout the rest of the city.

Spanish surname population figures for other surrounding cities are: Hawaiian Gardens, 2,815 or 31.9 per cent; Bellflower, 4,803 or 9.3 per cent; Artesia, 4,181 or 28.3 per cent, and Stanton, 2,928 or 16.3 per cent. Statistics are not available for San Pedro and Wilmington communities of Los Angeles City.

THE CENSUS ALSO pictures the community with a median age of 24 years, family size of about four persons (one more than the city's average family membership), with about 86 per cent of these families headed by a man, and 68 per cent of those over 5-years-old moved between 1965 and 1970. This movement was primarily into the city from the West and South. Another 11 per cent had been living abroad in 1965.

According to various Mexican-American spokesmen, the city's Eastside is experiencing an increase in Spanish surname residents which some attribute to the growing popularity of the East Long Beach Neighborhood center, which Chicano artists have decorated and dubbed el Centro de la Raza. Outwater however, surmises that this increase may be due to the simple fact that there is no more room left in the Westside and central areas which have heavy concentrations of blacks and older folks.

The center, funded by the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunity and the city, offers services, such as emergency food, clothing, and furniture, help in finding housing or legal aid and so forth, which are used primarily by Anglos, according to Martin, and special programs which are aimed primarily at Mexican-Americans or Chicanos.

The programs include the Chicano Pride School, summer day camps, and English as a second language classes.

The center, with much of its personnel closely associated with MECHA, a forceful Chicano student organization at LBSU, also has often been outspoken in its pressures for Mexican-American rights.

"We are viewed as radicals," said Martin. "We have dared to go directly to the City Council and the school board."

"We are trying to sensitize the city to the dreams and hopes of the Spanish community," Martin advised. "The city's awareness level has not been high. It has been increasing but will have to come more quickly."

MARTIN, AN ANGLO who has headed the center almost since its beginning in 1969, pointed out that Mexican-Americans are willing to sit down with city officials around the conference table to discuss the issues. There are no riots or confrontations similar to the 1971 incident at St. Luke's over Head Start funding, in the office.

"But no one should be lulled asleep by that. Unless there is a rapid increase in awareness of these people's needs, it will only invite violence," the director warned.

Martin explained that Chicano or Mexican-American students are not the typical middle-class person who finishes high school and proceeds immediately to college. Instead many are older students who worked for some time before entering the university or who, as Rodriguez did, went into military service then worked their way through on the GI Bill.

Therefore, said Martin, they cannot be written off as the stereotyped campus militants.

Dr. Jerry Weaver, an LBSU political associate professor, pointed out that although many members of the Mexican heritage and Spanish speaking community make strong distinctions as to whether they are "Mexicans," "Americans," or "Chicanos," some issues such as education, cut across these differences and are accepted unanimously by all the members.

And within the last year, with the formation of the Unity Council, many Mexican-American organizations with support, the leaders say, from other Latin groups which they hope will join, have started to take steps in aiding their people. These steps, according to Rodriguez, so far have been on an individual "talking to whom we know" basis.

One of the few direct incidents, highly supported by the Unity Council Rodriguez said, took place last month when Chicano students from Poly High School presented demands to the school board. Resolution of this issue is hinged on a report in the near future by the Poly Interracial Committee.

Some leaders, such as Frank Sandoval, Chicano Studies associate professor at LBSU, provide an additional slant to the Mexican-American picture. Sandoval believes "the true treasure is right there in our own community."

Instead of going to government officials whom, he said, "tried to sell us a pot of gold saying that would solve our problems," the Mexican-American community should establish Chicano to Chicano relations, in all its economic, political, and spiritual implications.

"That's the type of community organization approach we have to utilize," Sandoval said. "I think we are saying 'we know that pot of gold is out there and we know the process of getting it, but we have found something better.'"

"We've found that as we were getting closer and closer to that pot, we were getting farther from the real community."

Sandoval and other spokesmen contend that city officials, whether consciously or not, have taken advantage of the various minorities' struggle over the limited amount of funds in order to keep the pressure off themselves.

"We should break away from these political games and have as an alternative our own organizations. We should have Chicanos at the administrative level but with reinforcement and support by a one to one community organization. This could be in little things like taking our older people to the hospital."

"We should have our own legislators, who are aware of the spirit of our community which is our giving of ourselves, and who represent what the community wants."

Sandoval pointed out that Chicanos have progressed politically from a state of being addressed by candidates for votes, to a position now where Chicano organizations are being asked to support candidates espousing special benefits for Mexican-Americans.

"Maybe the next step will be political parties saying 'okay, we support your candidate.'"

Sandoval is one of 13 people, including two Anglos, working on a master's degree in administration through a special extension program from Pepperdine University.

The special weekend program was inspired by several leaders in the local Mexican-American community, especially Armando Vasquez, the young head of the Escuela, a special preschool in the Eastside.

Vasquez, who is also enrolled in the 15-session course, asserted, "it will be hard for city officials to say there are no qualified Chicanos for public administration positions."

The Chicano community hopes to have another group of Chicanos ready to take the course next year. A master's degree in education for the future," Vasquez said.

Vasquez, also president of the Neighborhood Center's board of directors, said that plans also are being laid for an undergraduate extension program from Pepperdine on urban planning and development.

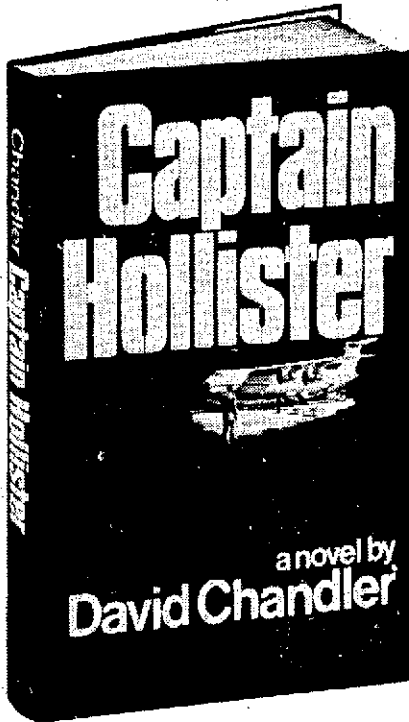

"It's hard to say what should have been done for the Chicanos," the young leader declared. "We can only say this is what needs to be done now."

AT WIT'S END

Reader socks it to her

By ERMA BOMBECK
I haven't said anything lately about my washer that eats socks.

To tell you the truth, I've been afraid to. After my last column on it, several things transpired. First, a half-crazed woman in Minneapolis sent me 36 single socks left in her washer in the hopes of finding a match in my washer.

Then, an inventor from Cleveland sent me little chains to bind two socks together while being laundered. The chains disappeared after the first rinse.

And I was approached by the national Health organization to pose with my head caught in a washer lid as their poster child.

I FIGURED if I didn't shut up about it, they'd take away my article scissors and the strings in my tennis shoes. This is not to say I don't think about it a lot (as I go through the house humming and strewing rose petals over the living room). I think about it every time my husband has to wear a cast on one foot because he has no sock to match the one he is wearing. I think about it when I put six all black socks in the washer and still end up with one black sock. I think about it when my kids leave the house every morning looking like they are going to a freshman initiation.

Last week, I looked at my washer and said, "Why are you doing this to me?" when my husband came in.

"Who are you talking to?"

"No one," I said quickly.

"You aren't hearing those little sock voices from the washer again saying, 'Help me!' are you?"

I SHOOK my head. As he started to leave, my eye caught something hanging out from under his coat. It looked like the mate to his new gray socks.

"Where did you get this?" I demanded.

"Darned if I know," he said, "I felt something in my underwear the other day, checked it and it was a tennis sock from the boys. Must be static electricity. The girls in the office picked a knee sock and a footie off my sweater yesterday."

I looked him in the eyes. He had the same look in his face that Charles Boyer had when he was driving Ingrid Bergman crazy in "Gaslight."

"Why?" I asked hysterically, "Why would you let me believe that my socks have been going to that big utility room in the sky? Why would you let me paint ankles on the kids when you're running around with their socks in your underwear? Why. . . oh good grief!"

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"This isn't your new gray sock. I've never seen it before."

"Want to check in with Indianapolis?" he asked hesitantly.

Color is key to good decorating

Ceilings, too often the forgotten backgrounds, can be interesting — zipped up with wallpaper, paint, draped fabric, even floor coverings or by playing up such architectural features as beams, skylights, peaks, or slopes.

Do you have anything planned for the month of April?

Why not set aside some time and take a good look at your home?

Is it really decorated the way you want? Are the colors pleasant and coordinated? Does it have the flair and verve you've always wanted in your home?

More than likely your answers will be "no" to most of these questions... and right now would be a good time to start doing something about it. The drab winter months are behind us (we hope), yet it isn't quite vacation time yet. So April, which just happens to be National Home Decorating Month, is a good time to get started.

Whether married or single, your home can be a primary means of self expression — especially with color. So don't be afraid of it.

Remember when most homes had dull, off-white walls, neutral carpeting (usually gray or beige), white ceilings? If you chose a red chair in those days it was an adventure. The smallest touch of bright color seemed out of place.

But today — in the surging seventies — color in every shade and hue is available for use in every room of the house.

INTERIOR DESIGNER Elroy Edson has compiled ten tips for choosing colors for the home that might be worth noting:

1. Analyze the colors that please you and the colors that displease you. Note them on a steno pad or legal notebook, whatever will supply a convenient reference source when you go to shop.

2. Gather every color you can find, from all available sources: fabric swatches, paint charts, magazine pages, etc.

3. Write down exactly what is to be done in the room. Do you have the entire room to coordinate, or are you merely looking for a new wall color, a new rug, upholstery fabric or drapery? Decide what you already have that you already like and snip swatches (from the underside of the favorite chair, from the hem of the drapery) and attach them to your color notebook.

4. Get a color wheel from your local paint dealer and go through it starting with yellows, then greens, blues, purples, reds, oranges, blacks and whites. Make two columns titled "color" and "value."

"You might be surprised," Edson said, "to discover that you hate pea green but love olive green; hate baby blue, but love navy blue; hate pink, but love red."

5. Narrow the likes down to the values, thinking in terms of colors you could live with on a large scale.

6. Remember that dark colors tend to reduce the visual size of a room (dark at the end of a long narrow room will make it look square; dark on a high ceiling will lower it.) Light colors tend to make a room look larger (light walls widen a room; light on a ceiling will heighten it.)

7. Remember that you can go the one-color route of monochrome, selecting several values from the same color family to create a memorable color scheme.

8. You can mix patterns, prints and colors, harmonizing them to suit the main color. For instance, if you choose an olive green as the dominant, or major room color, consider all other accent colors in relationship to it. They could be crimson and citron, gold and burnt orange, even white and metallic. But — they must relate.

9. Don't be swayed by a sale. You may be enticed into buying a chair simply because it is available, only to discover that it doesn't go with your other furnishings.

10. Decide on ALL room colors, from floor to ceiling, from wall to window, before making any purchase. In this way you won't be stuck at the last minute when you discover there isn't a carpet to be found that will tie in with the red sofa and purple chairs.

Just trust your color instincts. If you have a favorite, indulge it. If you dislike a color admit it. You are the best authority on color in your home.

Black-and-white used with a color — such as yellow — is a striking color scheme. Here yellow is used throughout the room in accent flowers, pillows and ashtrays. Furniture includes paired black scoop chairs, white lighting and black-and-white embroidered Airpelle sofa. Narrow room is widened with white carpeting.

Decorating guide is offered free

Recognizing the woman's need for self expression through interior decor, the National Decorating Products Association is making available during April — National Home Decorating Month — a free 32-page, full-color booklet that's full of ideas ranging from the big splash of supergraphics to the small, delicate decor that can be accomplished with nothing more than a stencil and a paint brush.

The free booklet, compiled in cooperation with House & Garden magazine, is available in Long Beach at Billings Paint Store, 3235 E. 2nd St., and Broadway National Paint Co., 4250 Atlantic. Or you may order by mail from the National Decorating Products Association, 9334 Dielman Industrial Drive, St. Louis, Mo. 63132.

Designed specifically to aid the woman in seeking out and employing ideas that have relevance to her home and lifestyle, the booklet shows ways to create impressive decorating effects at a surprisingly low cost and with a minimum of effort.

Don't forget the outside of your home too — flowering potted plants can hang on outside walls, a lovely Spanish idea translatable to any American house that faces the sunlight.

If you love to coddle, smell, cut, fix, send, or simply bask in a roomful of flowers...

CHEF OF THE WEEK

A recipe you can bank on

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Before we start this dissertation, we assure you his recipe is not meant for the pup, Reggie. However, we'll admit the rapport between Reggie and today's Chef of the Week is something!

Richard N. McCook demonstrates this same friendly rapport in his business as vice president and manager of Bank of California, National Association.

Born in Long Beach, he's the first of the McCooks who didn't hail from Iowa. He's also the third generation, including an uncle, who became bankers, and the second generation of McCooks who "cook."

As for the bank business, great-grandpa, grandpa, dad and uncle organized their first bank in 1948. Then known as First National Bank of Long Beach, it merged with Bank of California in 1955.

Richard attended Polytechnic High School, graduated from Stanford University's School of Humanities (economics), and the Pacific Coast School of Banking at the University of Washington, Seattle.

His first banking experience was in San Francisco where he remained for two years. Then he tried his hand at industry . . . the American Smelting & Refining Co., both in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

He joined the family business in 1958, doing a little bit of everything. He had become vice president in 1965 at the time of the merger. After a hitch in Los Angeles, he returned to Long Beach in March, 1972, and was appointed to his present position.

CLUBS WHICH CLAIM him as a member are Rotary, International City and Virginia Country Club.

A director of Downtown Long Beach Associates, McCook is on the board of the Boys Club of Long Beach, the executive board of the Long Beach Area Boy Scouts and is chairman of its Explorer Program.

As to the Chamber of Commerce, he "chairs" its executive development committee public affairs task force.

While still in the Bay area, he met Marilyn, who became his bride. They have a son, Tom, a junior at Wilson High School, and daughter, Sara, 18, a freshman at University of California at Davis.

McCook is a handyman of sorts, plays golf and enjoys sports of most types.

"He's mighty handy around the kitchen, too," says Marilyn. "And he eats almost everything — calling a halt only on eggplant and asparagus."

RICHARD N. MCCOOK

We couldn't really say that a certain food fashion runs in the McCook family, either. Dad, Fonda, chose "Oven Chicken" as his recipe when he became Chef of the Week; uncle, Nelson Jr., whipped up a "Cheese Soup" while today's Chef upholds the popular hamburger — the charcoal broiled variety.

CHARCOAL BROILED HAMBURGERS

- 2 pounds ground meat
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 3 tablespoons cooking oil
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 cup catsup
- 1/4 teaspoon curry powder (optional)

Mix meat with salt, pepper, cooking oil, Worcestershire sauce, catsup and curry. Allow 3 or 4 patties per pound of meat mixture. Pat out meat 1/2-inch thick, and 5 or 6-inches in diameter. These patties may be made ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator.

Use a plate to press meat into patties between sheets of waxed paper. Pile charcoal and ignite; allow fire to burn down slightly, usually 15 or 20 minutes. The fire will still be very hot. Add 2 or 3 large hickory chips. Place patties on grill 3 to 6 inches above fire; cook 5 minutes. Turn patties and cook 3 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 hamburgers.

Haircutting is in. Infra Ray cutting is in. Blow waving is in. Finger Blow Waving is in.

What does all this mean? Is it just a gimmick for the same old thing? No, not necessarily — but it could be. Confused? I thought so.

Basically, what it all amounts to is getting the right stylist in the right salon to give you the right haircut and guide you on blowing your hair and letting it dry naturally or whatever works best for your particular style.

Our stylists are constantly learning new techniques in the art of haircutting to keep you looking fashionable.

Hey, Mom, you're worth a fortune

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The housewife who cares for the children, scrubs floors and cooks dinner could be earning as much as $8,000 a year if society found her work worth paying for.

A research team at Cornell University has computed the number of hours a family spends working in the home and its dollar value, according to what it would cost to hire someone else for the same services.

Prof. Kathryn E. Walker and William E. Gauger of the New York State College of Human Ecology found that with two young children, a wife spends eight hours a day on housework which is worth about $122 for a seven-day week. A woman with four young children spends nine hours in the home worth $135 weekly.

"The dollar value we put on the work is low, but it's a darn sight higher than most people think it is," says Walker. "The woman is making a significant and very valuable contribution to the family."

WALKER AND Gauger studied 1,400 families several years ago in upper New York State, taking into account the number of children in the family, the age of the youngest child and the employment status of the wife. On the average, women employed outside the home used only two hours less time per day on housework than the women who stayed home all day.

The various household tasks in the study included shopping, cooking, cleaning up, laundry work and care of the children.

The team included the work contributions of other members of the family in their study. To no one's surprise, they found that it is the woman, even if employed in an office, who carries the heaviest work load in the home.

"IN NO TYPE of family did the average time contributed by the husband, teen-ager or younger child go over three hours a day," said the report. "And in no instance did the wife's average drop below four hours a day."

"Societal roles are still pretty much fixed," said Gauger. "Even though there are many more women working outside the home, household work is still labeled woman's work" and so they end up with a disproportionate share of the cooking and cleaning."

Walker and Gauger say the dollar value of housework could be used as an important factor in courtroom decisions regarding

Artists' English is limited but his paints are eloquent

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

It was sometime during President Lyndon Baines Johnson's administration—Harry Quinn doesn't remember exactly when—that S. Wee Hack came to the B and Q Art Gallery of Long Beach, 3920 E. Fourth St.

Quinn, his wife Josephine, son John and daughter Rosemary, and six employees operate the art gallery and custom framing shop. That day, as usual, the store was busy but Quinn took time to talk with Hack. As much as he could, that is. For Hack, a man of about 60, had come not long before from Korea to Los Angeles. Because his English was negligible, he brought with him two Japanese friends to interpret and some 20 of his paintings. His subjects were varied—landscapes, still lifes, portraits. One painting, Quinn thought, had special merit. It was a portrait of President Johnson, painted, no doubt, from a photograph.

The artist was selling his pictures so that he could move to Washington, D.C. He visited Quinn several times and Quinn bought 10 of his paintings. The gallery owner hasn't seen the artist since.

IT WAS a while before Quinn had time to frame the pictures, which are signed S. Wee. "We've framed at least a million pictures in the 28 years we've been in business," said Quinn. "Some nights I dream of pictures. But it wasn't always like this. We first opened at 3712 E. Broadway and sometimes, for three or four days at a time, even the postman didn't come by."

Word of the little shop spread and eventually the gallery grew to occupy the two adjoining stores as well as the original space. Then the business moved to its present location.

Recently, Quinn opened a second gallery at 10900 Los Alamitos Blvd., Los Alamitos, where business also flourishes.

ONCE FRAMED and displayed, most of Wee's paintings sold readily. Quinn exhibited President Johnson's portrait in his gallery and over the years has loaned it several times to the Democratic Party during campaigns. After the president's death, Quinn decided to offer the painting to Mrs. Johnson.

He received a prompt reply: "Mrs. Johnson asked me to thank you for your thoughtful letter and the snapshot of the portrait you have of President Johnson. You are more than kind to offer to send it to her as a gift and, of course, if you are willing to part with it, she would be happy to have it and to later make it a part of the permanent collection of the LBJ Library. We appreciate very much your generosity and good will." It was signed by Mrs. Johnson's secretary, Carole Bryant.

Quinn will have the portrait on display at his Long Beach Gallery for a week before he sends it to the LBJ Ranch at Stonewall, Tex. And the little known—in America—artist S. Wee Hack may never learn that his portrait of the president is destined for the LBJ Library.

Textiles weave art forms

The fascinating variety of "Textiles of Latin America" may be seen through April in Long Beach City College Art Gallery, Faculty Avenue and Harvey Way. The public is invited to an opening reception today from 3 to 5 p.m.

Fabrics and ethnic costumes from Mexico, Guatemala, Panama, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, most of them made from hand-woven cotton or wool, show many weaving techniques. The most dazzling, in color and embellishment, are from Guatemala.

Indians of Oaxaca, Mexico, and of Guatemala use a back-strap loom to weave narrow sections which are bound together to make garments. Also on exhibit are examples of the double weave used by the Huichol Indians of Mexico and the gauze weave used by Indians in the hot coastal regions to make sheer garments.

The pieces on display have been loaned by UCLA's Museum of Cultural History and collectors Caroline West, Fred and Barbara Meiers, Mary Jane Leeland, and Roy and Helen Wildman. Hours are Mondays through Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

THIS IS an eventful month for Betty Anne Stewart Kirkpatrick. She has just received word that one of her watercolor paintings has been accepted for the American Watercolor Society Show which will have its 106th annual opening Thursday at the National Academy Galleries, New York. She also has a painting in the current Watercolor West Show at Riverside.

Through April, her acrylics, oils and watercolors will hang at Dana Branch Library, 3680 Atlantic Ave.

NEXT SUNDAY, 25 artists will offer art from "prints to plants" at an Art Walk which the Sharon Group of Long Beach Chapter of Hadassah will sponsor at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Mizzenberg, 3003 Marna Ave. There is a $1 admission charge for the 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. event. Objects for sale will range from $1 to $500. Proceeds will go to Israel for hospitals, medical facilities and youth training programs.

ARTIST of the month at Studio Trois, 3069 Long Beach Blvd., is Darlene Fairfield who specializes in florals in oil. She will be honored at a reception in the gallery today from 2 to 4 p.m.

MORE THAN 100 junior and senior high school students competed in the Norman Gottlieb Youth Art Show, sponsored annually by the Long Beach Jewish Community Center art committee. The many-media show will continue through Tuesday at the Center Gallery, 2991 Grand Ave. Judges Mary Andrus and Evelyn Delight Carpenter awarded first place to Lisa Wilhelm in the senior high division and to Winona Christianson in the junior high section. Second and third places for seniors went to David Nesthus and Lisa Jensvold; for juniors to Charles Holtman and Laurie Brynes.

WORK BY three artists selected by a review board from many applicants will be exhibited from Wednesday through May 6 at San Pedro Municipal Art Gallery, Seventh and Beacon Streets. The artists will be feted at a public reception Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Tom Williams of Los Angeles, Donal Lambert of Simi Valley and Carl Knitig of Arcadia create in differing styles. Williams will show object sculptures of foam rubber, roofing materials, chicken wire and feathers. Lambert's pieces are wall hung and incorporate hinged wooden slats in bold and colorful constructions. Knitig offers surreal pictorial elements which reflect personal imagery with mystical, romantic overtones.

Long Beach is tuned for its 'Symphony Week'

Long Beach Symphony Week begins today with the annual symphony brunch and will end next Sunday with a concert at Wilson High School Auditorium.

The brunch, sponsored by the Men's Committee, will be served from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Belmont Plaza Recreation Center, Ocean Boulevard and Ximeno Avenue. Donation is $3.

Soloist for the 7:30 p.m. concert next Sunday will be Jorge Bolet, pianist and brother of the symphony conductor, Alberto Bolet. The two have performed together with most of the major orchestras in Europe, the United States and Latin America. This will be the pianist's third appearance with the Long Beach Symphony. He previously was soloist in 1970 and 1971. This season marks his 35th year on the concert stage.

The program next Sunday will consist of Brahms' "Symphony No. 2" and Prokofiev's "Piano Concerto No. 2." It was this concerto which the composer performed with the Boston Symphony in 1924.

ALBERTO BOLET

After Prokofiev returned to his native Russia, the concerto was not performed again for 25 years. Then Jorge Bolet played it with the Cincinnati Symphony and recorded the work. It instantly became famous.

Next Sunday also will be the symphony's annual "Pick a Posy" night when persons renewing their season subscriptions will receive a flower.

Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sussman, 1451 El Mirador, Alberto Bolet will preview the Sunday concert. The Symphony Guild, preview sponsor, invites the public to attend. Reservations, at $2 each, may be made by calling Mrs. Harry Lowther, 166 Granada Ave., or the Symphony Association office, 121 Linden Ave.

Another event of Symphony Week will be the orchestra's performance at the annual Chamber of Commerce installation aboard the Queen Mary Friday night.

Retreat theme: 'State of Arts'

To acquaint its member organizations with recent developments in the arts, Long Beach Regional Arts Council will stage Retreat — '73 Friday at Web Center, 835 Locust Ave.

Theme of this third annual session will be "The State of the Arts." After 8:30 a.m. registration and a coffee period, representatives will assemble in the Embassy Room to hear the keynote address by Mrs. Howard Ahmanson and a panel presentation. Panelists will be Mrs. Irwin Newberg, vice president of the Alliance of California Arts Councils; Mrs. June Taylor of Grantsmanship; and Dr. Herbert Zipper, special projects director for the school of performing arts at USC.

Following a coffee break, the group will divide into sections for discussion on "Funding," moderated by Jay Left, "Audience Development," moderated by Leo Greene, and "How to Stage," moderated by Chuck Davis.

Luncheon speaker Ernest Mayer, Planning Director for the City of Long Beach, will use slides to augment his talk on "Community Resources." The program will conclude with reports by the buzz session moderators and a brief congress meeting. Adjournment is scheduled for 3 p.m.

MRS. AHMANSON is widow of financier and philanthropist Howard Ahmanson whose name is linked with Los Angeles

MRS. H. AHMANSON

County Museum of Art and the Los Angeles Music Center. She is deeply involved in cultural activities on local, state, national and international levels. The only woman trustee of the advisory committee of the American Association of Museums, she is in demand across the country as a speaker on "Communications Between Trustees and the Professional Staff of Museums" and "Museum Support."

Mrs. Ahmanson traveled with the American Women for International Understanding to Israel, Egypt and the U.S.S.R. As a result of a discussion with Mme. Yekaterina Furtseva on cultural exchanges with the United States, the recent Soviet Union Arts Exhibit was shown in Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery in Barnsdall Park. She is president of her own company, Caroline Leonetti, Ltd., a women's center for self-improvement, and writes a newspaper column as a fashion, beauty and charm consultant.

MRS. ROBERT C. BENSON is chairman of the Retreat — '73 program. Mrs. Mark Day Miner is council president. The event is open to the public. Registration fee is $6 for the program and luncheon or $4 for either. Reservations may be made through Monday at the Long Beach Regional Arts Council office, 130 Pine Ave., Suite 208.

'Black America' music Saturday

Multi-talented Margaret Harris will be soloist for her own "Piano Concerto" when she appears with Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion.

Conductor, composer and pianist, Miss Harris's music field includes rock, jazz and classics. She has served as music director of the New York productions of "Hair" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona," conducted for ballet companies, written television scores and performed as soloist with major orchestras.

The program, titled "More Music of Black America," will open with the first performance of Edgar Redmond's "Transition in Black." The work was written in 1961 for traditional symphony orchestra to which congas are added.

A jazz set by the Julian "Cannonball" Adderley Quintet will be played by Adderley on alto saxophone, Nat Adderley on cornet, Walter Booker on bass, Joe Zawinul on piano and Roy McCurdy on drums.

Final section of the bill will be gospel and work songs by the Operation Breadbasket Choir, co-directed by Joe Westmorland and Joe Peay.

Tickets are available at the box office, Wallicks, Liberty and Mutual agencies. Student tickets, at $2, go on sale two hours before each Philharmonic concert.

'Mikado' to open at Studio

The Studio Theater of Long Beach Community Players, 5021 E. Anaheim St., will open its production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" Monday at 8 p.m. Performances will be given in the upstairs theater Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays through April 18. There will be a matinee next Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Directed by Henri Scanlon, the production stars Arthur Carah in the role of Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner. Carah has long been a favorite with Long Beach Civic Light Opera audiences. Charles Ion is Nanki-Poo, Jacqueline Volkland plays Yum-Yum and Richard Blake has the role of the Mikado. Others in the cast are Gene Noble, James L'Angelle, Mary Keating, Julie Joy and Madeleine Coffaro.

Oratorio premiere scheduled

A work commissioned by the choir of California Heights United Methodist Church will have its premiere performance next Sunday at 8 p.m. in the church sanctuary, 3759 Orange Ave. The choir, orchestra and soloists will present Edmund Najera's oratorio, "Via Dolorosa," musical meditations based on stations of the cross. Featured performers will be Patricia Hugen, soprano; Nitza Neiman, mezzo; Douglas Artunio, tenor; Philip Haynes, baritone; and James Haberkorn, organist.

Gabriel Faure's "Requiem" will complete the program.

Cozumel a skin diver's paradise

Cozumel, a Caribbean island located 12 miles off the Yucatan coast of Mexico, is considered one of the top five skin diving spots in the world and number one in the western hemisphere.

The azure and emerald-tinted water is crystal clear down to depths of 200 feet with six-mile long Palancar Reef offering an underwater explosion of colors.

White-hulled sloops and schooners ferry divers to areas where they can discover iridescent yellow sponges and red and orange coral formations plus the rare black coral. Yellow and black striped tiger fish and angel, parrot and squirrel fish can be found in underwater caves near Chancanab Lagoon off the southwestern coast of the island.

Scuba gear and instruction are readily available at hotels or on the piers with snorkeling and scuba equipment renting for $6 a day with tanks $4 additional.

All along the coast can be found sunken skeletons of ancient ships, some once hunted down by pirates like Henry Morgan and Jean Lafitte. After completing their Caribbean cruises these predators of the sea returned to the tranquil lagoons of Cozumel.

Today you don't have to be a swimmer or buccaneer to sample the soul of this refreshing island. Glass-bottom boats leave hourly for the reef and at 9 a.m. every morning there is the not to be missed "Robinson Crusoe" Cruise.

VISITORS BOARD the motor launches headed for a day of snorkeling, scuba diving and fishing or just lazing in the sun watching the crew catch lobster, grouper, snapper and conch.

Then it's off to a deserted beach where the captain prepares a delicious seafood barbecue of the day's catch plus cheese, deviled eggs, tomatoes, local fruit and appropriate beverages. The trip costs about $10 a person.

Exploring the countryside can be done on foot, via bicycle ($1.20 a day) or renting a Honda ($10 a day). Jeep trips to the nearby Mayan ruins are available but a half day tour is just enough to prevent too many bottoms up.

For centuries the island was a Mayan holy place ruled over by the patron deity Xchel, the goddess of fertility. When the Spanish conqueror, Cortes, arrived in 1519, there were 40,000 inhabitants. Today there are 7,500 and the goddess has slipped away.

However the Mayan descendants are rather unique. Fodor's Mexico 1973 guide states, "Among the first thing one notices, for example, is the genuine friendliness of the people, eye-opening even by peninsula (Yucatan) standards and a refreshing change from what many have learned to expect elsewhere in the Caribbean."

There are six first class hotels on the island with the 110-room El Presidente the largest, followed by the Cozumel Caribe, Cantarell, Playa Azul, Cabanas del Caribe and the Mara. Prices, including two meals a day, average $18-25 per person, double occupancy. The big six all have compulsory meal plans and rates do not vary with the season.

CHERRY BLOSSOMS ALONG THE POTOMAC

Maps, costs in Getaway Guides

The 1973-74 editions of the most popular travel books in history — Trans World Airlines' Getaway Guides — are now on sale, the airline announced today.

The series became the industry's runaway favorite during the last two years when more than two million copies were sold or distributed.

The 16 guides cover 19 major domestic and international vacation cities and surrounding areas. Subjects include: history and geography, weather, local transportation systems and cost, local tipping procedures, a list of hotels, restaurants and shops and their price ranges, touristic highlights, maps and a list of local shopping bargains.

Each guide contains up to 48 coupons, which entitle the traveler to discounts at hotels, motels, restaurants, city tours and shops.

Getaway Guides for international cities also offer tips on customs and passport regulations, helpful phrases in the native language, recommendations on local wines and a list of U.S. duties for foreign purchases.

The series was edited for TWA by Arthur Frommer, author of the famous "Europe on $5 A Day."

Blossoms in bloom

Washington's surprising cherry blossoms have blossomed and the tourist season — quite unexpectedly — is in full bloom in the Nation's Capital.

The delicate pink petals will blow from their trees prior to the start of the annual Cherry Blossom Festival April 7-14, but, yes, there will be blossoms for the festival.

The near-record-early arrival of the blossoms has confused prospective tourists but hasn't hindered festival sponsors; they have an insurance policy — namely, other late-blossoming varieties of cherry trees.

An abnormally early spring confused the matter in the Capital City. Early March temperatures hovered in the mid-70s during sunny afternoons, and by St. Patrick's Day, the first of the Yoshino and Akebono blossoms had peaked from their buds.

According to the National Park Service past performance charts, those trees usually hit full bloom in early April. Only once had they reached full color as early as March 20.

THE BLOSSOMS last a scant week, normally, depending upon wind and temperature fluctuations. By the end of the second week, they're usually on the ground around the famed Tidal Basin, making a pink carpet for tourists.

The Yoshino blossoms are white and are often called "singles," because each bud appears to put forth one set of blossoms. The small Akebono blossoms are pale pink.

But there are several other kinds of cherry trees in Washington, and it is upon these trees that festival sponsors base their prediction of a colorful festival week.

The Kwanzan tree is the predominant late-bloomer. They are a deep pink and Washingtonians usually call them "doubles" because they are much thicker than the earlier Yoshino and Akebono.

The Kwanzans usually bloom two weeks after the Yoshinos and Akebonos; hence they should hit town just about the same time as the 65 marching units in the big parade which will open the festival April 7.

"We missed it this year, as far as predicting the Yoshino blossoming date," said a spokesman for the Washington Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, one of the festival's sponsors.

"Who would have guessed spring would arrive in early March? Last year we had chilly weather well into April."

Last year's festival was held a week earlier, and the blossoms barely peaked out by closing time. The bureau moved this year's celebration a week as a result.

"But we're lucky to have the other trees. The tourist season has started early, and apparently the cherry blossom crowds will be around well into April, so really, we're lucky. More people will get to see the blossoms."

Blimey!

Now you can fly Pan Am from Los Angeles to London and back for a Minimum $325 or a Maximum $390.

Just pick a date. You can fly away on July 4, 11, 18, 25, August 1, 8, 15, 22, 31, September 7, 8, 14, 21, 22, 28, October 5, 6, or 12 at low round-trip Travel Group Charter (TGC) rates — without having to join a group.

And those aren't even our lowest TGCs. They're samples. Because we give you the widest choice of TGC flights going—27 in all. And you can go for two or three weeks.

You don't have to take a fly-by-night airline, either. You'll fly like a Pan Am Jet Economy passenger. And in addition to meals, you'll have movies, stereo, open bar, the works.

What's the catch? You have to pay in advance. 25% of the Minimum at least 90 days before departure. The other 75% at least 60 days before departure.

The Minimum fare is arrived at by dividing the low cost of chartering a Pan Am 707, including our service charge, by the number of seats (179) on the plane.

If your flight is full, you only pay the Minimum fare. If it's less than full, we divide the cost of the un-filled seats among the remaining passengers.

But under no circumstances can the fare increase more than 20% of your Minimum fare. So you never pay more than the Maximum fare listed.

The fact is, if the fare goes above the Maximum, C.A.B. rules require us to return your money and cancel the flight. (Though, naturally, we'll help find you an alternate flight, if you'd like us to.)

So, why not get all the details on all of our TGCs. All you have to do is call us at 772-0547 Or send us this coupon.

Better still, take it to your travel agent.

This summer you can fly Pan Am at low group charter rates even if you don't belong to a group.

Until recently, your chances of qualifying for low group rates weren't too good.

To get them you had to be a member, for at least six months, of an organization formed for a purpose other than travel. And you had to have at least 40 other members from that organization who wanted to go to the same place you did.

Well, that's all changed. Now there's another kind of charter. It's called the Travel Group Charter.

How is this kind of charter different from other charters?

There's one big difference. Everyone is eligible for Travel Group Charters.

You don't have to belong to a group and you don't have to know anyone else who wants to travel.

All you need is a desire to see the world.

How do I get on one?

Pan Am is offering this new idea in charters through Travel Group Organizers. These are people who contract for a number of seats or a number of planes from an airline and then sell the seats singly to people like you.

The price of these charter seats is much lower than a regular fare.

And to reserve a seat all you do is contact a Travel Group Organizer or a Travel Agent and make a 25% down payment at least 90 days before you leave.

Where can I go, when can I go and how long can I stay?

You can get Travel Group Charters to Europe, the Caribbean and the Pacific.

And you can get them starting this summer.

Lots of departures are planned and you can stay 14 or 21 days.

Who's flying the plane?

Probably the most important thing we can tell you is that you'll be flying on an airline you've heard of. Pan Am.

The Pan Am pilots who fly our regularly scheduled flights fly our charter flights. The same goes for flight crews, maintenance crews, stewards and stewesses. In fact, you even fly on the same kind of plane.

In short, on a Travel Group Charter, you get all the advantages of a budget flight with all the advantages of the world's most experienced airline.

We don't just take you and leave you.

When you arrive, you get the same kind of service you would get as a regular Pan Am passenger.

We have Pan Am offices throughout the world where you can go for help if you need it.

If you run short of cash, a Pan Am office will be glad to cash an emergency check of up to $50 for you.

They'll act as your personal post office if you want your mail sent abroad.

And in Western Europe, you can rent a car through our Pan Am's World Rent-A-Car system.

But most important of all, when you fly on a Pan Am Charter and it's time to return home, you can be sure that the plane will be waiting there to bring you back.

For more information, be sure to call your travel agent. He knows everything there is to know about Travel Group Charters and can make all the arrangements.

Canada Custom change

HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

Air Canada, a pioneer in such airline passenger conveniences as its unique "Sky Cot" overhead crib for infants and customs preclearance for travelers to the United States, is discontinuing the latter service after 21 years because of economic and competitive disadvantages.

The Canadian government-owned carrier has announced with some regret that it will stop providing facilities in Canada for U.S. Customs agents on April 29. The airline is also asking Canadian authorities to withdraw the preclearance service from U.S. and other foreign carriers using it.

The preclearance program, which began as an experiment on Jan. 14, 1952 in Toronto, allowed inspection of U.S.-bound passengers' luggage before boarding the flights, thus eliminating the usual customs hassle at the end of the journey. It has been one of the delightful surprises of Air Canada's service to Los Angeles, especially for travelers making connections at Montreal or Toronto from longer transatlantic flights.

It worked so well that the program was extended to Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver in Canada and later to Bermuda and Nassau in the Bahamas. In full swing, preclearance served about three million passengers annually, approximately one-fifth of all air travelers entering the U.S.

But in recent years the program has been in dispute in both the U.S. and Canada because of rising costs and diminished benefits. The Vancouver station was closed in July, 1971, forcing Western Airlines to establish a separate customs facility of its own at Los Angeles International Airport.

For Southland travelers, the Air Canada announcement means only 28 shopping days before the U.S. Customs inspections for flights from eastern Canada also revert to Los Angeles, which has never been noted as a speedy clearance station.

Blame changing times, the phenomenal increase in air travel and the advent of the jumbo jet. The last straw in an accumulation of disadvantages for Air Canada in the preclearance plan was a warning by U.S. Customs officials in Toronto that baggage inspection for a Boeing 747 flight would require two hours, as compared to one at most U.S. stations.

Other disadvantages cited by Claude I. Taylor, Air Canada's vice president, government and industry affairs, included increased costs of maintaining facilities for preclearance, airport congestion caused by the delay in departures, overtime charges for the U.S. customs agents and a shift in benefits of the operation from Air Canada's passengers to competing airlines.

Recent Congressional hearings on the preclearance program revealed that U.S. airlines serving Canada were benefiting from the plan by an estimated $17 million annually in operating expenses alone. Meanwhile, Air Canada was paying most of the cost of the facilities for preclearance and receiving no fringe benefits in the form of reduced costs of operating flights to the U.S.

But the demise of preclearance on Air Canada's daily flights to Los Angeles will not diminish the quality of service between the Southland, eastern Canada and Europe. A featured example is the Sky Cot, a bassinette which clamps firmly to the edge of the overhead hat rack to hold baby securely off mama's lap during long flights.

Dracula buffs ready for tour

Friday, April 13 is the date scheduled for an intrepid band of Dracula buffs to gather in New York preparatory to the 1978 inaugural departure of an 18-day "Spotlight on Dracula" tour to Romania's Transylvania region, where Count Dracula lived.

Although most people are familiar only with the fictional Dracula created by the novelist Bram Stoker, according to two Boston College professors who are authorities on Dracula and who designed the tour, there was a real Vlad Dracula.

Profs. R.T. McNally and Radu R. Florescu point out that he was a ruler who lived in 15th Century Romania, and was notorious for his cruelties. Tour members will visit Vlad Dracula's palace, his castle and his tomb (which was found empty, in 1931), as well as other Dracula landmarks. The two men who excavated the tomb will accompany tour members to the site at Snagov, near Bucharest.

The April 13 departure will be followed by several more year round departures planned for this off-heat tour, including a special Halloween departure on October 19.

Before boarding their Pan Am flight to Bucharest, tour members will meet Profs. McNally and Florescu for a "briefing session" on Dracula lore and a film documentary on Dracula. In Romania, the tour will be under the guidance of noted historians, folklore specialists and archaeologists.

The tour starts in Bucharest — founded by Vlad Dracula in 1459 — for sightseeing, shopping, dining out to the accompaniment of Romanian folk music, and the visit to Snagov. Next, Tirgoviste, to view the remains of Dracula's Palace as well as the monastery containing the tombs of his descendants. At nightfall, a dramatic Sound-and-Light Performance guarantees thrills and chills as well as historical background on Dracula's exploits. From there, the tour ventures deep into "Dracula country" to visit Bran Castle, where Dracula was a guest; Poiana Brasov, site of his most notorious massacre; Sighisoara, his birthplace; Borgo Pass, where the fictional Dracula had his castle; and the beautiful Moldavia region, where Dracula spent two years in exile.

Special events along the way include a folk dance performance on the grounds of Castle Dracula, and an evening in the Borgo Pass area, at Vatra Dornei, listening to local legends and stories about Dracula, vampires, superstitions and folk traditions.

Special dinners during the tour — which covers most meals — include one at the American Diplomatic Club in Bucharest and another at a famous medieval beer hall in Brasov, much like those which existed in Dracula's day. Topping off the trip is a festive wine-tasting party the night before departure for home.

Travel arrangements are topnotch, with round-trip jet flights via Pan Am; deluxe and first class hotels; most meals included, plus special restaurant meals and wine-tasting party; escorts; sightseeing; transfers; baggage; tips and taxes. Despite the luxury arrangements and dollar devaluation, the rate is only $935 all-inclusive.

A full-color brochure describing the tour can be obtained from travel agents or by contacting General Tours Inc., 49 New York, N.Y. 10019.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE Condominiums are on the rise

By STAN DELAPLANE

San Francisco
Biggest new thing in travel is condominium rentals: Base on ONE place at a fixed price. Rent a car and make excursions from there. Saves the headache of moving constantly through the fudge of tourists at overcrowded airports and oversold hotels.

CONDOMART in New York City has first-class condominium rentals in Europe, the Caribbean, Mexico. A kind of agent-on-top-of-another agent thing — which must increase the price. Top quality places though.

New condominium thing in JAMAICA. Supposed to be first-class. Info through Jamaica Tourist Board. BROCKWAY SPRINGS at Lake Tahoe, California side. Rents on top quality condominiums, winter or summer. But also have a new BUY thing. You buy one-twelfth of the apartment (along with eleven other people you never see) and use it two weeks summer, two weeks winter. (Or rent it out if you like.)

CAMELBACK INN outside Phoenix. Now SELLING condominium apartments — the hotel has been cut up. You see it a part of the year, rent it out the rest.

What's the advantage? Private rental housing for vacations is hard to get everywhere — I can't find a house in Suva, Fiji, this summer. Condominiums are built for temporary use by the owners. For rent the rest of the time.

"We noticed in Rome on public places (like man-hole covers) the initials S.P.Q.R...."

From the glorious days of ancient Rome: "Senatus Populusque Romanus" — The Senate and the Roman People. An affirmation of Roman democracy, I guess. Joke (outside of Rome) is that it means, "Soni Porci Questi Romani" — What Pigs These Romans Are. (I mean, if you're looking for trouble, there's no place like Rome.)

"Advice please for a young man, looking for new spiritual values, overseas for a year?"

Mount Athos in Greece is for male chauvinists. About 3,000 monks, 400 miles from Athens. Free. Good meals. Bare on comforts. No women allowed — not even female animals. Apply to American Embassy in Athens and they'll work up a letter that allows you ten days. (Remember, monks sleep all day, sing all night.)

"We plan taking a trailer into Mexico (Mazatlan). Any idea of what living costs are?"

Recent report from Mazatlan (I like that town) says: "Six new trailer parks this year and most are filled." (Mazatlan is very popular. Trailer parks are booked a year in advance.) "Prices in Mazatlan are about twenty per cent higher than most places in Mexico, but food prices downtown are same as rest of Mexico."

"Auto repairs are reliable. Labor costs is low and materials cost is high. Lots of supermarkets now. Imported food is out of sight. Meat is improving in Mexico since they started feeding cattle on soy bean cake."

"How would you go about buying Brazilian emeralds and diamonds on a trip to Rio de Janeiro?"

The BIG dealer is Ians Stern. So big you find branches in Sao Paulo, in Lima, even New York City. You don't have to find him — he finds you. Has an aggressive sales operation. The hotel returns your passport with one of his sales folders tucked inside.

I bought a tourmaline (Brazil's emerald) ring some years ago. Looked good to me. But a sharp tourist reporter came back with a load of stuff — maybe $700 worth last month — and we had it appraised fairly. Appraiser gave half of it good marks. Half of it he said was double-priced.

So how do you know when you are buying pearls in Japan? Or star sapphires in Bangkok? Or diamonds in Israel or Amsterdam? If I like how it looks — and the price seems right and I have the money — I just buy it. (Maybe the mistake is coming home, having it appraised and finding out you didn't do so good.)

Nearby Biminis

NASSAU, Bahamas — The Biminis, nearest inhabited Bahamian islands to the United States mainland, comprises Bimini itself, Cat Cay and a number of straggling small cays and rocks.

Come to Tahiti.

It costs no more than crowded places.

There's one thing wrong with crowded places. Everyone goes to them at the same time. And they all stay in the same row of hotels. And eat in the same row of restaurants. And they all want to do the same things you want to do at the same time you want to do them. And at the end of a week's stay, they all pay the same high bills.

At Club Méditerranée/Tahiti, life is completely different. Your entire week's stay only costs you $147* For your own thatched roof cottage with your own private bath. Three delicious meals a day including all the wine you want. All the equipment and lessons you want for water-skiing, deep sea fishing, scuba diving, spear fishing and tennis. Plus dancing in the moonlight and picnics on the beach. And the beautiful part is, you do whatever you want to whenever you want. At Club Méditerranée, you couldn't go along with the crowd even if you wanted to.

GAL-IVANTING

Nothing escapes the exotic touch

By CHORAL PEPPER

From the moment your plane lands in Bangkok and you see farmers riding water buffalo over flat terrain punctuated with upcurling spikes on pagoda-stacked Buddhist shrines, you know that you have arrived in a different kind of land.

On the fringe of the city, where turbaned Burmese and sarong-clad Malaysians mingle with smiling Thais, you are impressed with polyglot ethnic groups living harmoniously in this geographical axis framed by Burma, Laos, Cambodia and Malaysia. Even modern facades like those of Inter-Continental and Hilton hotels do not escape the exotic touch.

When a new structure is built here, a miniature "spirit house" is erected to hold the spirit of the land's former owner. Because the old must never lie in the shadow of the new, these ornate little replicas are conspicuously located. One of the most charming stands on the grounds of the rambling Erawan Hotel.

THAILAND, formerly Siam, has been a constitutional monarchy only since 1931. Prior to that, the King of Siam had absolute

The outstanding sight-seeing tour begins at 7:00 a.m. by motor launch to visit the floating market. After passing alongside Burmese loggers skillfully maneuvering great masses of floating teak on the wide Chao Phraya River, the launch turns into a series of klongs, or canals, flanked by stilted houses.

THE PEOPLE who live here conduct all of their business on water. Fruits, vegetables, medical supplies, furniture, flowers, everything is merchandised directly to their verandas from canoes and small covered barges. The market boats that ply the klongs are guided by women wearing flat-topped straw hats who push the boats forward with long poles while their men hawk the goods. When the vendors disappear, the canal folds up like a country town after dark. It is necessary to get there early if you want an intimate glimpse into the homelife of the Thais.

Princess rings, Thai silks and intricate temple rubbings are the choice motivations for a shopping foray. Temple rubbings reproduced on rice paper may be purchased at stalls on temple grounds, but for the originals, look in antique shops.

A few years ago the government prohibited the Thais from making them anymore because of damage to temple walls. Originals are now collectors items, but may be bought here at a reasonable price.

Princess rings with domes of precious or semi-precious stones and Thai silks should be purchased from reputable stores. Examine the full yardage before buying silk. It is handwoven so slight flaws are to be expected, but sizeable streaks and thick strands are not acceptable. I like Anita's Thai Silk Shop near the Rama Hilton.

She is a clever designer and can produce overnight miracles in her workroom.

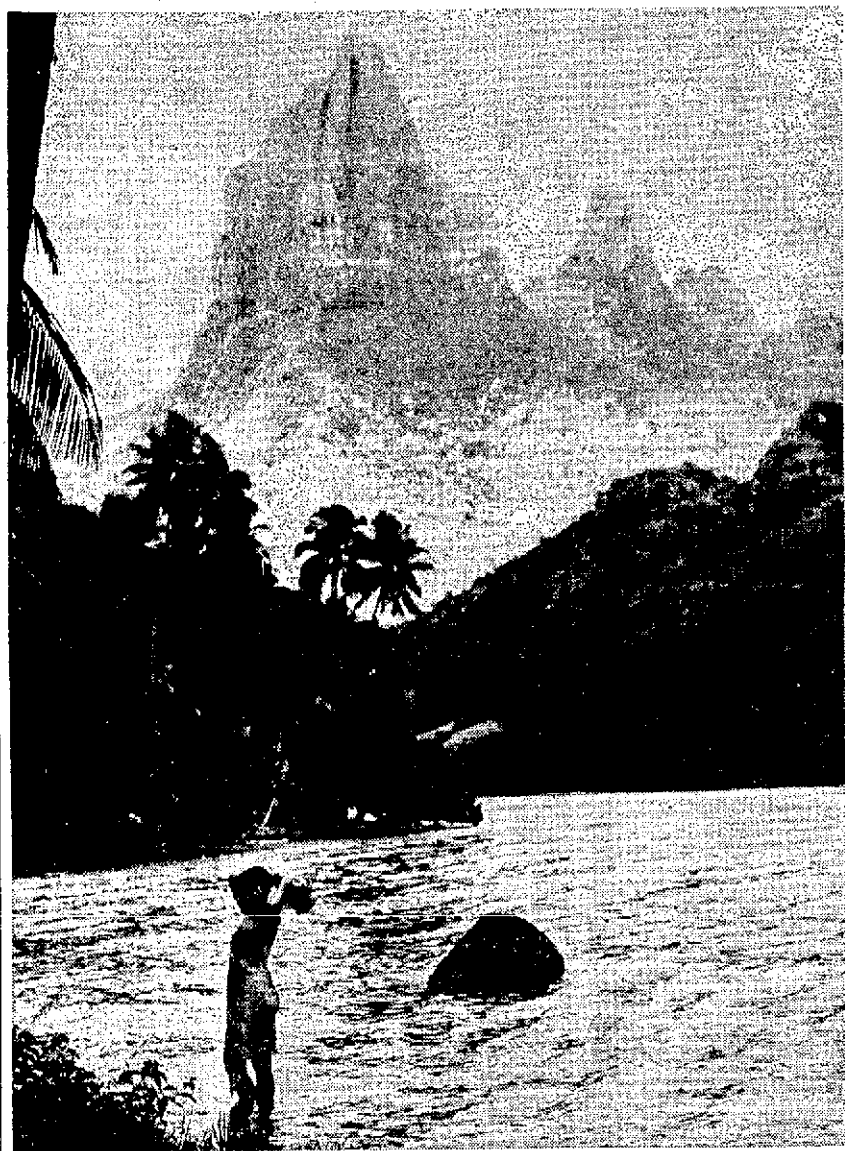

As fascinating to visit as the floating markets are the temples, called wats. The oldest and one of the most spectacular is Wat Arun, or Temple of Dawn, with its five bluntn-towered prangs and acres of gory deities guarding the porcelain-studded shrine that holds the ashes of Buddha.

It is a toss up which of the other 400 you might choose to see. All of them, even relatively unknown neighborhood wats, hold some kind of exquisite treasure that sends you aloft into a different world.

One thing about Bangkok, it is no place like home.

We've just made it easier than ever to get to Tahiti. And harder than ever to leave.

A Tahitian was once known to have said, "I'd sooner have a feast than a television set."

Now while that may not be the opinion of all Tahitians, it does (along with the picture above) give you a pretty good idea of what Tahiti is all about.

And that's why we've just made it easier for you to get there.

A choice of flights.

We have four evening non-stop flights a week, including our new Friday night flight that will start April 6. And we have four daytime flights a week via Honolulu.

And now that we've told you how easy it is to get to Tahiti, we'd like to tell you how easy it is to have a good time there.

A choice of tours.

For example, you can take our Polynesian Islander vacation and spend three days in Tahiti and four days in Moorea for only $602.

Or for a little more money you can get a little more of the South Pacific. Two days in Tahiti, 3 days in Moorea and 3 days in Samoa for only $615.

Or with our Polynesian Highlights vacation you can get 17 days in Tahiti, Moorea, Samoa, Honolulu and Maui for only $781.

All three tours include your round trip economy air fare, double occupancy hotel accommodations, round trip transfers, sightseeing and plenty of time on your own to enjoy everything from a tamaaraa feast of baked pig, curried chicken and lobster in Moorea to the Gauguin Museum and the temple ruins of Tahiti.

Which brings us to something else we put together to make it easier to enjoy yourself in Tahiti.

And some nice things you get in Tahiti.

We call it "Tahiti Fancy Free," and it'll be available starting April 15.

It's a booklet of 19 certificates that you get in Tahiti that are good for two-for-one lunches and dinners, free drinks, free gifts and free boat rides. (If you plan on eating and enjoying yourself, and who doesn't, you really can't get a better deal than this.)

So if you're thinking about going to Tahiti, think about going on Pan Am. And if you'd like more information call your Pan Am travel agent or call us. Or send in our coupon for our free "Pan Am's World, Pacific & Orient '73/74."

It'll tell you why we say it's easy to get to Tahiti. But leaving comes a little bit harder.

power of life and death over his subjects. The enormity of this power is sensed when you find yourself dwarfed by grotesque stone warriors and ferocious beasts placed on palace and temple grounds to frighten away the evil spirits of strangers.

This is an especially appealing destination for the independent woman traveler. There is an enormous amount of interest to fill the days and at night the friendly Thais go out of their way to make an unescorted woman feel comfortable anywhere.

I spent an evening dining on cushions on the floor at Salinee, a popular nightclub, while I watched exhibitions of classical Tahiti dancing. Similar shows are held evenings at leading hotels. English is the second language here, so it is fairly easy to get around alone.

Liners ready to sail

Swedish American Lines' two luxury White Viking Liners, the M.S. KUNGSOLM and the M.S. GRIPSHOLM will call in Los Angeles during the same week to begin spring cruises.

On April 3, the M.S. KUNGSOLM will sail from Los Angeles on a 52-day Spring Adventure Cruise to Europe via New York. Three days later, on April 6, the M.S. GRIPSHOLM calls in Los Angeles to start her 56-day Spring Cruise to the Greek Islands, the Mediterranean and the Adriatic, also via New York. This marks the first time that both luxury cruiseliner will call at the Port of Los Angeles the same week.

During the cruise, the KUNGSOLM will call in Portugal, Spain, France, Holland, England, Ireland and Scotland before returning to New York on May 24. Highlighting the many fascinating shore excursions will be wine tasting tours of Bordeaux and St. Emilion and a visit to Keukenhof Gardens in Holland at the height of the tulip season.

The GRIPSHOLM, after calling in Acapulco and transiting the Panama Canal, sails for New York, Madeira, Morocco, Malta, the Greek Islands, Turkey, Yugoslavia, Italy and Portugal.

DEAR ABBY

An impotent question

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I knew it was too good to be true! For six months I dated an attractive 44-year-old bachelor. (I'm a 38-year-old divorcee). He was so different from all the rest. He didn't make any improper advances toward me. A good-night kiss was all he ever wanted. He is so charming, attractive, and honorable.

Well, last night he told me that he would ask me to marry him but he is impotent! I care so much for him that I am considering telling him, "Yes, I'll marry you, and to heck with sex!" (Would that be foolish? I have two children by a former marriage and couldn't have any more if I wanted them, which I don't).

I would like to know if impotency is a physical thing? I have heard it can be mental. Can it be cured?

There is no one else I can talk to about this, and I must know. GEMINI

DEAR GEMINI: If you are considering marrying this man, have a talk with him. Ask him if he has seen a physician — or a psychiatrist — about his impotency. (If he has, ask him what they say). If not, tell him he certainly should. Much can be done about impotency, depending upon the reasons for it.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a married man who wants to marry me, but he can't find his wife to divorce her. That's my problem.

I can't plan a future with this man unless he finds his wife. Can you help my gentleman friend and me? C.

DEAR C.: Your gentleman friend should talk to a lawyer. He may be pleasantly surprised. Assuming the wife is lost, and not hiding, suggest that your friend write to: Lt. Pauline Everhart, Salvation Army, Box 3856, San Francisco, Cal. 94114.

They have branches all over the world, and have had remarkable success in locating missing persons.

Dear Family:

In keeping with our policy of service to the community, our dental health center has instituted an orthodontic department. Teeth can be straightened at any age, but early detection and treatment is desirable. A consultation with our staff orthodontist can answer your questions without obligation.

The importance of appearance in today's society cannot be minimized, and we feel that orthodontics (braces) should be made as reasonable as possible. We feel that orthodontics should be considered a necessity and not a luxury. We will make every possible effort to have an insurance plan covering orthodontics, we will be happy to fill out the necessary forms.

Sincerely,

Gerard S. Frankel

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

Fall and rise of Ann-Margret

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

It was the day of the Oscars, and it was a day I won't soon forget. Oh, it had nothing to do with the Academy Awards. I didn't hold an exclusive powwow with Marlon Brando, or anything like that. Something much nicer: I got to meet Ann-Margret.

Now, it isn't every week that a TV writer gets to interview a star of the magnitude of the sexy gal from Sweden. I don't mind admitting that I was thrilled at the opportunity. At times like this, I have to feel a bit sorry for those colleagues of mine who are stuck with talking to baseball players, politicians, doctors and cops.

Ann-Margret is not only one of the top all-around entertainers of our time — a star of movies, nightclubs and television — but she won the hearts of millions of persons all over the world with her courageous comeback from a near-fatal fall from a 22-foot-high platform several months ago. Few persons in any field would have been back at work as soon as she was.

The dream girl of millions — perhaps the closest thing we have to a universal sex symbol, a Marilyn Monroe of today — graciously consented to see me in her home in Beverly Hills. To reach the princess' castle on high, you ascend a winding, narrow private road and just hope that no one is driving down it while you're driving up. At the end of the road you're at the seven-acre estate of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Smith, who live in the home that once belonged to Humphrey Bogart.

Extensive remodeling work is under way on the home and the nearby two-story "guest house," where Ann-Margret and her husband, the former star of "77 Sunset Strip," are having a movie projection room built.

I had expected her actor-writer-producer husband to be on hand for the interview, or at least part of it, inasmuch as you sometimes read pieces indicating that Ann is a puppet on Roger's string and that she isn't even permitted to speak for herself. But the only one with us as we sat at a table in the trophy room and conversed for an hour and a half was a publicist for her upcoming TV special, "Ann-Margret — When You're Smiling," which will air from 10 to 11 p.m. Wednesday on NBC-TV, under the sponsorship of Timex.

The shapely star, whose floor-length dress in no way flaunted her famous figure, managed very well on her own, answering questions with apparent interest and warmth, even though she undoubtedly has had to field the same ones many times previously.

Only when I asked how she feels about Women's Lib did she decline to comment. Perhaps she doesn't want to antagonize any of her fans, who are numerous indeed. For the third year, Ann-Margret recently was voted the favorite actress (in all fields) of 1972 by the readers of Photoplay Magazine; the only previous three-time winner of a Photoplay Gold Medal in the most popular actress category was the late Jeanette MacDonald.

When I brought up the subject, the singer-dancer-actress admitted that winning the Photoplay awards was extremely gratifying. "After all, it's the public you're trying to please," she said. "All I've really wanted to do, since I was a little girl, was to entertain people, to make them feel happy."

Her ardent fans, as well as all other newspaper readers and TV viewers, were shocked to hear the news of Ann-Margret's accident last September at the Sahara Tahoe Hotel at Lake Tahoe. Her 22-foot plunge from a giant mechanical hand to the hotel stage left her with five facial bone fractures, a fractured left arm, an injured knee, a brain concussion and a broken jaw. For a while, it was questionable whether she would even live and highly doubtful that she would dance or sing again.

Ann-Margret told me she was unconscious for four days — information which stories at the time did not disclose.

Extensive plastic surgery at the UCLA Medical Center rebuilt the left side of the star's attractive face. Wires inside her mouth even went through her gums. For several weeks she couldn't even open her mouth enough to drink through a straw.

Amazingly, I could notice no trace of her injuries. Every woman should look so good.

The surgery was all done inside her face and thus left no scars.

"I'm grateful to be alive," she told me. "He" — and she pointed heavenward — "must have wanted me to keep going."

She still has reminders of her fall, however. To demonstrate, she wiggled her jaw and I heard distinct clicking sounds, as though made by metal, but she assured me all wires had been removed. "I have to open my mouth very slowly each morning when I first awaken," she said. And, holding her left arm in her right hand, she said: "Now I can predict rain by my left arm."

Ann-Margret surprised just about everyone by resuming her career in late November, just two-and-a-half months after her accident. She headlined a show at the Hilton International in Las Vegas, drawing both record crowds and critical acclaim.

Wrote Newsweek magazine about her comeback: "I lost 15 pounds, but girls, I wouldn't recommend it as a diet," she quipped to her audience in Las Vegas last week during a comeback performance that earned a standing ovation. "I finished the show and walked offstage," said Ann-Margret afterward, but everyone started pushing me onstage. When I got back out there, everyone was on their feet applauding. All I could do was cry. I guess I never really knew what show business was all about until that moment. I felt like a princess."

The 32-year-old performer told me she gets more enjoyment working on the stage than making movies. "I can feel the vibrations coming from the people out there," she said.

Perhaps the highlight of her screen career was her nomination for an Academy Award a year ago for best supporting actress for her role in "Carnal Knowledge." Said A-M: "It was gratifying to get the nomination. At last, people began to look upon me as a serious actress." At the 1972 Oscar ceremonies, she said, "My heart was pounding so loud I could hardly hear what was being said." She lost out to Cloris Leachman, but claimed not to be too disappointed. "Just being nominated was enough of an honor."

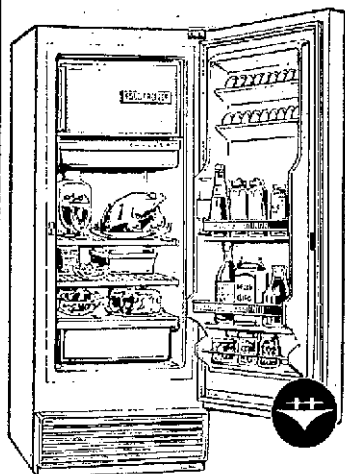

Whatever nervousness she felt at the 1972 Academy Awards show didn't compare with how she felt at the same ceremonies 10 years earlier. Introduced by Bob Hope, the shy, young, little-known entertainer took the stage and did a torrid, sensuous "Bachelor in Paradise" song number that made her one of the most talked about entertainers in Hollywood overnight.

ANN-MARGRET

Earlier, she had had a small role in the movie "Pocketful of Miracles," as the sweet, convent-educated daughter of Bette Davis, and a bigger role, though not the leading girl, in "State Fair" with Pat Boone.

Soon after her first Oscar show exposure, the blonde singer-dancer-actress starred in the movie "Bye, Bye, Birdie," and she has been a big name ever since. "What is not generally known," she told me, "is that I had signed for 'Bye, Bye, Birdie' even before my Oscar appearance."

For a few years, in movies with Elvis Presley, Dean Martin and others, the Swedish-born girl was looked upon more as a song-and-dance gal and as a sex kitten than as a dramatic actress. It was not until after Smith began guiding her career, following their marriage in May 1967, that she began appearing in some more serious roles, including "R.P.M." and "Carnal Knowledge." A recent release is "The Train Robbers," with John Wayne.

The one-time Academy Award nominee told me she had been too shy to enter drama school at Northwestern University the one year she went there. "I figured all the others would have had experience in summer stock and things like that," she said. Instead, she took public speaking — "Karen Black was in my class."

As a singer, though, A-M had been performing professionally since she was 16 — "or was it 15?" — and lied about her age to take a summer job at a hotel in Kansas City. After graduating from New Trier High School in Winnetka, Ill., and going to Northwestern a year, Ann and three young college men, billing themselves as The Suttletones, headed for Las Vegas to fill an engagement in a hotel lounge. When they arrived up the gambling capital, they were told that another act had been held over and they didn't have the job, after all.

Later, after landing some engagements in Southern California, singer Ann-Margret and the combo did get a lounge job in Las Vegas. And it wasn't long before George Burns grabbed the attractive young entertainer for his act in the main showroom of a Vegas hotel.

Burns and Bob Hope are A-M's guests in her "Ann-Margret — When You're Smiling" television special Wednesday night, and as part of the show the two famous comedians engage in a squabble over who discovered her. They do a musical comedy number called "Who Taught Her Everything She Knows."

Much of the special was taped at the Hilton Hotel in Las Vegas, where A-M returned for another nightclub engagement in late February and early March. The tapings were done at special afternoon performances of her show before live audiences.

Highlights of the show include a 12-minute production number, reminiscent of lavish movie musicals, titled "The Legend of the Lady in Red" and dealing with the 1930s capture of gangster John Dillinger, and a Scandinavian specialty number, "The Nights Are Six Months Long."

A-M moves among her nightclub audience and chats with some of the people. And she introduces her mother, Mrs. Gustav Olsson, on the show. Her father died in February at age 65 in Los Angeles. He had been an electrician at some movie studios.

Ann-Margret told me she came to America at age 8 — not age 5, as most stories and publicity releases have said — from a small village in northern Sweden. She and her parents lived in Fox Lake and Wilmette, Ill., through her high school years.

"I was very close to my parents," she said. "I was an only child, and I never have had to share love."

Ann-Margret opens and closes the TV special — her first headline TV appearance since her accident last September — by singing "When You're Smiling." She said: "It was a favorite of my father."

It seems a good choice also because of the courage and good spirits she has displayed in keeping her chin up after her near-tragic fall.

Now that she has proved that the accident isn't going to stop her career, Ann-Margret is going to take a rest — her first long vacation in more than a dozen years.

"I'm just starting a six-month vacation," she told me.

If anyone deserves one, she does.

Elvis' special says 'Aloha from Hawaii'

Elvis Presley performs his way through 18 songs and two song medleys, illustrating again why he has been dubbed "The King," as NBC-TV presents "Elvis: Aloha from Hawaii," a 90-minute special, Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

The benefit concert, proceeds from which went to the Kui Lee Cancer Fund, was taped in January and transmitted via satellite around the world, to be seen potentially by more than one billion people. This 60-minute concert, plus some additional songs taped following the satellite concert filling 30 more minutes, comprise the NBC special.

Elvis is on stage throughout—backed by his musicians, two singing groups and the orchestra—from the moment he arrives in his white, bejeweled jumpsuit to the theme music from the film "2001" until his exit, following his final song "I Can't Help Falling in Love with You."

There is some opening film footage showing his arrival in Hawaii, fans flocking to the Honolulu International Center for the concert, and, interspersed, typical island scenes reflective of songs and moods.

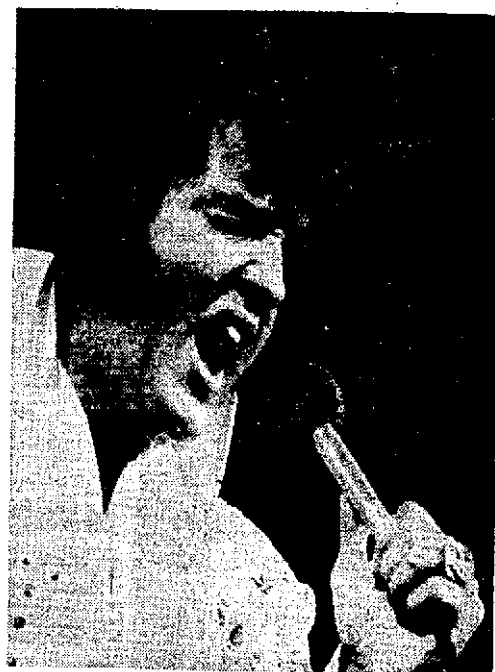

Viewers will see the specially designed stage with its reflecting mirrors, flashing, multi-colored "Elvis" signs in different alphabets and lettering, and a giant, illuminated silhouette of Presley which greeted the 6,000 fans who came to hear Elvis.

Elvis's first group of songs include "C.C. Rider," "Burning Love," "Something" and "You Gave Me a Mountain."

These are followed by "Early Morning Rain," "Steamroller Blues" and "Mr. Wavy."

Then goes into a seven-song medley including "Love Me," "Johnny B. Goode," "It's Over," "Blue Suede Shoes," "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," "I Can't Stop Lovin' You" and his famous "Hound Dog."

His next group of songs starts with the title song of his movie "Blue Hawaii," followed by "What Now My Love," and his audience-pleasing

ELVIS PRESLEY

"Fever," with its humorous, stylized body-movements, and the concluding "Welcome to My World."

The next section includes "Suspicious Minds" and the nostalgic "I'll Remember You," the latter written by the late Kui Lee.

Scenes of Oahu follow as Elvis continues with the "Hawaiian Wedding Song." The mood shifts with "Long Tall Sally, All Shook Up."

He goes native once more with "Ku-Ku-I-Po" and then proceeds to another medley, a rousing American trilogy of "Dixie," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Hush Little Baby" and, again, "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Finally, Elvis sings "Big Hunk of Love" and concludes with "I Can't Help Falling in Love with You."

Marty Pasetta produced and directed this RCA Record Tours and Elvis Presley Production in association with Pasetta Productions.

WHAT HAS happened to "Concentration"? Was any notice given that the program was going off the air?

I turned on the TV Monday morning at the usual time for "Concentration." 'n I got "Baffle." Believe me, I was baffled... and disgusted, too.

D. G.
Long Beach

("Concentration," which premiered on NBC-TV in August 1958 and was the longest-running daytime game show in the history of network TV, was replaced, starting last week, by "Baffle," a celebrity game show hosted by Dick Enberg. Yes, there were notices in the paper that "Concentration" was to be replaced.)

"CONCENTRATION" was a good, good show. The replacement is lousy.

M. E. Wilson
Long Beach

TELL ME it isn't so — how could NBC take my favorite game show off?

I just can't believe that there are not "Concentration" addicts to write to NBC to retain this "tried and true" game show (I have already written).

Certainly NBC does not think some of the newer shows are better — or that "change" is the real message nowadays. Once in awhile we do enjoy just entertainment that has lasted for 14 years.

Elizabeth R. Jones

EVER SINCE "Emergency!" started on TV, I have watched it. It is a great series and a lot can be learned from it. I watched it on March 10 and came home from work on March 17 all set to watch a good program, and what happens? Some dumb, stupid show is on in its place.

If they have changed time and days, please let me know.

Let us all help to get them back on.

CRITICS' CORNER

ABC-TV's annual Tony Awards Show, which offers the prize-giving for Broadway stage achievements, came up with another nifty idea last Sunday night: It featured film clips of foreign productions of Broadway musicals.

Thus, once again, producer Alexander H. Cohen and his staff conquered the formidable television problem of how to take an awards ceremony that is basically of limited interest nationally and yet make it attractive as a video production on a network. The answer that Cohen and his people come up with each year is a clever entertainment angle.

You would think the Tony Awards show would be the least likely theatrical prize-giving ceremony to succeed on television. But it has annually become the best because it is more imaginative than the movie — and television — industry in its use of video to give an aura of showmanship to the cut-and-dried procedures of handing out awards.

The movies' annual Oscar shows are generally routine. And video's Emmy Awards presentations are, with rare exception, all but unspeakable in their deluge of prizes in trivial categories. The Tony television outings invariably manage a graciousness and style these two other awards shows minimize.

Sunday's Tony broadcast was not without its bloopers and slow moments — almost no awards show is. But the production, which originated from the Imperial Theatre in New York, made up for these with those segments of musicals done way off Broadway. The only one that was somewhat disappointing was a Yugoslav version of "Man of La Mancha," from Zagreb, because the gentleman who starred failed to ignite the required sparks in his rendition of "The Impossible Dream."

But this sequence, and all the others from abroad (and one from high school production of "My Fair Lady" in Wichita Falls, Tex.), succeeded in opening up the tighter confines of the ABC-TV outing, giving us a genuinely fresh taste of how Broadway's shows have impact from foreign capitals to a town in America. And the foreign sequences provided some enchanting cultural insights into tastes abroad.

One of the showstoppers was the number "Shall We Dance?" from a Tokyo production of "The King and I," which featured a stunning actress as Anna and an extremely handsome king who, with a full head of hair (unlike Yul Brynner, who originated the role), looked like Turhan Bey. It was a terrific sequence, and the audience at the Imperial Theatre cheered it.

There were also film clips from a Viennese production of "West Side Story," which seemed more operatic than we are used to over here but was extremely effective. And there were scenes from a London revival of "Show Boat," with what appeared to be a marvelous cast doing all those great songs so well that you felt like cheering at home.

I'm not thrilled by the music of "Hello, Dolly," but the clips from a Paris edition starred Annie Cordy, who, in a champagne-like atmosphere, gave the excerpted moments some real stage razzmatazz.

The clips did contain one charming surprise—an Italian production entitled "Ciao, Rudy," which did not come from Broadway but, rather, was a musical obviously influenced by the American stage, focusing on the journey of Rudolph Valentino from Italy to the United States. From all appearances, it seemed to be a rousing, slam-bang show, and I'm thinking of hocking the family estate to make sure it gets to America.

Well, let's see. There was that Wichita Falls High School edition of "My Fair Lady," and the young man who played Henry Higgins was a bit of all right. And there was an exciting number from the Broadway musical "Pippin," and a zippy opening song that was performed by Gwen Verdon, Helen Gallagher, Paula Kelly and Donna McKechnie. For viewer purposes, musical productions inevitably dominate the Broadway entertainment offered on each ABC-TV Tony show, but it's hard to fault the logic behind this, though it is limiting.

Oh, yes, the Tony show even "one-upped" the Oscars by offering some clips of movies made from Broadway musicals—like "Cabaret," "Funny Girl" and "Fiddler on the Roof." The New York Theater is a master of the art of survival, and now it is annually, intelligently, using television as a new weapon in its determination to keep succeeding in show business by really trying.

It can honestly be said that NBC-TV's Oscar Awards show Tuesday night—a mixture of tedi-Freedman offers Bergman's 'The Lie'

By BILL MAHAN
Lewis Freedman came from teaching English Lit at Hobart College in upstate New York. In 1949 experience didn't mean as much as it does today, and Freedman decided to give up teaching to become stage manager for WOR-TV in New York City.

The position paid small money and he was low man on the totem pole, but it was what he wanted. From there things moved rapidly and he was promoted to assistant director, director, and then associate producer — all on live television.

Twenty years later Freedman came to Hollywood to create the Hollywood Television Theatre for public broadcasting. He began with "The Andersonville Trial" and ended with "Beginning to End," by Samuel Beckett.

Then CBS invited him to join the network and assume the title of executive producer, dramatic programs, which consisted of creating the new CBS Playhouse 90 series and a mini-series spinoff which are still in the works. Mini-series means a multi-part dramatic serial similar to the British serials "Henry the Eighth" and "The Forsythe Saga."

Playhouse 90 and CBS Playhouse, in the past, were considered the showcase for the best writing, best acting, best directing and best producing of drama on television. Freedman hopes to meet and better those standards, and from all indications he will.

"The Lie" is an original drama for television written by Ingmar Bergman, the first thing Bergman has written for TV. There was rapport between Bergman and Freedman when they met five years ago; therefore, when the American rights became available, Freedman was Bergman's first choice for producer. The material was so mature and so strong that he was really the only choice.

The drama stars George Segal, Shirley Knight, Robert Culp and a supporting cast that equals the original Playhouse 90's. Directed by Alex Segal, who is most famous for "Death of a Salesman," the one-and-a-half-hour television drama shapes up to be a show to remember.

Assuming viewers are favorably impressed, Playhouse 90 can and will become a regular series of two or three specials a year. Television still can come back, and when you get talent the likes of Freedman and what he can bring along, you, the viewers, are the ones who benefit.

The story of "The Lie" should mean something to every person in this country. It is the saga of happy marriage on the surface with unhappy people beneath. It airs Tuesday, April 24, from 9:30 to 11 p.m. Ironically, that's the day my divorce becomes final.

BUDDY EBSEN and guest star Andy Kim, a recording star, appear in tonight's "Barnaby Jones" episode on CBS titled "Sing a Song of Murder."

TOP VIEW

By CLARKE WILLIAMSON

The splendor, or suds, has all gone out of "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing," not only because CBS, fearful of its competition, has bopped the soap opera, but because our readers now find it's not worth their time of day in CBS' daytime format.

But there's new splendor for CBS to contemplate in the fact that viewers, young ones especially, are digging last fall's new program, the "Bob Newhart Show." This comedy about a psychologist is beginning to take off as if for keeps, much the way Mary Tyler Moore's show stole a march several years ago.

The other news is that middle-aged viewers are hipped on PBS' "International Performance," and whenever ANY Top View age group goes for a Public Broadcasting Service program, that's news. Here's how readers responding to our poll rate various programs:

Bob Newhart Show, CBS, 71.9, good.
Tuesday Movie, CBS, 69.6, good.
International Performance, PBS, 68.3, good.
Jeopardy, NBC, 67.5, good.
Roger Mudd News, CBS, 67.1, good.
Search, NBC, 66.7, fair.
Jigsaw (The Men), ABC, 64.2, fair.
Run Around, NBC, 62.0, fair.
Washington-Week in Review, PBS, 57.2, fair.
Love Is a Many Splendored Thing, CBS, 53.7, poor.

READERS SPEAK

BOB NEWHART: From Walter Walsh, Meriden, Conn.: This humdinger grows on you probably because the zany but believable characters get to be like real wonderful people, and friends... From Donald Pierce, Alton, Ill.: No TV show until now ever had such a barrel of fun with the psychology profession. And it's not mean — just sly.

JEOPARDY: From Mrs. Eunice H. Biesiadecki, San Antonio, Tex.: I watch TV 14-16 hours a day and have seen this from the beginning with rarely a miss. My favorite daytime show... From Barbara Hanson, Tampa Fla.: TV is for entertainment, not for testing your memory like going back to school!

SPECIAL

THE SCARECROW (28), 8 p.m. — Gene Wilder plays the title role in this repeat "Hollywood TV Theatre" historical fantasy about a scarecrow who is brought to life. Lewis Freedman produced the 2-hour play, based on Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Feathertop Tale."

SALUTE TO John Ford (2), 9:30 p.m. — President Nixon was guest of honor at Saturday's gala dinner honoring the 78-year-old director, held at the Beverly Hilton Hotel. Highlights of the occasion, including appearances by top stars and a selection of scenes from Ford's film career by director Peter Bogdanovich, are shown at this time, with Charlton Heston opening the evening.

KATE SMITH (4), 11:30 p.m. — The veteran singer, who featured Doc Severinsen as lead trumpet player on her TV series of the '50s, turns up as substitute host of tonight's edition. Among scheduled guests are Jean Stapleton, George Maharis and Charles Nelson Reilly

- SPECIAL
ELECTION Returns — Coverage begins at 7:30 p.m., with KNXT (2) and KNBC (4) providing the most complete coverage, which results in shifting time slots for network shows, and even local preemption of "Hawaii Five-0" and the last portion of "First Tuesday". See log for details.
A WAR of Children (2), 9 p.m. — The original James Eastman drama, filmed on location in Ireland and cited by the Monte Carlo Film Festival as the best film corresponding to the ideas of UNESCO, is reprised at this time. Story deals with members of a Belfast family unintentionally caught up in the current conflict. Emmy award-winning Jenny Agutter is featured.
FIRST TUESDAY (4), approx. 9:30 p.m. — Locally abbreviated edition includes a feature on the life-style of an American draft resister living in Canada and his feelings about the debate on amnesty in his home-town church, plus a report on cell therapy, billed as a rejuvenating "fountain of youth," and either a panacea for the rich and famous, or sheer quackery (it's illegal in the U.S.).

SPECIAL

ALEXANDER (7), 4:30 p.m. — Red Buttons stars in an "ABC Afterschool Special" as a magical old man who brings joy and wonder into the lives of three children, teaching them they can be whatever they want to be. And through him, the children learn about love.

WINNIE the Pooh (4), 8 p.m. — Sebastian Cabot narrates this repeat animated musical based on the A.A. Milne classics, with Sterling Holloway as the voice of the roly-poly little bear who seeks to satisfy his appetite for honey. Five songs were written for the show.

ELVIA: Aloha from Hawii (4), 8:30 p.m. — Elvis
Presley, at his best, sings 18 songs and two medleys during a 90-minute one-man special taped in Hawii. Most of the show is the first U.S. telecast of a benefit concert for the Kui Lee cancer research fund, beamed by satellite to 40 countries last January. Then a half-hour of additional songs were added, from the theme from "$2001" 2001" to "I Can't Help Falling in Love with You."

ANN-MARGRET (4), 10
p.m. — Ann-Margret stars in a musical-variety hour, produced by her husband Roger Smith, and showing her facets as an immigrant from Sweden, as a top star, and as Mrs.
Smith. Latter segment features "home movies" taken by Smith on location. Special guests are Bob Hope and George Burns. It's her first TV appearance since her near-tragic fall.

SPECIAL

GIFT OF TERROR (7), 1:30 p.m. — Denise Alexander of "General Hospital" stars in a 90-minute "Afternoon Playbreak" drama, as a girl who mysteriously is given the ability to foresee the future, and suddenly finds herself at the center of a romantic triangle that explodes into murder.

THE SMILE OF THE WALRUS (7), 8 p.m. — The spectacular spring migration of the massive Pacific walrus from Alaska northward to the clam beds above the Arctic Circle is studied both above and below Arctic waters in a Jacques Cousteau repeat. As the walrus begin to arrive in the Bering Sea, Cousteau passes through ice fields within 20 miles of Siberia, crossing the International Date Line to film a sleeping herd, and an Eskimo walrus hunt which orphan a 4-day-old pup. Walter J. Hickel discusses the need for correct harvesting of walruses.

The BIBLE

Says

Question: Do demons possess persons today?

We do read about demons possessing people in the Bible, but demons do not possess people today. The activity of demons in Old Testament times was virtually unknown, but their presence in New Testament times was discerned by all—Jews, Gentiles, and Jesus and His disciples.

It is likely that demons were fallen angels (Matt. 25:41; Jude 6; 2 Pet. 2:4,9). It is certain that they were a part of the kingdom of Satan (Matt. 12:25-26; Col. 2:15). They possessed and tormented various people—persons who were not necessarily evil or wicked.

There is no biblical evidence that demons were directly related to the practice of idolatry or that demons were ever in league with sorcerers or necromancers of Biblical times, as some suggest today. The Jesus People Movement of today strongly believes in demon possession, variously connecting them with forms of astrology and witchcraft, and sometimes drugs. Though faithful Christians are certainly opposed to all forms of astrology and witchcraft and drug use—the Bible simply does not teach that one who practices any or all of these is demon-possessed.

It would seem that demons were allowed great freedom in the time of Christ so that Jesus and His disciples could cast them out and thus demonstrate divine power over Satan and his angels. The demons of Christ's time clearly realized that a time of torment was in store for them (Matt. 8:29). It is this writer's belief that "the appointed time" of Matt. 8:29 coincides with the end of spiritual gifts. Spiritual gifts (miracles) ended at the end of the apostolic age, when "that which is perfect" (completed revelation, the Bible) came (1 Cor. 13:8-10). Demon-possession ended at the same time. One of the chief works of Christ on the earth was to destroy the works of demons (Mk. 1:24; 1 John 3:8). The casting out of demons was one of a number of special signs that were to identify God's messengers in N.T. times (Matt. 10:1,7-8; Mk. 16:17-20; 1 Cor. 13:8-10).

Finally, the Bible speaks specifically of a time when demons or "unclean spirits" would cease their activity. "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered; and also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirits to pass out of the land" (Zech. 13:1-2). The fountain for sin and cleansing come when Jesus came. Jesus has already come. The prophets and unclean spirits have now passed out of the land. There are no demons today to possess people, just as there are no miracles performed today.

THE BURNOR CONTACT LENSES

from early morning

8 to 15 Hours of Wear
the First Day

A concept in the fitting of contact lenses has recently been introduced by John L. Burnor. These lenses are known as Burnor Contact Lenses.

24-HOUR "SLEEPING" LENSES
... The Burnor Contact Lenses are designed for 24 hour wear. Patients are able to wear their Burnor Contact Lenses comfortably (under the supervision of their eye specialist) from 5 to 7 days continuously.

The Burnor Contact Lenses are available through dispensing locations certified by Lens Craft Research and Development Co., Inc.

Through the Burnor design process, this lens is custom fit to enable the patient to wear the lens eight to fifteen hours the first day with comfort.

The Burnor Contact Lenses are offered on a guarantee basis.
Please call for full information on this new product.

By appointment only...

... through late evening.

um, chaos, political differences, dignity and taste-lessness—was a strangely true representation of this curious place called Hollywood.

On the one hand, we had the absent Marlon Brando refusing, through an American Indian girl who appeared for him, the best actor award for his performance in "The Godfather." The actor, long a supporter of Indian causes, is not satisfied with the treatment of Indians. As the young woman explained
Brando's position, there was a mixture of boos and applause from the audience at the Los Angeles Music Center.

Well, that was one sequence. And then there was the bosomy star who,
as the best actress nominees were waiting to hear who among them had won, remarked: "Hope they haven't got a cause."
And then there was Liza Minnelli, accepting the Oscar for best actress for her performance in
"Cabaret," saying:
"Thank you for giving me this award (she emphasized the word 'me').
You've made me very happy."

From the beginning, you had to know it was going to be one of those nights, and wonder whether the moon was full.
Things started out with the style and aplomb of a high school production.
For example, there was a big opening production

Now, Miss Lansbury is a very talented lady, but it is highly doubtful that she is much of a movie star to the motion picture audience today.

Then, believe it or not,
they had her, still in costume from the number, introduce a movie academy executive, which destroyed whatever glamorous, escapist illusion she had built up through her skills.

And then, so help me,
Clint Eastwood came on to get things rolling because Charlton Heston, who was supposed to be there, hadn't arrived yet.

Finally, as an opening topper, Heston walked on while Eastwood was carrying on. Heston took over as a viewer began to wonder what more could possibly go wrong. The answer was—plenty. The exchanges of dialogue between the presenters were, in the main, excruciatingly cute. The various musical production numbers—even a salute to the 50th anniversary of Walt Disney's organization—were unimaginative.

Until things warmed up in the second half of the show, which seemed about eight hours long, it was about as glamorous as the corner drug store, and those present seemed, mostly, to be the skimmed milk of Hollywood society. Oh, yes, there was one gentleman—a presenter—who commented that he didn't even watch last year's Oscar show. None of this, of course, mattered to the public relations firms who have, as usual, been campaigning fiercely to win awards for clients, and for whom, in effect, this was payoff night—or bye, bye, baby.

Well, let us speak now of the evening's nicer moments. There was for instance, a fine film-clip remembrance of the late Edward G. Robinson and a truly touching followup when his widow appeared and read remarks her husband had prepared, knowing he was to get a special award at this ceremony. There was, in addition, Frank Sinatra's commanding and graceful introduction of his friend Rosalind Russell, who received the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award.

There was Jack Lem-mon's thoughtful, tasteful —and graceful—tribute to Noel Coward, who died
Monday. There was Carol

Burnett, who helped keep the show somewhat alive in her early hosting duties. There was Michael Caine, whose blunt but amusing manner as another host was winning and made things seem to be moving more smoothly than they actually were.
In sum, the Oscar show was—as a show featuring entertainment—just about as routine as usual. But as an unintentional piece of sociological revelation, it was a helpful little primer on the town that is still like no other, for better or worse, or both.

Go Anthony now... for their pools this summer!

There's one sure way you can save money on a pool and make sure your family enjoys a full season of swimming fun... both at the same time.

That's by planning your Anthony pool now — ahead of the summer rush — while our construction crews have more free time.

Keeping our crews busy all year is just one way Anthony Pools, the world's largest pool builder, is able to pass along savings to you. Bigger volume means better prices. And to make the savings even greater, Anthony is the only pool builder who eliminates the middleman's profits by manufacturing a full line of pool equipment and accessories and selling them directly to you.

That's why Anthony can build more beautiful pools, better quality — at competitive prices. Why take chances? Call Anthony — to be sure.

FASTER CONSTRUCTION. Anthony's new computerized construction scheduling insures that there will be no hang-ups. Your pool will be finished in minimum time. For the best pool — built quicker — at the least money, go Anthony... now!

Call or write for our new 1973 Pool Story. See latest ideas on pool design, pool equipment, landscaping.

The good ladies of Women's Lib in Orange County celebrated Susan B. Agony's (or everwhat her name was) birthday this year by naming Cartoonist Frank Interlandi as Male Chauvinist Pig of the Year and listening to a couple of speakers.

Interlandi didn't show up for the honor. Rumor had it he was home baby sitting. But a women's libber name o' Ann Forfreedom addressed the ladies in behalf of liberation. Her name was more intriguing than her speech, and I inquired where she got it. (The name, I mean. It wasn't hard to figure out where she got the speech.)

Why, she said, she just adopted it like the American Indians. Her Christian name was Ann, and she was going around doing a lot of talking for freedom, so a good adult name for her seemed to be Ann Forfreedom.

I've been doing a lot of thinking about that. I dug out Stephen Vincent Benet's fine poem, "American Names," and mulled over it. I think Ms. Forfreedom may have something.

Names ought to have a meaning. Otherwise why not just number kids like One Smith, Two Smith, Three Smith, etc. It's better than naming them Percy, or Brunhilde, and you wouldn't have to ask which is the oldest.

It was the Romans who first overdid the naming business. Every Roman had at least three and sometimes four names — a praenomen or first name; a nomen or given name; a cognomen or family name; and sometimes an agnomen. But usually that last one was descriptive, like Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus. He beat Hannibal in Africa, so they named him Africanus.

The British, who like to outdo the Romans in the number of given names, still feel the need for descriptive ones.

Bernard Montgomery may live most of his years for example as Bernie or Monty, but when they want to distinguish him from George Montgomery or Montgomery Ward, they make him Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein.

It seems to me that the nation that gave the world Hawkeye (both J. F. Cooper's hero and Trapper John's buddy), Calamity Jane and Crazy Horse can do better than the British or Romans in descriptive names.

We can either draw like Ann Forfreedom on the Indian example or perhaps our political lore ("Tommy the Cork," "Big Daddy," "Tricky Dicky") or the coinage of the street people ("Crazy Eddie," "Dirty Alice").

Ponder, for instance, the following names in terms of Long Beach. Anybody you might recognize?

Honest John Boat-That-Stands-Like-a-Building, Bert the Godbrother, Ed Twentykiller (the proposition, that is), Renee Votesalone, Bill the Godbrother, Sam Runsdatown, the Duke of Sacramento, Super V. Jim, Jacques Two-Snows.

Most of us know Tark the Shark or Colonel Jim when we meet them in the sports pages, but who do you connect up with Odie Comesbussing, Uncle Joe, Jim Centralarea, Dan Whooliendorse, Mike the Tyke, Hymie Steve, Ptomaine Dave, Vito Dilba?

And don't you think art or music criticism would read better under the byline of Elise Shelikedit or David Likedpansof it.

Well, as Ann Forfreedom pointed out, you don't have to be Indian to have reservations. Meanwhile, a happy April Fool's Day to you from Bob Phutenmouth. □

Q: Phyllis Diller, the housewife who started her remarkable career as a comedienne late in life — is it true she now is studying to become a doctor? — Mrs. R. Grant, Norfolk, Va.

A: Not exactly. Phyllis, who sets down her ambitions in a sort of diary, her "Dream Book," has pencilled in this as one of her goals — to one day accept an honorary doctor's degree. "The whole secret of life," she's confided, "is to know what you want, to write it down and then commit yourself to accomplishing it."

Q: Who was it Bogart kept telling to "play it again, Sam" in Casablanca? And what song did he want played again? — Mrs. Carl Matushek, Waymell, Pa.

A: As Time Goes By was the haunting melody Bogey asked pianist Dooley Wilson to keep playing. Ingrid Bergman, Claude Rains and Conrad Veidt supported Bogey. The movie, released in 1943, won added publicity because (by coincidence) it came out just one week before the historic Casablanca conference between FDR and Churchill.

Q: Is Soupy Sales of What's My Line? married? And has he got any children? — Carla T., Shreveport, La.

A: "Right now," Soupy told us, "I'm single. Got divorced about five years ago, but didn't make a big thing out of it. I've got two sons, Tony, my oldest, is 21, and Hunt is 19. And they're with it all the way. They're singing and playing with a new futuristic group called Utopia. Tony is dyeing his hair pink — while Hunt's is dyed black with a two-inch white stripe down the middle. Looks pretty weird — but they're good boys and apparently know where they're going."

Q: Where did the expression "it's all Greek to me" come from? — Tommy B. Hayes, Seattle.

A: From Shakespeare's Julius Caesar. The correct version is: "But for my own part, it was Greek to me."

Q: Do Russian doctors take the Hippocratic oath of medical ethics that we American doctors do? — L.T.R. (M.D.), Oklahoma City.

A: Since March 1971, medical college graduates, before they receive their doctor's diplomas, have to take a similar oath. Decreed by the USSR Supreme Soviet, the oath begins: "On receiving the honored title of doctor and commencing medical practice, I solemnly swear to devote all my knowledge and strength to the protection and improvement of human health and the treatment and prevention of disease, and to work conscientiously wherever the interests of society require it." And concludes, "I swear to remain loyal to this oath throughout my life."

Ayn Rand

a woman under siege

On the roof of the McAlpin Hotel, a small convention center in the heart of New York's bustling garment center, a storm of excitement is raging around a new play called "Penthouse Legend." Under ordinary circumstances, it might be just another off-Broadway play trying to find an audience in the tangled box-office jungle. But this is no ordinary play and its playwright is no struggling hopeful with a pawnshop Smith-Corona and a pocketful of dreams. "Penthouse Legend" is the work of Ayn Rand, the 68-year-old philosopher who is something of a legend herself.

One of the most often misquoted, misrepresented and misunderstood literary figures of our time, she is surrounded by controversy in everything she does the way fog clings to a raincoat. Now, in the eye of a new hurricane, the author has a few things to say before the winds subside.

Ayn Rand, who lives quietly and never does interviews, opens the door herself. From her novels, plays and teachings on the subject of a complex philosophy she calls "Objectivism" and from her image as a mystery woman in the world of letters, I expected her to live in seclusion on some remote country farm like J.D. Salinger, surrounded by fresh air, room to think and possibly an electric fence.

No such luck. She has been married 43 years to a distinguished, soft-spoken painter named Frank O'Connor, with whom she lives in one of those brick monstrosities in the heart of Manhattan — a modern Xanadu with flame-haired matrons walking poodles outside, a doorman who announces her guests from a switchboard downstairs, incinerators in the basement and nosy neighbors down the hall. It is not the setting I expected for the lady whose theories are studied by legions of college students like passages from the Bible and denounced by others as if she were planning to destroy the world next Thursday.

But it is a pleasant, spacious apartment, adorned with colorful paintings and the kind of functional, wide-arc furniture of which the architect hero of her most famous novel, "The Fountainhead," might approve. A maid serves coffee and cookies filled with unnatural preservatives (Miss Rand considers the health-food craze frivolous) while she sits on the edge of a blue-velvet sofa, bristling with energy. In person, she is less formidable than either her writing or her reputation suggests, with round, luminous eyes that don't miss a trick, a Russian lilt to the voice that is the only last link with the Leningrad where she was born in 1905, a natural curiosity about everything, and an intriguing way of shaping words with her hands as though she were fondling rare jade. When she speaks, it is with passion and authority, like an aging Bette Davis.

She explains that "Penthouse Legend" is not a new play. It was written in 1933 and first produced on Broadway as "The Night of January 16th." It became a classic, with no help from the author.

Here's the story:

"The play is a courtroom drama, a murder trial in which the jury is drawn from the audience to vote on the verdict. Obviously, the factual evidence of the defendant's guilt or innocence had to be evenly balanced to make either verdict possible and there are two end-

... worst hell I ever lived through."

ings, depending on which way the jury votes. But it is not a police drama. It is a sense-of-life play, symbolically expressing certain ideas of mine regarding the independent man vs. conformity. The motive in my writing has always been the presentation of an ideal man. The murder victim in the play is a crook, so he is not my idea of an ideal man, but he also had a certain greatness I wanted to defend. It is not his murderer who is on trial here, but the audience."

That's where the controversy started, but what about the play?

"The entire history of this play has been the worst hell I ever lived through. It was produced in 1935 by Al Woods, a famous producer of melodramas, who changed the title to 'Night of January 16th' and turned it into a junk heap of clichés that clashed with the style and confused the audience. Woods actually believed you could hold an audience's attention only with guns, fingerprints and other props that were pure nonsense, but not with speeches. He was a faithful adherent to the school of thought that believes if a literary work is serious, it must bore people to death; if it's entertaining, it must not communicate anything of importance.

"By the time it opened on Broadway, it was dead as far as I was concerned. It was no longer a play about ideas, and I felt nothing about it except revulsion. On opening night, I sat in the back row, yawning — not out of tension, but out of genuine boredom."

The play ran for six months on gimmicks. Opening night, Al Woods put boxing champion Jack Dempsey in the jury to create excitement. Another performance played to an audience that was totally blind, with Helen Keller as the foreman of the jury and a famous newscaster describing the evidence. (The verdict that night was "guilty.")

In subsequent years, the version of the play Ayn Rand hates has been a gigantic success in summer stock radio and TV. After World War II, it was presented by the U.S.O. for the American troops in Berlin. It is still performed by amateur college and church groups with all the swear words removed ("Sheer hypocrisy," she sniffs), but the author disclaims any responsibility for it.

"I want to state formally, for the record and as a public notice, that the amateur version of 'Night of January 16th' is not written by me."

Paramount's movie version with Robert Preston and Ellen Drew was "another horror story." It was squeezed into the Christmas week of 1941 between a Rosalind Russell comedy and a new Tarzan movie.

"I had nothing to do with the screen adaptation. There is nothing of mine in that movie except the names of some of the characters and one line of dialogue — 'The court will now adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.'"

She refers to the movie as "cheap, trashy vulgarity." Nor did she care much for the movie version of "The Fountainhead."

"Patricia Neal was too young, Gary Cooper was too old, and King Vidor's direction was wrong. My ideal choice was Greta Garbo."

Miss Rand wrote one other play, "The Unconquered," in 1940. It was set in Soviet Russia and directed by George Abbott. All she says about that one is: "George Abbott should stick to comedy. They had a revolving stage and every time it moved it clanked."

She gave up writing for the theater because she couldn't fight the dependence on "a team of people who expected me to do their thinking for them." She didn't look at "Night of January 16th" again for 25 years because it embarrassed her. But now, in the new version, she has restored the play to its original title, cut out everything relating to the commercial Broadway production including the gun moll, the gun and the detective story props, and updated a few lines.

"There's no death penalty now, and coupes are called cars. Otherwise, it hasn't dated."

At last, the world will see Ayn Rand's original play for the first time.

We are meeting to discuss the play, but

"A THIRD GENERATION CONSTRUCTION FAMILY"

being in the same room with Ayn Rand and avoiding the subject of her philosophy is like watching 'The Poseidon Adventure' and not noticing the ship is upside down. Everything she says and does is touched and guided by it. She calls it 'Objectivism' and it is too complicated to handle with brevity, but it dominates everything she writes and stands for, so it must mean something, since her works have sold eight million copies. She has a contract for a new novel, but writes slowly (it took her 11 years to write 'Atlas Shrugged').

She spends most of her time writing her twice-monthly newsletter which goes out to 15,000 of her fans and she often works until four in the morning formulating her ideas and opinions on political and cultural issues and trends.

She loathes drugs, reads Agatha Christie and Mickey Spillane to lull herself to sleep and has only one hobby, stamp collecting — "I mooch them from friends. It's the only thing that relaxes my mind."

She rarely goes to movies because "they have so little to say. The three most important ingredients to me are plot, plot and more plot. I like things that present their message in the form of a coherent story. Then they must have something positive to say. I love Fritz Lang. His skill was dazzling. But today's films are too filled with self-pity. I'm an activist. If things are wrong, we must change them, not complain about them. I believe every evil created by man can be corrected by man. I don't write about men as they are, but only as they should and can be."

She loathes drugs and shuns movies.

She denies that Frank Lloyd Wright was the model of her hero in 'The Fountainhead.'

"I appreciated his philosophy of architecture, but nothing more. He had a commune for artists in Wisconsin which I visited once. He had one criticism of the book. He said I made the character too tall. If he thought it was based on him, it's a compliment, but it's not true. He was not a tyrant, but his wife was. She didn't care much for me and vice versa."

Ayn Rand has been called everything from a Fascist to a Communist (usually by people who don't know the difference), but she says most of the nuts have given up on her. The insulting mail is intercepted by a secretary and filed away before she sees it. "Most of the negative mail comes from religious fanatics." (She's an avowed atheist.)

She is a registered Republican, but has only unprintable things to say about William Buckley ("I'd have more in common with Khrushchev — at least he was consistent!"). She opposes hippies, but also opposes the draft. She hates Women's Liberation but defends abortion. She's also against welfare, ecology, forced taxation and modern art. In brief, she represents individuality and originality vs. convention and conformity.

"To me, the ideal society is one which recognizes individual rights. There is no such thing as collective rights. The government of a proper free country cannot initiate the use of force against its citizens. It can only exist to protect its citizens from violence. The moral obligation of each man is to live his own life guided by reason. The mind is man's tool of acquiring knowledge and dealing with reality. No man has the right to initiate the use of physical force against another man. I am a man worshiper in an age that specializes in degrading man."

"No such thing as collective rights."

All of which leads to attack from both left-wing liberals and right-wing intellectuals. She gets it from every side.

"Never a dull moment," sighs her husband. "I don't care," says Ayn Rand. "I stand alone. My rules for TV talk shows are no editing, no quotations from my enemies, and I must be alone, not in a debate. I don't give free publicity to my enemies. You can disagree with me all you like, but it must be polite. Anyone is free to criticize me, but not with my help. The same is true with my play. I do not expect any help from critics. I do not depend on their verdicts. I believe in myself when the dominant emotions of this age are fear and doubt. An exalted view of self-esteem; you have to work for it. This is my play at last, after 38 years. I don't mind being panned, if it's me being panned — and not a straw woman."

And that's Objectivism. □

School that's always open

By HELEN GRAHAM

Roberto Alvarez is 11 years old. His father came from Mexico as a young man lured by tales of rich harvests and high pay for farm labor in California. The family has lived in Texas and California almost all of Roberto's life, in neighborhoods where Spanish is often spoken more than English. They move around a lot. His mother, with seven other children, was never able to get away from home long enough to learn to read and write English or complete her citizenship requirements.

In the first grade Roberto had an Anglo teacher who didn't speak Spanish and yelled at him for "cheating" when he tried to get help from a friend on some arithmetic. Roberto was frightened and ashamed. At home people were supposed to help each other. Copying was not "cheating" but sharing. Ever since then Robert has seemed sullen.

dull and unresponsive to his teachers who put him in the slowest groups, even though he now has a weekly paper route and can handle making change easily. Of course, they don't know it, but Roberto is already a skilled bicycle mechanic, salvaging and repairing old bikes for himself and his friends.

He says he hates school, and last year he, along with a gang of other "slow learners," smashed a couple of windows in the school one night, just to prove they were smart enough not to get caught. He has been in and out of 10 schools so far, as his family moves about with the harvest schedule. His attendance is spotty at best and learning is an uphill battle. Roberto hears about "Chicano power" from his big brothers and is beginning to respond to the hate talk and heroics, eager to make his mark in the Chicano struggle for identity.

In the same classroom Edward Sykes sits in daily boredom, gradually withdrawing into a dream world where his creative mind feeds only upon itself. His dad is a milkman who works every Saturday and Sunday evenings, having Wednesdays off instead. Ed watches the other guys go to ball games with their fathers and on week-end camping trips with the family, but his dad is only home when Ed is in school!

School — what a drag! He's already read most of the good books in the classroom library, and in every subject he slumps detached and listless while the teacher tries frantically to keep Roberto's slow group in their seats during reading. No one has time for Ed, and they won't unless he makes trouble. Teachers have too many urgent demands upon their attention to waste it on "good" students. And when his teacher sends him on made-up errands because he's been finished with his science reading for half an hour, the kids call him teacher's pet.

In his mind, though, Ed is a playwright, a naturalist, a great scientist. And he might begin to become one if only he weren't trapped in the dullsville of public school for the next six years of his life. Meanwhile his light grows dimmer and his life more lonely.

Amy Robbins is in the same class. Her mother wouldn't be caught dead in a PTA meeting and always finds some excuse not to show up for teacher conferences. It's not so much Amy as her big sister's situation that makes this tortured mother shy away from any contact with school. Mrs. Robbins was called at the beauty shop where she works and embarrassed almost to tears by the school vice-principal's demands for answers as to why 12-year-old Ruth was truant, was misbehaving in class, was failing, was rude to her teacher. Why didn't Mrs. Robbins make her daughter mind? Why wasn't Ruth more polite? Couldn't Mrs. Robbins see that Ruth did her homework? Ruth really should be "put back" until she learned to behave and to use her time in school better!

Mrs. Robbins is a widow, victim of a bad marriage and a bitter divorce. She is trying hard to stay off "aid" by working long hours, coming home late — tired and defeated. She is lonely. Boyfriends for women her age are rare — and certainly not interested in sharing problems of her preteen children. Her neighbors all seem so successful as parents, but then none of them is really close enough to talk to. So she lives in quiet desperation, suffering Ruth's increasingly uncontrollable tyrannies, while little Amy begs in vain to have her mother come to school to see the poster she made and meet wonderful Mr. Smith, the teacher Amy loves so crushingly.

Marge Burns is a fifth grade teacher. That is she would be, if there weren't so little money in the school district, so many kids in her school, and so few teachers hired to handle them. As it is she must try to ride herd on a combined fourth and fifth grade, ages 9 through 11. But in the abilities she must span, Marge is back in the one-room school house of 70 years ago. She must try to reach Tommy who can't yet write his name (perhaps, she suspects, because he sees it "drawk-cab"); Joan who still sucks her thumb and cries when she is asked to spell a word; Martin, who is still a non-reader at 12 and has to prove himself by a loud vocabulary of four-letter invectives and by "beating up on" everyone including Marge one particularly frantic day! Then there are five kids who are really at third grade level who still have to learn addition facts, while the "bright" group in the next row are ready to tackle compound fractions. Marge tries to run four separate reading groups ranging from non-reader level to Edward, who already reads junior high school material. In all she has 34 children's minds in her care.

Like most of her colleagues Marge is currently torn between two educational philosophies. Some days she tries very hard to be the permissive, open, warm teacher who makes learning joyous and without tensions or fears.

"Push back the chairs! Break out of the lock step and dare to be a loving, sensitive person, and children will respond without so many rules!" is the siren song of modern education.

But, of course, it doesn't always work since children can swarm as instinctively as bees if a lesson plan falters or her patience frays. It is then she reverts guiltily to the old "Sit down! Keep still! Or-stay-after-school!" routine that is blamed for putting education in a straight jacket, though it often seems to keep the teacher out of one.

It's on days like this that she longs to take a few days rest from the constant clamor of little voices with big needs. But if she does take off she must pretend to be "sick," so that the much needed day of rest is bought at the expense of her dignity and honesty. She'd love to go skiing for a week in midwinter too, but there is no way to shift vacation time from the long summer's mandatory respite without its costing her a salary cut she can't afford.

Elliot's problem is that he hates crowds, is thoroughly depressed at the almost ghetto-like conditions of our national parks and state recreational facilities. In this he is joined by the U.S. Forest Service and alarmed ecologists. He wants to take his family on a Yosemite fishing trip in October when the crowds have dissolved and the fish are biting again. But he can't, of course, even though in his business October is a slack month and would be ideal. Reason: He has three kids in school, anchoring the family to summer spawn of tourists in Southern California recreational areas.

All of these people have one thing in common. For them, something about school is uncomfortable and unyielding. It needs to be changed.

And here is where our story really begins. There is an elementary school in Hawaiian Gardens, which is actually tackling such problems as Roberto, Edward, Amy, teacher Marge and taxpayer Elliot represent. It is Venn W. Furgeson School, already cited as one of the 10 outstanding elementary schools in the nation and currently a showcase for innovative educational approaches.

Founding principal Robert Beall, current principal Jesus Lopez and an expanding staff of turned-on teachers are joined in a challenge to make their school the best possible educational operation — whatever the handicaps.

The student population of 675 are the only kids in Southern California who can schedule a family vacation any time during the year, since Furgeson School is open all 12 months including voluntary attendance during summer, Christmas and Easter holidays. All they have to do is fill out a card saying when they will be out of school, then make up the time during intersession — from a minimum of 175 days a year up to a voluntary maximum of 234 days. The child and his parents decide when he is to come to school.

This is made possible by Furgeson's unique set of records of each child's "concept levels," a series of rungs on a learning ladder showing accurately by test just what he needs to learn next in each skill. There are 160 rungs in the reading ladder from kindergarten through sixth grade and 100 in mathematics, for instance. When he re-enters school, he simply picks up where he left off, in a different group at the same level.

Thus if Dad is only home on a weekday, school needn't split up the family. Let Edward stay home on Wednesdays to share his dad's companionship. He can make up those days in intercession. And if the fishing is better in October and the off-season rates more advantageous in May, or someone wants to go skiing in February, fine. Kids and teachers can take advantage of the best times of the year to take that vacation from the classroom.

By now the astute reader is bristling with questions like: Why won't the student lose out, be put back another grade? How can he make up what he missed? What does this do to a solid educational pattern when kids and teachers can take vacations whenever they choose?

To answer this we need to look at the background of Furgeson since its innovative plan was born to meet pressing needs for:

- Flexible learning schedules since Hawaiian Gardens may have as many as 65 per cent of the families in that neighborhood moving in or out of school in a year's time.

- A sensitive support for parents like Amy's, who have been overwhelmed by their children's difficulties in school and harrassed instead of helped by school officials.

- A program that allows bright or slow children to move at their own rate of growth, unfettered by failure or boredom.

- A program that involves parents positively in their own as well as their children's education.

- A school atmosphere in which learning is fun and vandalism is no longer an expression of community hostility.

To gain these goals Furgeson found it necessary to kick down three fences. First the staff had to break out of the traditions in education which no longer work in a changing community. At Furgeson, first through sixth grade levels no longer worked, serving to embarrass the slow and impede the faster students. So Furgeson became an ungraded, open plan where a child's age becomes secondary, and he is placed according to what he needs to learn next.

Second, the school adopted a 12-month schedule, staying open for voluntary attendance the extra three months to allow for flexible vacations at the option of children's families and teachers.

Third, the ungraded, open format and the all-year calendar were dependent on parent support. Achieving this was the next step in revolutionizing the school program.

Thus Furgeson had to sell education, make it interesting and fun for parents as well as children. In the process it found itself developing a new concept of school as a community meeting place where people could enjoy each other in programs that use the rich resources of their own neighbors. School aides, some paid, some volunteers, began to feed in from parents and community ranks, helping small classes become more effective and sharing the insider's excitement of the children's achievement.

Classes for adults sprang up, since the ABC School District had some funds for this. Classes in Mexican cookery gave people like Mrs. Alvarez a chance to share their savvy with Anglo neighbors. She could learn English as a second language in the evening. Photography, sewing, macrame and cake decorating bloomed as adults in the and children be-

CARPET PADDING is not something some shrewd carpet salesman thought up once upon a time, to "pad out" a sale. The pad is an important part of any carpet purchase. It can go a long way toward adding to your satisfaction in any carpet.

The pad adds "thickness" to the carpeted area, a feeling of resiliency underfoot. It contributes extra warmth and comfort. But aside from that, the right pad adds immeasurably to the wear a carpet will give. Laid over bare floors without padding, even the finest carpet will show wear more quickly.

The oldest and least expensive padding is felt type, and it will do a serviceable job where budget is especially important. Rubberized felt is one of the most enduringly popular pads, since it adds extra bounce and resiliency to the wearing qualities of the felt. And for extra softness and luxury underfoot, sponge padding, usually in a "waffle" design, is increasingly popular.

Usually a good padding will last as long or longer than the carpet installed over it. It costs little, and gives you a lot of extra value.

Helping you choose wisely at every stage of your carpet selection, from color to texture to padding and expert installation, is our business. Bring us your room sizes . . . or call to have one of our carpet consultants show you samples in your home.

came absorbed in creating. Popular "behavior modification" taught by the school psychologist helped parents cope with junior's homework and room cleaning chores without nagging. (And people like Amy's mother could find help and compassion in their parental agonies.) Teacher Edith Gates volunteered to take whole families in school buses to enjoy some of the free sights and experiences Southern California offers its adventurers — Huntington Library, Descanso Gardens, the La Brea tar pits, J. Paul Getty's house. All this togetherness pays off on the street corners when Hawaiian Gardens has its annual parade, as parents, teachers and neighbors join to cheer the 87-piece Furguson marching band.

The atmosphere at Furguson is relaxed, which means that whimsy and fun poke through the stereotypes of what a school should be. For instance, the school's small library has a big poster on the door showing the arms of a child hugging a huge book which says, "Grab Me, Read Me, Love Me!" And across the way spooky eyes peer out of a sign that says, "The Cavern," which adds a bit of pizzazz to the supply room.

The school is built on the new "pod" plan, which makes one huge square of space partitionable into many kinds of learning areas for varying sizes of groups. There are no corridors with separate doors and walls for each room, but carpeted mini-living rooms with desks and movable chalk boards.

In one pod children are singing Simon and Garfunkle's "Feelin' Groovy," gathered around the young teacher's guitar. In another kids are beginning a cardboard and yarn weaving craft, while across from them a huge U.S. map out-

You Can Have One

Owning a Revcon 250 or Revcon 220 only sounds impossible. For one thing, there's a good demand for used motor homes in top condition. And because a Revcon is such a sound long term investment, seven-year bank financing has become routine. Come on in for a Revcon demonstration. We promise you a revelation. Front wheel drive with Oldsmobile Toronado V-8 power to spare. Safe, light, sturdy aluminum construction. Every creature comfort conceivable. Fully equipped for under $24,000. Air high. There will never be a better time to buy the motor home you really want!

line, tacked to a partition, is being painted by careful, businesslike children. A few feet away proud pupils share the cage and feeding chores for Smirkey the rat and 12 babies while they worry about how to teach the guinea pig not to bite. It is homeroom time, and children are grouped with their age peers and core teacher. Later some will move to reading, science or math groups where ages will not matter, only the next concept level they want to achieve. It isn't too noisy, for there is no pushing, no tension, no fear of being left out.

These are friendly, relaxed people, children and adults, doing something interesting together in an atmosphere that would make spitballs and shouting matches and "sit-down-shut-up-or-stay-in" seem strange and foreign. One gets the feeling here that everyone is rowing in the same boat, and they all enjoy the trip.

Does all this tend to water down the basics of education...the reading, writing, and arithmetic skills upon which successful adulthood is built in this country? No. Recent tests show Furgeson (even with its transient, culturally conflicting student body) has growth rates comparable and often superior to "regular" school. And, of course, Furgeson kids can have up to 234 days of education a year, if they choose, where regulars get only 176.

Too good to believe? Keep doubting. Your doubts are shared by many, including Furgeson's teachers, who keep trying new improvements. Those doubts may lead us to even better solutions to the problems that concern all of us. Furgeson is only one of many schools experimenting toward making education the joyful and humane adventure it can be.

Kelly's restaurant in Naples is bound to have at least one way Make this comment today: "Hey, what happened to your sign out front? Is that some kind of an April Fool joke?"

The management, headed by friendly, good-natured Bill Thompson, is quite patient about that kind of humor prompted by the way it spells Kelly's with a backward K. "We flipped it over as sort of an attention-getter," explains Bill, "so we can't blame people too much if they like to kid around about it."

There is nothing backward, however, about the quality of the cuisine at Kelly's, 5716 E. Second St., a handsome, green-accented establishment which attracts a clientele knowledgeable about the arts of fine dining. Kelly's has two of the finest chefs in town, Milena Hladikova and Frank Rossi. They turn out the most exquisite fare, offering rich, original creations unavailable elsewhere.

Priced from $3.75 to over $6 are the daily specials and such beautiful entrees as trout stuffed with crab and shrimp, medallions of beef filet in a mushroom-wine sauce, piatto Romano Rossi (sirloin steak with ham, eggplant, cheese and a burgundy sauce), stuffed premium abalone, a glorious one-pound T-bone steak, other splendid steaks, thick and luscious prime rib au jus and the steak-shrimp combination.

The specials are German sauerbraten on Tuesdays, $3.75; Irish stew on Wednesdays, $3.75; and handsome corned beef and cabbage on Thursdays, $4. All entrees are with imaginative appetizers, superb soup and salad, potatoes in a variety of styles, sourdough bread and beverage.

Closed Mondays, Kelly's serves Sundays starting at 2 p.m. and the rest of the time from 4 p.m. on. Bill and his staff make a festive occasion out of birthdays, serving complimentary cake presented by a quartet of waiters warbling "happy birthday. . ." Bill usually accompanies them on the harmonica. He doesn't claim to be a virtuoso, but he has plenty of spirit.

Kelly's has a delightful recipe for Irish Coffee and also features flaming cherries jubilee.

GUIDE

SPARKLING CRYSTAL, silver and white linen service....waiters who work in teams at carts with flaming burners....and superlative continental dishes prepared to individual order.

Those are some of the qualities of dining at Lombardo's, a distinguished epicurean house in the Fidelity Federal Plaza on Linden Avenue half a block north of E. Ocean Boulevard. Owned by tall, broad-shouldered Len Lombardo, the restaurant has a charming old world decor which gives its guests the impression of visiting a beautiful residence in France or Italy.

Lombardo's is not a quick inand-out operation. It offers dining in a leisurely mood, catering to patrons who understand that it takes time to prepare its special entrees. The waiters and captains are alert and attentive as well as friendly; they are never guilty of rushing a dinner to its conclusion.

Open every day, Lombardo's serves dinner starting at 6 p.m. and offers luncheons Monday through Friday. Each night, blackboard specials are featured as well as numerous entrees on the regular menu. The specials are written in chalk on small blackboards carried to the tables, a tradition familiar to restaurant-goers in Europe. Priced from $5 and up, the specials emphasize fresh entrees which happen to be in season, as well as those which permit the chef to display his original skills with seafoods, premium veal dishes and others with delectable rich sauces.

Lombardo's is an a la carte establishment. The entrees are presented with "appropriate vegetables" (usually two) and a basket of hot French bread. Modest charges are made for soup du jour, a dinner salad or a special dessert. Specialty soups include French onion gratinee, vichyssoise and stracciatella alla romano consisting of spinach and egg drops in broth. Half a dozen interesting salad choices are offered as well as novel desserts.

The regular menu emphasizes tourmados maison, scampi Lombardo, filet of sole marguery or veronique, flaming pepper steak, double French lamb chops and steaks with bearnaise sauce.

Q. A recent issue of "The New Republic," which I understand is a liberal periodical in your country, carries these sentences: "What has happened recently is the surfacing of a new and venomous attitude in the White House. These people hate what they call the liberal, elitist, Ivy League press. They hate it for disparaging Nixon and the ad-man mentality of his advisers. They hate it as an unsympathetic, alien excrescence." Strong words, you'll agree. Do they hit the mark?—Donald Strachey, Knightsbridge, London.

A. Surely the Nixon Administration does not love or admire the press. When Nixon was defeated for Governor of California in 1962, he told newsmen who covered his campaign, "I know you're all delighted." At a recent press conference about the cease-fire in Vietnam, he told the White House press corps that he knew many of them would "gag" on his expression, "peace with honor."

What one must remember about Nixon is that when he was graduated from the Duke University Law School in 1937, after years of struggle, poverty, work and borrowing from relatives, he was rejected by the leading Eastern Establishment law firms. He could not get a job with the FBI or other government agencies. A proud and sensitive young man, he was deeply hurt by this rejection. Like all politicians, he favors information that makes him look good, dislikes those who disseminate information that makes him look bad. Combative by nature, he has become at age 60 a more tolerant, understanding man. He has, however, attracted to his side, men who are overzealous in their attempt to prove their loyalty to him. Some of these men do not understand the role of the press in reporting news both good and bad. They seek to control it.

Q. I understand that of all the films he's starred in, Paul Newman likes WUSA best. Has WUSA been released in the United States? — Charlotte Sharpe, Fullerton, Calif.
A. In WUSA, Paul Newman plays a disc jockey who works willingly for a corrupt radio station with the call letters WUSA. Also in the cast are Joanne Woodward, Anthony Perkins and Laurence Harvey. The film was released domestically last year and proved a box-office disaster. Says Newman of it: "The most important film I've ever made was killed by right-wing businessmen, biased critics and audiences who received it like a bunch of ostriches."

PAUL NEWMAN &
JOANNE WOODWARD

Q. Has the United States stopped conducting nuclear weapons tests?—Dennis Fuller, Salem, Mass.

A. It has not. We conducted seven last year while the Soviet Union carried out 14—all underground.

Q. Is Liza Minnelli going to star in a motion picture biography of her mother called The Judy Garland Story? Is her father, Vincente Minnelli, going to direct it?—Barbara Haines, Goldsboro, N.C.

A. Liza has had discussions with her father, Ben Vincente Minnelli, who plans to produce and direct such a film. He was Judy Garland's second husband. Liza's first reaction was to decline to star in the production, but reportedly her young lover, Desi Arnaz Jr., convinced her that she was the only one who could do her mother justice on the screen.

Q. Why was former Treasury Secretary John Connally elected to the Board of Directors of Pan American Airways? Is it not because Connally bailed out Lockheed from potential bankruptcy and Pan Am expects him to do the same for it?—Richard Franklin, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. When Connally was Secretary of the Treasury he approved a $250 million subsidy for Lockheed Aircraft. He is not Secretary of the Treasury now. Even if he is appointed Secretary of State, a possibility in the future, he most probably would resign his Pan Am directorship.

Q. What's happened to the baby son Patty Duke had by Desi Arnaz Jr.? Has she really given it out for adoption?—Claire Ellis, Madison, Wis.

A. No, the baby, Sean, has been adopted by Patty's husband, actor John Astin.

Q. Denmark's former Prime Minister, Jens Otto Krag, had the most beautiful wife of any prime minister, actress Helle Krag. Is it true that their marriage is ending because Krag objected to his wife playing a dockside prostitute?—Ann Peterson, St. Paul, Minn.

A. Jens Otto Krag, 58, who resigned from office last October for private reasons and also quit politics, refuses to discuss the impending divorce from his wife, Helle. Last summer Mrs. Krag, long admired for her tact and beauty, returned to the stage with outstanding success, using her maiden name, Helle Virkner. In one drama she played a prostitute, but the role had little to do with the marital rift. In 1959 when Krag was Prime Minister, they eloped to the South of France. They have two children. Krag's first marriage in 1950 to Swedish actress, Birgit Tengroth, ended in divorce in 1952.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: ROBERT WAGNER AND WIFE NATALIE WOOD

Q. Wasn't Natalie Wood offered the lead role in The Great Gatsby before Mia Farrow?—Angie Utria, Jersey City, N.J.

A. According to director Jack Clayton in charge of remaking The Great Gatsby, produced in 1949 with Alan Ladd and Betty Field and a box-office flop, "My first choice for the part, after Ali MacGraw turned it down, was Natalie Wood. She insisted, however, that she would play the role only if her husband, Robert Wagner, was in the film, too."

Q. What's happened to Bobbie Gentry's sizzling romance with that 21-year-old boy, Jericho James?—Wynn Evans, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Bobbie Gentry decided that Jericho James, 21, rock 'n' roll singer, belonged neither in her nightclub act nor in her life. She therefore dismissed him. Previously she was married to Bill Harrah, 60, multi-millionaire Nevada gambling impresario.

Q. Is it a fact that Prime Minister Tanaka of Japan owns the leading Japanese restaurant in Los Angeles?—K. Nozaki, Pasadena, Calif.

A. Tanaka owns 1000 shares of the Yamato Corporation, a sukiyaki restaurant in the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles. He paid $10,000 for his interest. Seven others invested equal amounts in the eatery.

Q. Who is the plastic surgeon who reconstructed Ann-Margret's face after her fall on that Las Vegas stage? I also understand he does face lifts for the screen colony.—Mavis Pollack, Des Moines, Iowa

A. Most probably you have reference to Dr. Franklin Ashley of UCLA Hospital, West Los Angeles, Calif.

Q. Can you tell me why Jerry Lewis was such a flop when he played before blacks in Johannesburg, South Africa, last year?—Nevi Jones, Tupelo, Miss.

A. Lewis' brand of humor is apparently not popular with blacks. After performing to segregated audiences in Johannesburg, Lewis was scheduled to perform before Africans in Soweto, South Africa's giant black urban complex in Johannesburg. Though close to one million blacks live in Soweto, practically none showed up at the stadium where Lewis and his troupe were scheduled to perform. After waiting an hour, Jerry and his cast returned to their hotel in downtown, white Johannesburg.

GOV. AND MRS. RONALD REAGAN

Q. Is it true that Ronald Reagan, Governor of California, has become one of the major real estate speculators in his state?—T.R., Tucson, Ariz.

A. What is true is that Reagan plans to divide his 771-acre ranch near Temecula, Calif., into separate parcels. Reagan bought the Rancho California property in 1968 for $181,950 at which time he announced plans to establish a large ranch. Since then he has changed his mind and will sell the separate parcels which undoubtedly will bring more than $181,950. At the same time the County Planning Commission in Riverside approved Reagan's sale plan, it also approved dividing 281 acres at Rancho California owned by Reagan's attorney and close adviser, William French Smith of the Los Angeles law firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher.

He Meets With Nixon Tomorrow President Thieu of South

by Lloyd Shearer

Thieu, wife and son at dedication of hospital wing. Boy is on vacation from school in Switzerland where most rich South Vietnamese send sons.

President Nguyen Van Thieu and Mrs. Thieu at recent wedding of their daughter at Saigon cathedral. Archbishop officiates at Catholic ceremony.

Several weeks ago when Vice President Spiro Agnew was vacationing in Palm Springs, sunning himself in Frank Sinatra's sumptuous desert compound, he took time out to address the Lincoln Club of Orange County.

This little-known club consists of 124 carefully screened members who have raised millions of dollars for President Nixon's political campaign. Among them are Arnold O. Beckman, head of Beckman Instruments; C. Amholt Smith, the San Diego financier who owns the United States National Bank, the San Diego Padres baseball team, a fleet of taxi companies, insurance corporations, and much more; Clement Hirsch, the food processor and racehorse-owner, and other multimillionaires.

The Lincoln Club's headquarters consists of a post office box in Fullerton, Calif., and its titular president is Arnold Beckman, the philanthropist who has contributed millions to the California Institute of Technology, but its actual director is Herbert Kalmbach, President Nixon's personal lawyer and one of his chief political fund-raisers.

Kalmbach, 51, who heads the law firm of Kalmbach, Demarco, Knapp & Chillingworth, with offices in Newport and Los Angeles, hides from the press these days, because he was involved in financing the political sabotage ventures of the 1972 Presidential campaign. And he avoids reporters as one does leprosy.

Agnew's view of Thieu

On Feb. 12, Vice President Agnew addressed the Lincoln Club in what "The Los Angeles Times" described as a "secrecy-shrouded speech."

In this speech, Agnew heaped praise on South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu and described him as "a distinguished man, he is a decent man, he is a man of tremendous patriotism for his country; he is a scholar."

The Vice President pointed out that Thieu is scheduled to fly into San Clemente to meet [tomorrow] with President Nixon. "I hope," he added, "you'll have a chance to find out how absolutely outrageous the stories that have been passed about him as a callous dictator really are."

The Vice President has been to Saigon several times. He is a lawyer, having attended night classes at Baltimore Law School, and earned his law degree in 1947. Reportedly he is a good judge of character, and his opinion of 50-year-old Thieu is worthy of consideration.

On the other hand, there are veteran journalists, diplomats and students who insist that Thieu's scholarship could fit into the eye of a needle—apparently Thieu was never graduated from high school—and that Thieu is a ruthless, ambitious, cunning military dictator who will never again want for a dollar. They hold that the major reason the U.S. supports him is because he is anti-Communist and not the "tremendous" patriot Agnew describes.

Youngest of five sons

The truth about Nguyen Van Thieu (his name means "one who ascends") is that in the Vietnamese melange he has fought at various times on all sides. The youngest of five sons of a poverty-stricken fisherman, he fought in 1945 for Ho Chi Minh, leader of the Vietminh, a national liberation force, determined to extricate Vietnam from French colonial domination. As a member of the Vietminh, Thieu rose rapidly to become a district chief, until a year later he decided that the Vietminh were Communists, and that he should switch sides and go over to the French.

This he did, enrolling in the Vietnamese National Military Academy at Dalat which the French had established to train officers to fight the Vietminh. Thieu was a member of the first graduating class, obtaining his second lieutenant's commission in 1949. Many of his classmates later became officers in the Vietminh, determined to win independence for Vietnam from France. But not Thieu. He decided to remain with and fight for the French.

As an infantry platoon commander, he was known most for his caution, his smoothness, his ability to survive. In 1951 he married Nguyen Thi Mai Anh, daughter of the most prosperous physician in My Tho, a city in the Mekong Delta, then converted from Buddhism to his wife's Catholic religion.

When Ho Chi Minh and the Vietminh defeated the French in 1954 at Dien Bien Phu, Thieu remained with the Army of the Republic of Vietnam in the South, maneuvered himself into the superintendency of the National Military Academy at Dalat for four years, gaining the loyalty of the cadets, many of whom are now the top-ranking officers in the South Vietnamese army and Thieu's most avid supporters.

Not many Americans know it, but Thieu was sent twice to the United States for military training, first in 1957 to the U.S. Army's Command and General Staff College in Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and again in 1960 for modern weapons training at Fort Bliss, Tex.

In 1962, convinced that he could trust Thieu, Diem, then leader of South Vietnam, appointed Thieu commander of the Fifth Infantry Division at Bien-hoa, just north of Saigon, to put down any attempt to overthrow the Diem regime.

One year later when Thieu learned that the U.S. backers of Diem, including the CIA, had become disenchanted with Diem's repressive policies, Thieu, along with several other military leaders, plotted Diem's overthrow. On Nov. 1, 1963, Thieu personally led the attack on the barracks of the Presidential bodyguard and President Diem was killed.

Convinces U.S. he's best

In the ten governments which followed the assassination of Diem, Thieu not only survived, he convinced the American authorities in Saigon that he was the best candidate to run South Vietnam.

For years it has been a basic tenet of U.S. foreign policy that given the choice between a Communist leader, however benign, nationalist or Tito-like, and an anti-Communist, however Fascist, dictatorial, or murderous, the U.S. traditionally chooses the anti-Communist.

In the American lexicon, a Communist is still equated with the devil, and Communism remains the most sinful, heinous form of government devised by man.

By negotiating with Leonid Brezhnev of the Soviet Union and Mao Tse-tung of China, President Nixon is gradually changing that image, but it is so deeply rooted in the American psyche that it will persist for years.

Banks on U.S. support

Nguyen Van Thieu is aware of this and regularly takes advantage of the fact. He feels certain that no matter how great his excesses, how corrupt his regime, the U.S. will support him, indefinitely, if not with men, then surely with money and material. For how many times has President Nixon declared that our reason for spending 55,000 American lives, 300,000 wounded and $200 billion in Vietnam was to prevent a Communist takeover of South Vietnam?

If one wants some indication of Thieu's true character, one need not go beyond his handling of the Dzu case.

In 1967 Truong Dinh Dzu, a prominent Saigon lawyer, ran against General Thieu in the Presidential election in South Vietnam. Dzu ran on a peace ticket and advocated an eventual coalition government. He polled about 17 percent of the vote and in many provinces did better than Thieu.

Arrests his rival

When Thieu won the Presidency, he promptly had his rival candidate arrested, tried by a military court and thrown into jail for five years on a charge that Dzu advocated a coalition and therefore undermined the security of the nation.

On May 1, 1972, when Truong Dinh Dzu was scheduled for release, the director of the Chi Hoa Prison in Saigon took him out of his cell, had him sign his release papers, and said to Dzu, "You will be free within a few hours. All that is necessary is for President Thieu to okay these papers."

Since May 1, Thieu has refused to do anything of the sort. He knows that Dzu is capable of heading a neutralist block, that Dzu has a wide following throughout the country, that Dzu is a potential political rival. He therefore keeps him in jail.

He does the same thing to Tran Ngoc Chau, who used to work for the CIA, and was imprisoned by Thieu because Chau met with his brother who happens to be a member of the NLF, the National Liberation Front. A similar situation obtains in the case of Madame Ngo Ba Thanh, a well-known Saigonese lawyer imprisoned for so-called activism inimical to the state.

Is a Hitler necessary?

Marshal Ky who was once top dog in South Vietnam said several years ago that what his country needed was another Adolf Hitler.

Nguyen Van Thieu certainly does not fall into that category, but his endless incarceration of his political rivals is surely Hitlerian and reveals a telling facet of his character.

In truth he is not the "distinguished man . . . of tremendous patriotism" or "the scholar" Agnew portrays, nor is he the corrupt, venal, treacherous, military dictator his enemies depict. He is a "survivor" who depends for survival on open-ended American donations of money and material, which is why he is coming to the United States.

If we do not continue to channel these through him, to support him against both the Communist and the non-Communist opposition in his country, so that he can win a resounding victory when the time comes for the election of a postwar government, Thieu will surely put out the word that the U.S. is abandoning his small nation to the Communists in the hour of its most dire need.

Nguyen Van Thieu believes he has us over a barrel. And in a way he does, for however we help the South Vietnamese, invariably our intervention will favor one political faction over another. Understandably, Thieu wants us to favor him, to lay the money in his hands. In South Vietnam he will take care of the rest.

Dzu's daughter Monique is wed to Los Angeles lawyer Dan Miller and teaches French in Fullerton, Calif. Her South Vietnamese passport has been revoked.

The Danger of Glass Doors

The thousands of Americans who fall through glass doors and shower stalls don't have to die. They don't even have to be seriously injured.

The answer is safety glass. Its installation could prevent many of the more than 225,000 deaths and injuries suffered every year. About 40 percent of those involved in the home glass accidents are under age 15; about 70 percent are under 25.

In at least 20 states the law requires that new homes be built with safety glass where accidents are likely. Likewise, the small number of homes now built with FHA loans also must have safety glass in certain areas. But most houses were built before these regulations went into effect, and so glass accidents continue to kill and maim Americans.

In Framingham, Mass., for instance, a 19-year-old youth bled to death en route to a hospital after falling through a glass door, last New Year's Eve. Ironically, the Massachusetts law requiring safety glass became effective the next day, Jan. 1.

Recent laws

In Winfield, Iowa, a 6-year-old boy died and his 10-year-old brother was injured in a glass storm-door accident. The younger boy died in a hospital after playing in the kitchen and falling through the door. The brother ran to alert the parents but slipped on the broken glass and cut an artery. Iowa law does not require safety glass in private houses.

Most of the state laws requiring safety glass in new dwellings have been passed since 1969. The number of accidents has gone down, but there are still too many.

Four types

Many of the states which do require safety glass modeled their laws on a bill drafted by the Consumer Safety Glazing Committee, composed primarily of glass and construction industry representatives. Their president, James Meckel, a glass manufacturing official, says his group cannot prevent children's falling into glass doors but can encourage people to install glass that will not break when youngsters bump it.

There are four types of safety glass:

Tempered glass. This glass is made to order in specific sizes. However, many storm doors, patio doors and other installations come in standard sizes for which glass is readily available from glass dealers. When tempered glass breaks, it disintegrates into small, rounded pieces which look like rock salt. Tempered glass is ordinarily used for automobile side and rear windows.

If broken, the glass will generally adhere to the wire.

Rigid plastic. Plexiglass is a common version of this material which seems like glass in many ways. It is not as hard as glass and may be more dif-

Committee says the cost of installing tempered glass in a house with two baths, two storm doors and a sliding patio door is less than $50 more than regular glass.

Until a home can be fitted with safety glass, however, there are other ways to make accidents less likely. They are no substitutes for safety glass.

A warning

- Decorate with decals at eye level all sliding doors to make the closed door readily visible. The decals may keep someone from racing through the door. Don't forget to put decals at the eye level of children, too.
- Place decals on the fixed panel next to a sliding glass door, or place a large planter or piece of furniture in front of it, to prevent someone's trying to walk through it.
- Try to ensure that children and grownups won't slip and fall through glass panels. Keep scatter rugs, toys, and wet bars of soap off the floor. In the bathtub use a mat or adhesive strips to make footing more secure.

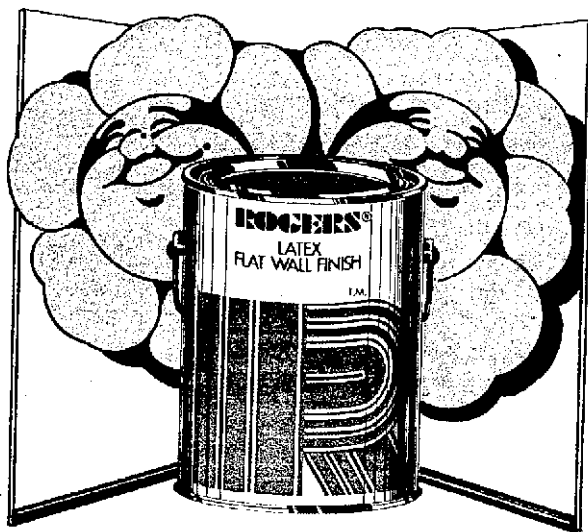

No horseplay

- Discipline children not to play rough near glass panels.

These steps are not as effective as safety glass. Nor are push bars. The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare says "Push bars . . . do not prevent accidental human impacts from being delivered to the glass, and when the body breaks through the glass, the bars trap the victim . . . and additional injuries are inflicted by the falling glass."

GOOD LAW Starting this month garages in Sweden must guarantee all repair work for 3125 miles or three months, whichever comes first. We certainly could use that law in this country.

THE TRUTH ABOUT WELFARE

In a recent "Memo From COPE," a publication of the Committee on Political Education of the AFL-CIO, 10 key facts were printed to dispel the myths which have grown up in this country concerning welfare.

Herewith from COPE the fact sheet on "Welfare: Everybody's Whipping Boy":

Fact No. 1 -- People wind up on welfare not because they are cheats, loafers or malingers, but because they are poor. They are not just poor in money, but in everything. They've had poor education, poor health care, poor chances at decent employment and poor prospects for anything better.

Fact No. 2 -- But even most of the poor are not on welfare. Some 15 million Americans receive some form of welfare benefits. There are more than 25 million officially below the poverty level of $4000 a year for a family of four. Another 30-50 million are just barely above it. And $4000 a year, as everyone knows, does not afford extravagance.

Fact No. 3 -- Of the 15 million receiving welfare, about eight million are children under 16 years of age.

Fact No. 4 -- Less than one percent -- about 150,000 -- of the welfare recipients are able-bodied employable males. Many of these are in their late-middle years. Most are uneducated. All are required by law to sign up for work or work training. A government study shows more than 80 percent want to work, rather than draw welfare, and among the fathers in this group one in three is enrolled in work training.

Fact No. 5 -- Apart from children and the relative handful of potential employables, on welfare are more than two million aged, more than one million totally and permanently disabled or blind, three million mothers. All of these are in programs roughly supported 50-50 by state and federal funds. Another group of less than one million is aided by state and local non-federally supported programs. These are single adults and childless couples, most of whom work full time but are paid less than they would be on welfare. These are the working poor.

Fact No. 6 -- No one is getting rich on welfare. It allows, at best, bare-bone living. In no state does the average welfare payment bring a family up to poverty level. Maximum payments for a family of four range from $700 a year in Mississippi to $3600+ in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Thirty-nine states pay less than their own established standard of need...

Fact No. 7 -- Cheating and fraud in welfare are minimal. There is, of course, some cheating and dishonesty among welfare clients. Try to imagine any program involving 15 million persons that is entirely free of fraud. But the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare estimates there is cheating among fewer than one percent of welfare cases. Add to this another two to three percent on the rolls due to misunderstanding or technical-bureaucratic error, and there is an upper range of four to five percent receiving benefits who are either completely or partially ineligible. It is likely that this range of cheating, plus error, exists in income tax payments of citizens and in many other areas of activity...

Fact No. 8 -- Welfare mothers are not churning out illegitimate children. Nearly 70 percent of all children in welfare families are legitimate, according to the Social and Rehabilitation Service of HEW. Thirty percent of welfare families with any children have only one child; 25 percent have two; 18 percent have three. The remainder have four or more...

Fact No. 9 -- More than 48 percent of welfare families are white; about 43 percent are black. Most of the remaining are American Indians, Orientals and other racial minorities. The reasons for the high percentage of blacks are self-evident; more than 34 percent of the blacks in the U.S. have incomes below the poverty level, compared to 13 percent of the white population.

Fact No. 10 -- There is no evidence to sustain the belief that welfare is necessarily habit-forming, that is that "once on welfare, always on welfare." Half the families on welfare have been on the rolls 20 months or less; two-thirds have been on the rolls less than three years. Fewer than one in five has received welfare for five years or more. About 65 percent of welfare cases at any given time are on for the first time; about one-third are repeaters.

Kitchen virtuoso: violinist Charles Treger slices bananas for his family's favorite dessert of fritters with rum sauce.

Fiddler's Fritters

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Since 1962 when he became the first American to win Poland's International Wieniawski Competition, Charles Treger has been heralded as a top concert violinist. He began music lessons in first grade, dropped out of high school to play in the Detroit Symphony and later joined the Navy Band for a four-year stint as violin soloist.

Nowadays, when not on tour with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center (appearing at the Kennedy Center Friday), gourmet cook Charles Treger is likely to be found fiddling around the kitchen. The 37-year-old musician finds an appreciative audience in wife Deborah, a former singer with the Robert Shaw Chorale, and daughters Lisa, 12, and Robin, 15.

A favorite recipe in the Treger repertoire is banana rum fritters, as they were made by Napoleon's chef during the exile on St. Helena. It's an elegant dessert certain to be a novel treat when served at your next special-occasion meal.

Banana Rum Fritters

- | | |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 6 firm bananas | 2 tablespoons cornstarch |
| 1/2 cup rum | 2 tablespoons flour |
| 1/2 cup orange juice | 1/4 cup butter or margarine |
| 3 egg whites, slightly beaten | 1/4 cup sugar |

Peel bananas; cut in half lengthwise and then in half again. Place in shallow dish. Pour rum and orange juice over bananas. Let stand for 1/2 hour. In small bowl mix egg whites, cornstarch and flour. Heat butter in large skillet. Dip bananas into batter; arrange in skillet. Brown on all sides. Remove to serving platter. Pour rum marinade into skillet; add sugar; stir over high heat until sugar dissolves. Pour over bananas. Makes six servings.

TESTED IN PARADE'S KITCHEN

What Else Is Cooking

The Egg and you

How long will an egg stay fresh? For several weeks if kept at temperatures of 45-55 degrees. Put them in the refrigerator as soon as you can after buying them. At room temperature, eggs will lose more quality in one day than in one week in the refrigerator.

Store eggs in the carton in which they were purchased. The cover prevents loss of carbon dioxide and moisture and holds the eggs large end up, which helps keep the yolks centered.

Leftover egg whites or yolks can be stored in covered containers in the refrigerator for a week to 10 days. Unbroken yolks can be hard-cooked (by dropping gently into simmering water) and stored, covered, for 4 to 5 days to be used for garnish or in sandwiches, salads and soups.

Although eggs will keep for longer periods, homemakers will probably be most satisfied with buying only one week's supply at a time.

Baking tips

- Freeze pastry crusts unbaked. They will be more tender and flaky than those frozen after baking.
- Cakes made with 7-minute frostings or other cooked frostings should not be frozen. This type of frosting tends to break down and become sticky when frozen.

Peanut boom

Peanuts, anyone? This year's crop in the U.S. is at an all-time high—1,643,000 tons, topping last year's record crop by about 10 percent.

Food facts

"The U.S. hamburger, with or without relish, onion, mustard or catsup, has become so popular that while once it was made from scraps of beef, or from less desirable cuts, now whole carcasses are often butchered solely to keep up with the demand for hamburger. The hamburger is sometimes called a "Wimpy" after a character in the cartoon strip "Popeye"; the protagonist of the strip wolfed down spinach, and is credited by spinach growers with boosting consumption of that vegetable; his sidekick Wimpy put away hamburger after hamburger, as do millions of real-life Americans. One, Philip Yazdick, ate 77 at one sitting (in Chicago, in 1955)."—From The Food Book by James Trager (Avon, $3.95).

Syrup as sauce

Save extra syrup from canned fruits. Use it to baste broiled chicken or ham slices. Mixing flavors may add subtle charms. For each cup of syrup add 2 teaspoons cornstarch, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon and 1/8 teaspoon powdered cloves.

Perfecting your roast

Plan to take the roast out of the oven 15 minutes before it goes to the table. This "firms" the meat and makes carving easier. In the time, you can also make pan gravy.

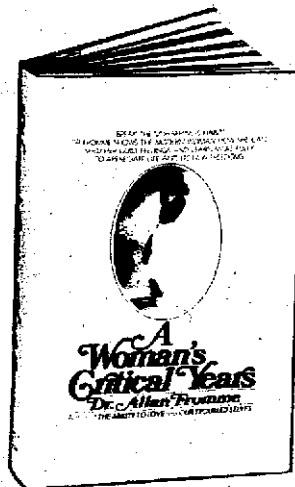

The comfortable kitchen

Can you work comfortably in your kitchen? If work surfaces are too high, arms and shoulders may ache. If a counter is too low a backache may result. The Cooperative Extension at Cornell University recommends the following heights:

Counters: For most activities, surface should be three inches below the elbow. For motions that require force (kneading, carving meat, etc.) six to seven inches.

Range Tops: Three inches below the elbow, or if you often work with long-handled utensils, as much as six or seven inches.

Sinks: The rim should be two or three inches below your elbow.

Now you can break the unhappiness habit—whether you're single and living with your boyfriend... a disillusioned housewife... or a widow returning to work after years of child-raising

Dr. Allan Fromme, nationally-renowned psychotherapist and best-selling author of The Ability to Love, Sex and Marriage and Our Troubled Selves, speaks directly to the women of today: the single girl, struggling to reconcile the New Morality with those things her mother never told her... the young bride, overwhelmed by the efforts to be wife / mistress / hostess / maid... the harried mother, trying to free her husband from years of role-playing... the new divorcee, trying to make it in a "man's world" while she cares for the kids and looks for a new lover... the older woman, excluded from her husband's executive whirl... the widow, who'd rather sit home and complain than find her own happiness.

Their ages and life-styles are different. But the problem is the same. All are victims of our alienated era—angry, depressed, out of touch with their feelings, unable to break the unhappiness barrier that separates them from true self-fulfillment.

Now, at last, there is someone to help. No longer need you be paralyzed by the fears and anxieties that rob your life of its physical and emotional riches.

In clear non-technical terms, Dr. Fromme tells:

- why you must say what you feel—in order to remain in touch with your emotions...
- why, by the time you're 21 and self-supporting, you should live away from your parents—no matter how well you get along with them!
- why your self-image is your most important possession and how to improve it...
- how your inhibitions prevent you from following your own feelings—rather than your parents'...
- why you should not be afraid to change—your hair, your husband, your life-style...
- why many women submerge themselves in motherhood and reject their husbands...
- why some single girls reject every new date as the wrong "Mr. Right"...
- why it is better to marry poorly than not to marry at all...
- why women stay with men they loathe...

A WOMAN'S CRITICAL YEARS is a call for every woman to destroy the fear that threatens to bury her alive in the prime of life, and to satisfy her deepest emotions. It is an illuminating and yet practical approach to greater self-fulfillment and happiness.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Beware of New Drugs!

Latest drug to hit the youth sector is a "downer" technically called, methaqualone. Its street name is "sopor" or "quaalude," originally thought to be non-habit forming. But now authorities are not sure.

Medically, methaqualone is a non-barbiturate hypnotic, prescribed to induce sleep. It is legal when sold with a prescription. In excess, it acts like alcohol, causing a loss of motivation and motor coordination.

In combination with alcohol, it frequently causes the user to black out. According to Judie M. La Forme, director of the University of Wisconsin's Drug Information Center, "The drug's popularity has caught the health profession off guard. Hospital emergency rooms didn't even have a test to detect an overdose of methaqualone. All they picked up was the alcohol. They just weren't aware until now that kids were taking it."

"High school kids," she continues, "who were on something to help them sleep were even asking their doctors to prescribe 'sopors,' and many did. But now doctors are catching on. In other areas we've seen that when grass gets scarce, people turn to other drugs."

While drug use on most college campuses has stabilized, drug authorities believe that in the high schools it is still on the rise. Marijuana, the amphetamines and LSD—in that order—are the most widely used drugs among high school students. With 'sopors' now coming up fast.

Just how, where and why students begin to hear of and adopt new drugs is difficult to explain. One explanation is that the American society is possibly the most drug-oriented one on earth. Supposedly we have a pill to cure or counteract every ill, worry or care in existence.

SHE WRITES ON SEX: CAMPUS COLUMNIST LANA STARNES, 22, OF CHARLOTTE, N.C.

Elephants and Butterflies

Lana Starnes is the epitome of Southern womanhood—lovely, demure, soft-spoken.

To look at this sweet, attractive, 22-year-old "nice girl," no one would think that she might be the author of a question-and-answer column on sex for college students. But she is. Her column, entitled "Elephants and Butterflies," appears in many North Carolina campus publications.

Lovely Lana knew comparatively little about sex when she entered the University of North Carolina in 1969.

"Like most of the girls in my dorm," she says, "I was very naive. Especially when it came to sex. Fortunately for all of us, we were lectured to by Dr. Takey Crist who used to practice gynecology at North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

He was simply fascinating and so much at ease. We girls asked him all sorts of questions and he answered matter-of-factly without embarrassing any of us."

Dr. Crist's lecture became a turning point for Lana Starnes. She never forgot it. When subsequently she became a reporter for "The Daily Tar Heel," she interviewed Dr. Crist on the subject of a sex information booklet being distributed to UNC students. Soon Lana and Dr. Crist decided to collaborate on a sex question-and-answer column.

"We didn't think it would go over big," Lana recalls. "But Tom Gooding, editor of the 'Tar Heel,' was all for it, so we gave it a try."

"At first we were attacked on the contention that providing sex information, particularly on birth control, would lead to promiscuity. But our purpose was exactly the opposite, to curb promiscuity by providing the readers with knowledge and information on attitudes, behavior patterns, the meaning of human sexuality.

"It seemed to Dr. Crist that the need for such a column was clear. He was seeing so many girls at the hospital who'd had illegal abortions, who'd contracted venereal disease, who were abysmally ignorant of their own bodies.

"We began the 'Elephants and Butterflies' column in December, 1970, and, as Dr. Crist predicted, we soon became the target of attacks by the faculty, the administration, the public. One dean even said to me, 'I've heard all the dirty words there are, but I never expected to see them printed in the student newspaper.' That's the kind of flak we took. Gradually it abated, however, and the column came to be accepted as a regular feature. People can get awful uptight about sex."

Even though Lana Starnes has graduated from the University of North Carolina and now works for the Hartford Insurance Company in Raleigh, she still writes her column.

"I remain a conservative," she says, "but I've learned that human sexuality is one subject young people want most to learn about, and there's nothing wrong in supplying them with authoritative information. That's what education is all about."

In many ways, Lana Starnes represents the new breed of Southern woman. She has purpose, direction, and dedication.

Because this eminent doctor discovered how to utilize your body's FMH — the fat mobilizing hormone by experimenting on himself

You can now command your body to Melt Away Fat

AND LOSE AS MUCH AS YOU WANT WHILE YOU ENJOY EATING AS MUCH AS YOU WANT!

The Famous Superdiet — Dr. Atkins' Diet Revolution reveals in full the recently discovered weight loss secret.

You don't need pills — you don't count calories — you don't even need willpower (because you're never hungry)!

Yet you can lose 10-50-100 pounds or more (6 to 8 the first week!) and keep it off for the rest of your life!

It's truly a Diet Revolution!

For over 50 years we've all been brainwashed into thinking that the only way to lose weight was to cut calories. "It's a hoax!" says Dr. Robert C. Atkins. We all know some lucky person who can "eat like a horse" and never gain a pound — what has she or he got that you haven't got?

Now we know!

It's FMH (the Fat Mobilizing Hormone).

This is a substance that signals your body to start "living off its own fat." It was isolated in pure form only a dozen years ago, and it was just a medical curiosity until Dr. Atkins discovered how to make his body — your body — anybody's body — produce FMH on command!

Listen to his story:

"Only 10 years out of medical school I was already a fat man. 40 pounds overweight, with 3 chins! Yet I have no willpower — even the idea of hunger scares me. I knew I could not follow a low-calorie diet for even a single day." He read about FMH, and by using his own body as a laboratory, discovered that he could command it to make this miracle hormone whenever he wished. The FMH switched his body engine over to a different "fuel" — it started to burn fat. He continued to eat all he wanted — he never felt hungry, and at the end of six weeks, he had lost 28 pounds! And the diet revolution was born.

Why the Diet Revolution works.

Dr. Atkins found a simple test that would tell him when his body engine was burning fat. And 65 employees at AT&T agreed to try it. Every single one lost as much weight as he wanted — yet not a single one was hungry! Then the news got out — and thousands, many of whom were 50-100 pounds overweight, flocked to Dr. Atkins' office for treatment.

Is it any wonder celebrities like Roberta Peters, Buddy Hackett and David Susskind have told the world about the miracles this diet works? Is it any wonder his diet has made news in magazines like Vogue, Town & Country, Cosmopolitan, and Woman's Day?

Read these incredible true stories!

From size 18 to size 8! Beatrice G had been taking diet pills since she was a fat 9-year old! Yet when she came to Dr. Atkins, she still weighed 166 pounds and wore size 18! Now she's size 8 and still losing! "The best part is I know I'll never have to go hungry again!" she says.

Loses 85 pounds in 17 weeks. Herb W weighed 367 pounds at the age of 32. He had tried diet pills and

WHICH OF THESE DIETING MISTAKES DO YOU MAKE?

1. Do you have nothing for breakfast but high protein cereal with skim milk? "WRONG," says Dr. Atkins. "Have two fried eggs and all the bacon you want!"
2. Do you try to get by for lunch with nothing but a piece of lean ground beef with a little ketchup on it? "WRONG," says Dr. Atkins. "Have two cheeseburgers instead."
3. Do you skip lunch entirely and nibble a tiny box of raisins? "WRONG," says Dr. Atkins. "Have some chicken Kiev dripping with melted butter!"
4. When you eat out, do you go off your diet? "No need to," says Dr. Atkins, and tells you how to enjoy Chinese food, French food, Italian food right from the menu.

started and quit Weightwatchers several times. After four months of Dr. Atkins' diet, he had lost 85 pounds — yet he was never hungry. I'm losing, but I'm not on a diet. I'm eating up a storm," he says happily. "It's fantastic!"

Why Dr. Atkins' diet will work for you.

1. Unlike any other diet — you control your own body chemistry to burn off unwanted fat and keep it off. (You're different from everybody else on earth, so Dr. Atkins' simple test, which you make every day, lets you know it's working, and lets you regulate your weight precisely.)
2. Unlike other methods — there are no pills to take, no calories to count, no strenuous exercises, and not a single hunger pang to suffer through! (You'll probably eat better than you ever have — and feel better too — because you can lose while enjoying such luxuries as berries with whipped cream, bacon, cheeseburgers, butter, fried foods, all kinds of meats, poultry and seafood — even asparagus with real hollandaise sauce!)

2. You'll feel better ... perhaps better than ever before!
3. You will lose weight the first week, and continue to lose until you reach the weight you want to be! Most

After completing his medical education at the University of Michigan and Cornell Medical School, Dr. Atkins interned at Strong Memorial Hospital, and served his residency at Columbia University Hospitals, and St. Luke's Hospital. Specializing in cardiology, he knew that obesity is one of the primary reasons for heart trouble.

My Favorite Jokes

by Larry Storch

EDITOR'S NOTE: Though his career has taken him to Broadway, into movies and television, as well as nightclubs, Larry Storch describes himself first and foremost as a dialectician. His uncanny mimicry lends flavor to his stories about a multitude of nationalities.

Storch's movies include Captain Newman, M.D., Bus Riley's Back in Town, That Funny Feeling. On TV he was Corporal Agarn in the long-running F-Troop series, and has appeared on Gomer Pyle, The Name of the Game, and Love, American Style. Here are some of his favorite stories:

An actor had trouble remembering his lines, and the stage manager said to him, "When you have to say 'I, the father of five sons,' why don't you just hold up your fingers so you'll remember the count?" The scene came around, the actor did as he'd been told, then said, "How dare you talk to me like that, I, the father of five fingers."

Two caterpillars looked up and saw a butterfly. And one said to the other, "They'll never get me up in one of those things."

An octopus was proposing to another octopus and he said, "Gee, Ethel, I've loved you ever since you were a squid, and I want to marry you; and I've got a ring for your finger. May I put it on?" "Yes," she said, "but not that one, not that one, not that one, not that one, that one."

A poodle and a boxer were in the same kennel and the poodle turned to the boxer and said, "Hello there, big boy. My name is Fifi; I'm a French poodle; what is your name?" And the boxer said, "Growl, growl, I'm not sure, but I think it's Down Boy."

A fellow bought a television set on time. He wasn't able to keep up with the payments fast enough to suit the company. And one day he heard a knock on the door, opened it, and a man explained: "I'm from the company where you got your TV set. Now either you give us some money, or we take the set back." And the fellow said, "I want to tell you something: how I pay my bills. At the end of every month I take all the bills that I owe, and I put them in one big fishbowl. Then I blindfold myself, I put my hand in the fishbowl and I pick out a bill. And, the one that I pick out is the bill that I'm going to pay that month. Now if you keep bothering me and talking to me the way you're doing, I'm not even going to put your bill in the fishbowl!"

Ivan was applying for a job as a garbage man in a little town outside Moscow, and the political commissar who was questioning him said, "Tell me, Ivan, what do you think of religion?" And Ivan said, "I agree with Lenin that religion is a stumbling block, an opiate of the masses, and has no place in the forward look of Russia." "How do you feel about the churches and synagogues which house religion?" "The same as I feel about religion; another stumbling block to the progress of Russia." The commissar said, "Very good, Ivan, we'll think about you, we'll call you in a day or two." He walked out of the commissar's office into the street, and his friend said, "Tell me, Ivan, did you get the job?" And Ivan said, "I don't know, but with God's help, I will."

I remember a Scotsman who made a crossing to the U.S. by boat, and there were nothing but complaints from him. He complained from morning till night about the food, the service, the tips, the weather. There was nothing in the trip that pleased him. As he was coming down the gangplank in America, he looked over the side of the ship and saw a diver who'd been working on some planks down below. And he said, "Ah, you're a smart one. You had the right idea, lad. If I'd known it was going to be such a bad trip I'd have walked over, too."

The crime situation is terrible. A gunman rushed out of a movie one day, stuck his gun into the cashier's cage and said, "I didn't like the movie. Give me everybody's money back."

Treasury official Edward L. Morgan (right) and Kenneth S. Giannoules, of Interpol worldwide police organization, seek public help in recovery of stolen art treasures.

Help Find These Stolen Treasures: Rogues Gallery of Art

by Herbert Kupferberg

WASHINGTON, D.C. International art thieves have made off with so many great paintings in recent years that Interpol, the world police organization, has asked the public to help in recovering some of the booty.

Posters of the 12 current "most wanted" stolen works of art have been issued at Interpol's Washington and Paris headquarters. Further, "rogues galleries" of art will be made public every six months in an effort to regain treasures taken from leading museums and galleries.

Not with murderers

For the moment, at least, the posters won't be put up in post offices along with the FBI's "most wanted" bank robbers and similar criminals. Interpol prefers to concentrate first on circulating them among art dealers' organizations, art publications, museums, and other interested parties. In England, the missing pictures have been shown on television, and similar displays are being considered here.

"We're studying ways to get the general public further involved," says Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward L. Morgan, the Treasury's "top cop" and U.S. representative to Interpol. "We feel that the theft of art represents more than a crime per se. It's really the theft of a country's heritage. We hope members of the public will see these posters and pictures and become aware of the problem. Who knows where somebody may stumble on one of the paintings?"

Kenneth S. Giannoules, chief of Interpol's National Central Bureau in Washington, says that the recovery rate for stolen art is "negligible."

"In 1971, a typical year, we were notified of 243 stolen oil paintings, 150 watercolors, and 250 other works of art," says Giannoules. "Very few of them have been recovered. Stolen art just vanishes."

Unlike jewelry, Giannoules points out, art cannot be cut up or otherwise disguised for easy disposal on the market place. "We don't know where the art traffic pattern is heading, or where the art goes," he says.

Among the theories that have been suggested is that art thieves keep paintings hidden for years in the hope of a subsequent sale to a museum or gallery after the furor has died down. Another possibility cited by experts in the field is that the ultimate recipients may be private collectors who keep the stolen art hidden from everybody's eyes except their own.

"Some collectors are nuts, anyhow," says one New York art dealer. "They could easily get their kicks just by gloat-ing over a stolen picture up in the attic."

'Into millions'

Interpol officials and art experts were unwilling to put cash valuations on any of the pictures in the new 12 most wanted list, but all agreed the total value would run "well into the mil-lions."

Following are the 12 paintings and sculptures, not necessarily in order of importance, that adorn the current Interpol poster. Anyone with any infor-mation as to any art object on the list is asked to contact Interpol's National Central Bureau, Treasury Department, Washington, D.C. 20220:

1. Portrait of Sir Robert Fletcher by Thomas Gainsborough. Stolen Sept. 9, 1972, from the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

2. Landscape with Buildings and Wagon by Jan Brueghel. Stolen Sept. 9, 1972, from the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

3. Head of a Young Man by Peter Paul Rubens. Stolen Sept. 9, 1972, from the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

4. St. Mark's Square in Venice by Francesco Guardi. Stolen Oct. 17, 1970, from a private owner in Palermo, Italy.

5. The Holy Family by Giovanni Antonio Bazzi. Stolen Dec. 23, 1970, from the Municipal Museum of Montepul-ciano, Italy.

6. Four 18th-century portraits. Stolen March 18, 1972, from the Mu-seum of the Chateau de Berthoud, Berne, Switzerland.

7. The Flight Into Egypt by Rem-brandt van Rijn. Stolen Dec. 22, 1971, from the Municipal Museum of Tours, France.

8. Saint Cecilia by Peter Paul Rubens. Stolen Feb. 10, 1972, from Museum of Fine Arts, Duesseldorf, Germany.

9. Portrait of a Young Woman by Frans Hals. Stolen Feb. 10, 1972, from Museum of Fine Arts, Duesseldorf, Germany.

10, 11, 12. Three figures of Buddha. Stolen Aug. 22, 1961, from the Archeo-logical Museum of Nalanda, India.

Of these art works, one, the Rem-brandt Flight Into Egypt (No. 7), was recovered just as the list was being pre-pared, and has been so marked on the poster. However, Interpol was not in-volved in its return. The picture had been spirited from France into Ger-many, where it was discovered in West Berlin. German police arrested the thief; however, few details of the case have been divulged.

Even though it's still awaiting the first fruits of its campaign against art thieves, Interpol has already had several successes using similar techniques in other fields. Last year the organization was asked to hunt for 13 valuable antique jewelry pieces sent by the German town of Pforzheim for showing at an exhibition in the Netherlands. Interpol sent pictures and a description to a national jewelers' publication, which printed them. On Dec. 26 a San Francisco art gallery owner saw the photos and reported that all 13 pieces had been sold to him for $3500. They were promptly returned to Pforzheim.

Stolen Koran

The Interpol Washington Office was also enlisted in the search for a priceless copy of the Koran stolen from the National Museum of Tehran, Iran. A U.S. Customs official reported that such a book had been brought into the country by an Iranian citizen, and it was promptly traced to a New York art gallery where it was waiting to be auctioned off. Today it's back in Tehran.

Interpol itself has no power to make arrests. It's an international police liaison organization with 114 member nations. Member countries keep in touch by an international police radio network, and when a criminal is spotted, local police are asked to make the arrest. In the U.S. the Interpol office is under jurisdiction of the Treasury because of that department's concern with counterfeiting, narcotics and smuggling. In 1971 more than 800 arrests, many in the narcotics area, were made as a result of Interpol information. "Our hit rate on most-wanted notices of people is around 70 percent," says Giannoulis, who was a U.S. Secret Service operative before moving into the Interpol bureau here four years ago.

Some rewards

The organization's international headquarters is in St.-Cloud, a Paris suburb, where the 12-most-wanted art lists are compiled by a panel of experts. Interpol itself offers no reward for the recovery of paintings, but points out that museums and other owners often put up their own rewards.

Next October Interpol will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its founding at a general assembly in Vienna. Treasury official Edward Morgan says he will present to the meeting an assessment of how the poster campaign is working in the U.S., and discuss the possibility of extending it further. Meanwhile, he wouldn't mind it a bit if he finds a few recovered paintings hanging on the walls of the assembly hall—just for decoration.

EB WON'T BE HOME UNTIL LATE

I SUPPOSE HE'S OUT PLAYING POKER AGAIN?

NO, DIDN'T I TELL YOU? HE'S TURNED OVER A NEW LEAF AND JOINED A MEN'S LITERARY SOCIETY!

ONCE A WEEK THEY MEET AT ONE ANOTHER'S HOUSE TO DISCUSS BOOKS

HELLO, DEAR!! WHICH BOOK DID YOU DISCUSS TONIGHT?

WHEN AN OLD BEAVER DAM BREAKS AND THE POND DRAINS AWAY...

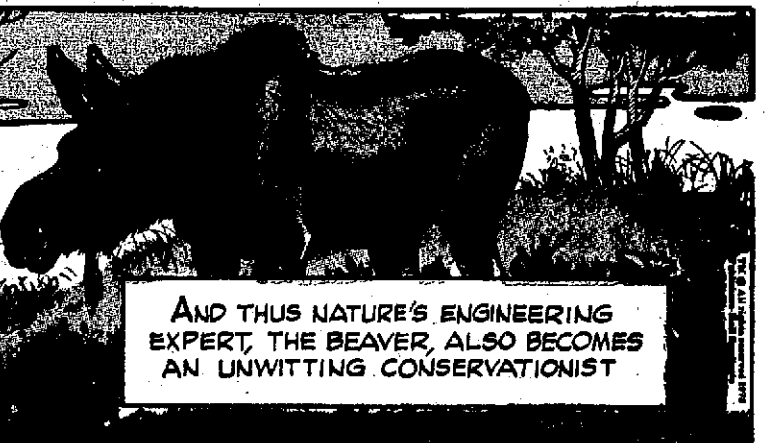

THE SILT-RICH EXPOSED AREA SOON BECOMES A GREEN MEADOW

NUTRIENTS TRAPPED BY THE DAM PRODUCE FERTILE CONDITIONS FOR SPROUTING SEEDS...

THE RESULTING LUSH GROWTH OF TREES, SHRUBS, AND GRASSES PROVIDES BOUNTIFUL FOOD FOR WILDLIFE OF MANY KINDS

AND THUS NATURE'S ENGINEERING EXPERT, THE BEAVER, ALSO BECOMES AN UNWITTING CONSERVATIONIST

OW, THIS USHERING IS ROUGH WITH A STONE IN YOUR SHOE!

SEND JILL OVER. I NEED A SWITCH FOR A MINUTE!

WATCH FOR CRASHERS, KIDS?

I WANT TO STEP OUT TO MY CAR. DO I NEED A TICKET STUB?

NO, I'LL REMEMBER YOU!

OKAY, GO FIX YOUR SHOE, JAN. ...ANYTHING SPECIAL GOING ON?

EEE, THAT IS PRETTY SPECIAL!

HMM, THAT GUY LOOKS LIKE A CRASHER!

ER, DO YOU HAVE A TICKET?

HUH? I JUST WENT OUT! DON'T YOU REMEMBER ME?

NO! I'M SORRY, YOU'LL HAVE TO BUY A TICKET!

BROTHER!

OKAY, JILL, I'LL TAKE OVER AGAIN!

HERE, I BOUGHT THE TICKET!!!! NOW CAN I GET BACK IN?

OH, YOU DIDN'T NEED TO DO THAT. I SAID I'D REMEMBER YOU!

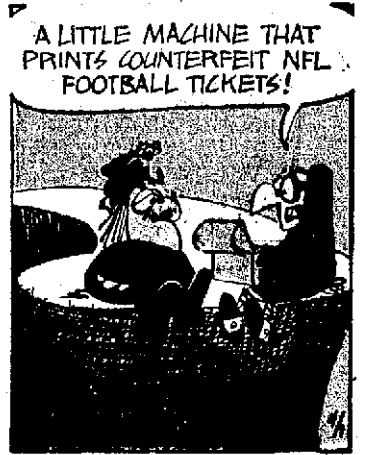

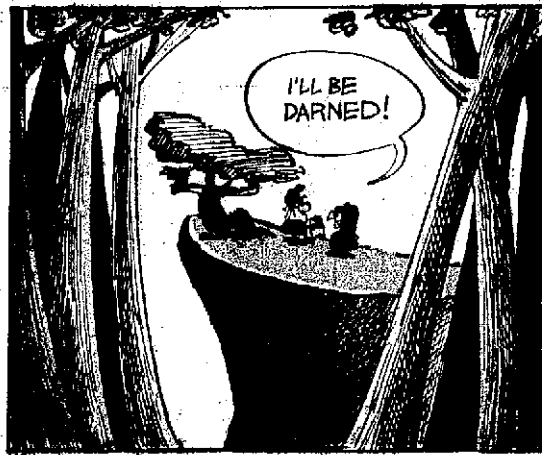

PETER, STOP MUMBLING! I CAN'T HEAR THE PLAY!

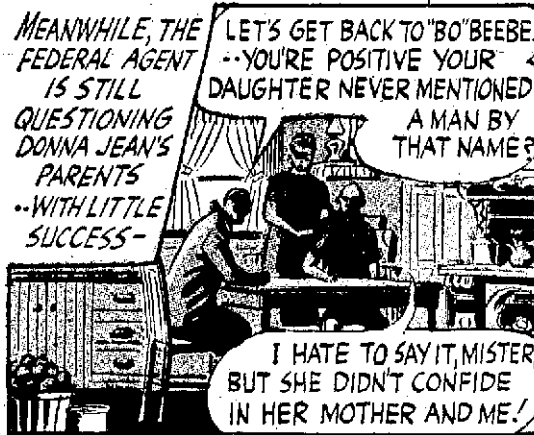

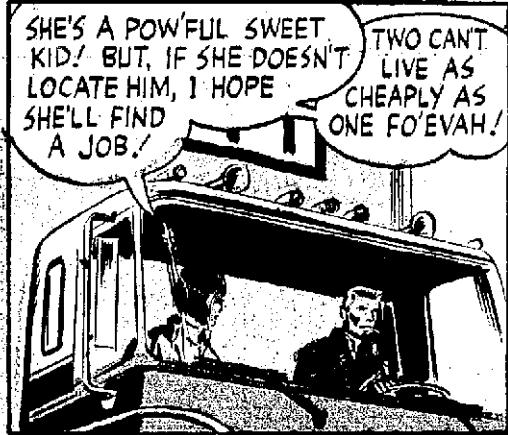

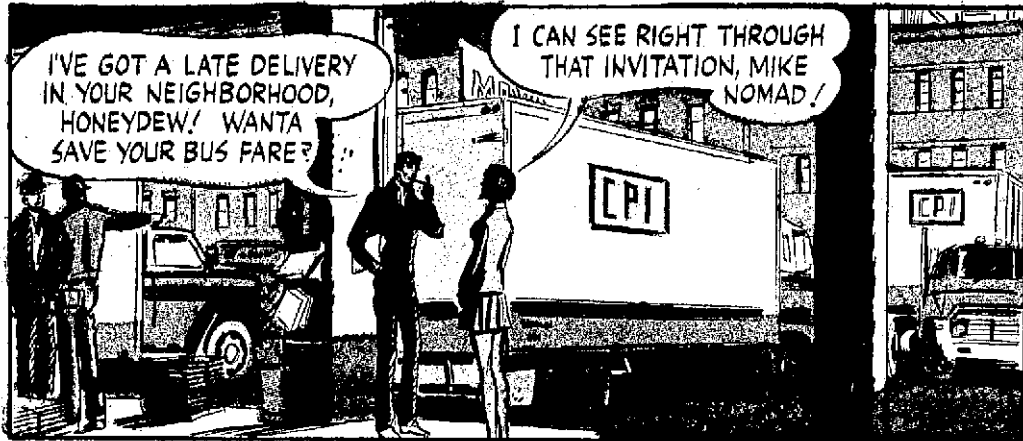

IT'S NOTHING COMPARED TO THE SWINDLE ACT BACK THERE!

I'LL REMEMBER YOU! SHE SAYS! NEVER SAW YOU BEFORE! SHE SAYS! I REMEMBER YOU! SHE SAYS.....
